Battleground Extends Westward Across Hun River Into Mountain Ridges-Center and Right of Japanese Army Involved-Russians Defeated With Great Loss at Chenchiepao-General Engagement on.

N EW YORK, Jan. 28.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A special to The Press from Liao Yang says a great battle, which threatens to involve the center and right of the Japanese army, is under way on both sides of the Sha River, west of the railroad. The battleground extends through the valley of the Sha west to the Hun River and across that stream into the mountain ridges at Kwengdu.

Their artillery had been brought up during the night through Chenchiepao Valley and was well placed for field service, when hostili-ties were opened against the Japanese position at Heikoutai and Chengtsu. Friday afternoon the right of the Russian center, which for two months had rested north of Putlioff Mountain, began a forward movement in a snow-of its object, and the assaulting army, in all probability, will be cut off should the center of Gen., Oku's left break through the Russian position at Heikoutal.

Two divisions of the Japanese army, in command of Lieut.-Gen. Tachimi, moved up the Mandarin Road and the valley to the west of it, before dawn this morning, the object being to split the Russian right wing and throw it on two sides of the Hun River. This ob-ject, undoubtedly, was attained in part, as reports from Tachimi's forces show that the Russians were defeated with great loss at Chenchlepao GENERAL ENGAGEMENT.

A general engagement along the en-tire front at this point was progressing 'this afternoon, the Japanese having swung a considerable division of their army northwest across the Sha.

To the east of the two armies that are fighting, another engagement is going on between the center armies, commanded. respectively, by Gena. Sakarhoff and Nodau. The indications so far are that this part of battle has not gone far from the artillery duel, the middle Sha River dividing the infantry forces, except where the Japanese are still intrenched on the easterly that the middle Sha River dividing the infantry forces, except where the Japanese are still intrenched on the easterly that the stills, protected by a of forcing them out of their winter quarters, while others look upon it as being only a more or less serious oper-ation undertaken upon orders from St. Petersburg to draw the attention of the people anew to the theater of

All dispatches from Russian correspondents at the front foreshadow a big and bloody battle of a decisive character. They tell of arrangements for the receipt of an immense number of wounded not only at Mukden, but as far back as Harbin, and speak of a general engagement in which almost a million men and 2500 guns were to be involved and say that the importance of the engagement will overshadow the of the engagement will overshadow the battles of Shakhe River and Liao

The battle commenced on the right flank on Gen. Kouropatkin's initiative.

The Japanese were driven back five miles from their advanced positions, defended by the reserve brigades. The fighting extended January 26 to the center. The Japanese endeavored to take: Lone Tree Hill and other positions, but were driven back with heavy

"The truth is, the French public, saturated with Russian securities to a point of bursting, and utterly out of sympathy with Russia's motive in the war, is heartily sick of France's position, and will take the first opportunity of releasing themselves from the alliance. Russia is so heavily indebted to France that depreciation of the former's securities means an enormous loss to the saving class of the republic. MUKDEN, Jan. 25, via Tien-Tsin—
The most important cannonade since the first battle on the Shakhe River was maintained all yesterday, in a continuous snowstorm, against the Jupanese left, which Field Marshal Cyama has been reinforcing with iroops from Port Arthur since Gen.
Mistchenko's raid. The attack was centered about seven miles west of Shakhe Station, and it resulted in the Japanese withfarawal from Holantai and Funchuang-Chiatiu, which the Russians have occupied.

The cannonading and snowstorm continues undiminished today. It is considerably colder.

The cannonading indicates that an extended contest is progressing. The driving wind and snow favors the Russians, thus offsetting the advantage the Japanese had last October when the sun shone in the Russian's eyes. Today's reports indicate that the Japanese are continuing to fall back, while the Russian cavalry have,
it is understood, advanced their lines

The Japanese yesterday flew a large kite into the Russian lines. The kite was covered with photographs showing the treatment of Russian prisoners in Japan. It was evidently intended to attract the Russian soldiers.

On January 27 there was a heavy cannonade on the right flank. It subsided entirely shortly after noon and citible now continues throughout quiet now continues throughout the center and right,

"Mr. Hay's proposal is decidedly interesting," said the Baron, "it is only another evidence of the sincere desire of the American State Department to reach some acceptable solution of the vexed question of the preservation of the territorial integrity of China. For my part, however, I am unable to see how it could be effectual under the circumstances. If a conference should decide that all countries should sign a tresty guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China, it is a question if we would be any better off. Treaties have been broken before without the signatories enforcing them by a resort to arms.

Out of consideration for those who favor a quiet Sunday 'The Trail' amusements will be suppressed on the first day of the week. What promised to be a serious strike of workmen at the Lewis and Clark fair grounds was forestalled by the prompt action of a government inspector today. This morning, when 350 men employed on the government building appeared on the grounds leaders announced that they would not complete the work unless their debands for better pay and shorter hours were granted. The leaders demanded $3.50 a day for eight hours' work. The foreman in charge refused the demands and it looked as if there would be serious trouble, when a government inspector commanded the foreman to grant the demands of the men, which he held were not unreasonable, or he (the inspector) would put the men at work himself. In the face of this order, the foreman receded from his position and the men went to work. CALIFORNIA.

SPREAD OF FLAMES.

As soon as the firemen discovered the drygoods house could not be saved, they diverted their attention to other buildings. Despite their efforts, however, the flames continued to spread. They finally site their way into the building occupied by the Porter, Riordan, Hoobler Company, where was stored a large stock of chemists' materials. There were a number of explosions which tended to reinforce the fury of the flames. The Carpenter paper building was next threatened, and firemen at once directed their attention to the structure, starting a number of streams to playing on the roof and other parts of the building.

The fire started at 10:10 tonight in the fruit commission house of J. N. Snyder, at Eleveath and Howard streets, and although a general slarm brought the entire fire department to the scene, the flames had gathered such headway before the firemen arrived that they could not be checked. They spread rapidly to adjoining business places in the same building, and by 10:30 o'clock had entirely destroyed a solid haif block of five story buildings between Harney and Howard streets and Eleventh street and the alley in the 'rear. At that hour the firemen directed their efforts to prevent the spread of the flames to the inmense wholesale paper house of Carpenter & Co., to the main building, with former just across the alley from the burning structure, and the latter directly across Howard street.

Despite the fact that the entire force was at work on the buildings, with the entire equipment of the clift fire department throwing half a hundred streams on the interior of the building, the flames continued to spread for several hours. They are their way into the building occupied by Porter, Riordan & Hoohler, manufacturing chemists, shortly before 2 o'clock and a series of explosions followed, causing the flames to spread with renewel vigor.

The fiames early threatened the five-story building occupied by the R. P. Kirkendaling occupied to the upper stories of the Kirkendaling and down the elevator shafts, and stairways. This structure was an entire loss, together, with the stock of the Kirkendali Company.

To the west of this building was the Martin-Cott Hat Company, whole-salers, whose stock was almost entirely destroyed. The flames then spread to the Porter, Riordan, Hoobler Company, destroying the stock and building and by 2 o'clock the building occupied by the Carpenter Paper Company, covering a quarter of a block at Twelfth street was seriously threatened.

Benator Perkins has suggested in times past that the House delegation be called into patronage affairs, but whenever any such conference has been proposed, the fur commenced to fly. If Mr. Fiint and Senator Perkins call members of the House into fiteir patronage conferences, California might as well make up her mind to warry along without any new Federal officers for some time.

If Mr. Fiint has interfered against the reappointment of Woodworth before becoming a Senator, his action will not embarrass Senator Bard to any extent, although Woodworth is Bard's friend and Mr. Bard will do what he can to have him reappointed. Rather will Mr. Flint's action sharpen the mives for a conflict that most people in Washington are willing to bet will see the Washington are willing to be will see the Washington are willing to be twill the United States Senate very long.

Mr. Cowan urged that a commission events which were treated with the usual levity and burlesque.

There were eighteen speecher by as many Senators, including Senator Hoar's colleague, Mr. Lodge, and his successor, Mr. Crane. After the con-clusion of the memorial services the Senate adjourned out of respect to the dead Senator's memory.

Before the memorial services were entered upon the Senate passed a resolution, presented by Mr. Proctor, making inquiry of the Secretary of War why the fresh rest used by American why the fresh meat used by American troops in the Philippines was not pur-chased in the United States.

In opening the memorial services, Mr. Lodge presented the usual resolution of notification to the House.

Sixteen addresses were made, largely by the older Senators, abounding in reminisences with high encomiums. Mr. Allison and Mr. Cockrell, as the two oldest members from either side of the chamber, followed Mr. Lodge, in the order named, and were in turn succeeded by Mr. Platt of Connecticut, who stood next to Mr. Hoar on the Committee on Judiciary. Several Senators on both sides of the chamber referred to Senator Hoar's divergence from his party on the Philippine question, and all instanced his attitude on that subject as characteristic of him and indicative of his courage and honesty.

SECRETARY TAFT WANTS FREE TRADE WITH ISLANDS.

Says American Tobacca Growers and Sugar Producers Have no Cause for Alarm—Independence of the Archipelago Declared to be Yet a Long Way Off.

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS-A.M.) WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. Secretary settled at the last election. The Democratic members of the committee might not agree with him on this point.

Mr. Williams of Missippi, the minority floor leader, asked the Secretary if it was not the Republican policy to give the islands ultimate independence. The Secretary affirmed this, stating that such would be the case when the people of the islands were capable of self-government.

"Self-government as the American understands it," asked Mr. Williams.

"I doubt if they ever reach the self-governing capacity of the Americans," the Secretary replied.

"Well," asserted Mr. Williams, "there is not so horrible much difference between you and the Democrats. You believe in granting self-government when the people are ready, and we believe in fixing a date for their independence."

Secretary Taft: Yes, that is practi-Taft made an argument today before the House Committee on Ways and Means in favor-of the Curits bill, re-ducing the duty on sugar and tobacco from the Philippines. He contended that, as the Philippines belong to the United States, thereby typicing a the United States, thereby imposing a sa-cred trust upon this government, it is our duty to establish and maintain the best possible conditions there. "Certainly," he said, "the present status of the islands, so far as our re-status of the islands, so far as our re-lations to them are concerned, will re-main the same throughout the next generation, and probably longer."

With this in view, he maintained, it would be as just to establish a tariff between the States of Ohio and Penn-sylvania as between the United States asid the Philippines. Ultimate free' trade would have to come in the end between the islands and the United States. Secretary Taft asserted warms. between the islands and the United States. Secretary Taft asserted warm-ly that Congress had already enacted a measure which was eminently unfair

"You have declared that in 1996 American bottoms shall carry everything that is shipped between the United States and the Philippines, both ways. Is it possible that the House of Representatives or the Senate can impose upon these peeple a domestic policy with reference to the carrying of goods and yet withhold the opportunity of markets for these goods?"

Mr. Williams: Even then you would make them a self-governing colony?
Secretary Taft: Yes, sir.

Mr. Williams remarked that the Republican position at first was that we were to keen the Islands forever.
Secretary Taft discussed the island industries and said there was no danger whatever that either sugar or to-bacco from the Philippines will "swamp," or even figure in, the markets of this country.

Secretary Taft referred to reports that he was willing to compromise on a 25-per-cent. reduction.

"I am willing," he added, "to compromise on anything in the way of a reduction, if I can't get all. This is on the theory that we are coming ultimately to free trade with the archipelago, and every step in that direction is going to teach these timorous sugar and tobacco gentlemen that they are not going to be injured by that fact."

Taking up the labor question, he "No, sir, I am not willing to admit it. I do not think Congress will be so unjust, and these people here repre-senting special interests may as well out their houses there's put their houses fnorder. The Amerian people are not going to allow in-terference with the policy that is going to do this country honor."

This policy, Secretary Taft said, was

Mr. Fowler is still in Washington and is receiving a constant stream of telegrams from people in Arizona and Southern California, urging him to be a candidate for the appointment. There is no reason, however, why he should be a candidate, since without being one, he is being considered by the President for the place. If the office goes to him at all, it may as well go unsolicited.

Assembly Committee Making an Investigation.

Chairman M'Kenney May Take Superintendency.

Finds Prisons of State in Crowded Condition.

The Assembly Committee on Prison and Reformatory Institutions reached Los Angeles yesterday and went direct to Whittier, where the day was spent in making inquiry into the condition of the Reform School.

of the Reform School.

Assemblyman C. H. McKenney of Ione, who is chairman of the committee, and who is said to be the choice of Gov. Pardee for the position of super-intendent at Whittler, succeeding Superintendent Smith, whose resignation takes effect in March, said last night that the position had not been tendered to him. For that reason he said he could not say whether he would accept it.

Mr. McKenney is a holdover mem of the committee and has devoted uch time to the study of reformatory atters. His friends say he would take e position in the event that it be intered to him. offered to him.

'Members of the committee who accompany the chairman and the districts they represent are E. J. Lynch, Nineteenth; S. H. Beckett. Thirty-eighth; S. H. Olmsted, Twenty-first; Harry Ells. Twenty-second; E. R. Amerige. Seventy-seventh; P. J. Boyle, Thirty-second; John A. Bliss, Fiftieth, and W. H. Wickersham, Seventieth, and W. H. "This is not a pleasure trip," said Chairman McKenney last night. "We are endeavoring to make a careful m-quiry into the conditions at the re-formatories and prisons of the State.

We have found two prisons San Quenformatories and prisons of the State. We have found two prisons, San Quentin and Folsom, in bad shape so far as facilities go, and the reformatories at lone and Whittier excellently equipped. "The people of the State do not seem to realize the crowded conditions at the big prisons. San Quentin, especially, is in frightful shape. There are 1600 prisoners and about 300 cells. In each of two large cells no less than forty prisoners are crowded, while six and eight men are jammed into some of the smaller cells.

one whom Liquozone has cured. Some have been cured of little ills; some know that their lives have been saved by it. These homes are scattered everywhere. Your neighbors and friends live in some of them. If you will only ask about Liquozone there are plenty to tell you about it. It is wrong to stay sick with a germ disease while millions know that Liquozone can cure it.

And any sick one; anywhere, may try it at our expense. We will gladly buy the first bottle—a 50c bottle—and give it to any sick one free. You don't need to rely on those who were cured by it. You may test it, without a penny of cost, for yourself.

Won't you—for your own sake—do one or the other? Won't you let your friends tell you how it cured them, and how it constantly keeps them well? Or, won't you let us buy you a bottle and see what it does for you?

What Liquozone Is

What Liquozone Is

Liquozone is a product which in the past two years has sprung into worldwide use in the treatment of germ discusses. It is now used by the sick of the nations; by physicians and hospitals everywhere. It is constantly used in millions of homes in America.

The virtues of Liquozone are derived solely from gas, made in large part from the best oxygen producers. No drugs, no alcohol—nothing but this gas enters into it. The process of making takes 14 days, and requires immense apparatus. At the end of two weeks we get one cubic inches of gas used. The attainment of this product has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The main result is, to get into a liquid and thus into the blood, a powerful, yet harmless germicide. And the product

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone, and the rights in other countries have sold for proportionate sums. We mention this fact to indicate the value of Liquozone—the value to you. Men have never before paid such a price for any discovery used in the cure of sickness.

We need not tell you that we proved Liquozone well before buying it. For Liquozone well before buying it. For years it was tested through physicians and hospitals, in this country and others. It was employed in every stage of every germ disease; in all the most difficult cases obtainable. With thousands of sick ones, considered incurable, we proved that it did what medicine could not do. Then, and then only, did we pay the price.

Since then we have spent nearly $2,000,000 to make Liquozone known. We have bought the first bottle and given it free to every sick one we learned of. These people told others, and the others told others. The result is that Liquozone is now more widely employed than any medicine ever was. And no one can doubt that it is doing more for sick humanity than all the drugs in use combined.

The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of exygen—is deadly to vegetable matter.

To the human body Liquozone is exhilinating, vitalizing, purifying—the most needful, the most helpful thing possible. But to germs it is certain destruction; and these facts are true of nothing else in existence.

Germ Diseases

These are the known germ diseases; all due to germs or the poisons which germs create. These are the diseases to which medicine does not apply, for drugs cannot kill inside germs.

All that medicine can do for these troubles it detects the second of these troubles in the second or these troubles.

All that medicine can do for these troubles is to act as a tonic, aiding nature to overcome the germs. But those results are indirect and uncertain, depending on the patient's condition. A cure is always doubtful when drugs are used, and some of the diseases medicine never cures.

Liquozone alone can destroy the eause of these troubles. It goes wherever the blood goes, so that no germ can escape it. The results are almost inevitable, Diseases which have resisted medicine for years yield at once to Liquozone. "Incurable" diseases are cured by it. In any stage of any disease in this list the results are so certain that we will gludly send to any patient who asks it an absolute guaranty.

If you need Liquozone, and have never used it, please send us the coupon below. We will then send you an order on a local druggist for a full-sized bottle—a 50c bottle—and will pay the druggist ourselves for it. This applies only to the first bottle, of course—to those who have never used it.

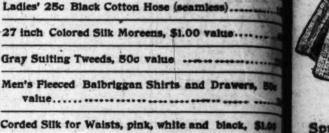

The acceptance of this offer places you under no obligations. We simply wish to convince you; to let the product itself show you what it can do. Then you can judge by results as to whether you wish to continue.

This offer itself should convince you that Liquozone does as we claim. We would certainly not buy a bottle and give it to you if there was any doubt of results. You want these results; you want to be well and keep well. Then be fair enough to yourself to accept our offer today. Let us show you, at our expense what this wonderful product means to you.

Dr. A. F. Schiffman bought yesterday, through the agency of Robert Marsh & Co., the northwest corner of Eleventh and San Pedro streets for 185,000. The piece fronts 282 feet on Eleventh street, 144 feet on San Pedro and 100 feet on San Julian, with an aliey running through the middle. The last is rather important from the fact that H. E. Huntington owns, with the exception of this place, the entire block between Ninth and Eleventh streets on the west side of San Pedro. Tenth street has not yet been cut through the section. There is a nine-months the section. There is a nine-months items on the property bought by Dr. Schiffman, the ground being used for the street in the strength of the lease its is the intention of the owner to make improvements, the mature of which he is not prepared to state at this time. What Mr. Huntington intends to do with his extensive holding is not known, but it is believed that it is to be used for the erection of extensive freight and passenger terminals.

The Sloane resolution was lost by a vote of 26 to 25 and the Stearns resolution was defeated by a vote of 25 to 24.
Attorney Daney then submitted a resolution, the part which carried being as above noted.

To the Sick and Affilicted—Cures Them in Their Own Home as Easily as Though They Called in Person—Physicians Invited to Send Him Cases Pronounced Incurable.

ROCHESTER (N. Y.) Jan 21.—The almost miraculous cures of hopeless invalids made by Prof. Thomas F. Adkin of this city, have been of such a startling character that they have aroused widespread wonder, admiration and curiosity. Time and again thack over time and brings death hack over time and brings death

There was a strenuous debate and I prefer to give life and health, I amfudge Sioane introduced a resolution not a millionaire, but I am well able to afford to give my services free to the sick and afflicted. My discovery is my own, to do with as I please, and the sick and afflicted. My discovery is my own, to do with as I please, and I could charge every patient a thousand dollars if I wanted to. But I don't. And I know of no law to compel me to take money for restoring a man to health. I do not care what the disease is. I am just as ready to cure consumption, caucer, paralysis. Bright's disease of any one of the so-called incurable diseases as ready to cure consumption, cancer, paralysis, Bright's disease of any one of the so-called incurable diseases as > just the same. To me, as to the law, all persons are equal. I see and ad-mit of no difference between patients all persons are equal. I see and admit of no difference between patients as far as I am concerned. If I choose to help all who are ill without pay there is nothing to prevent my doing so. And I may as well tell you right here that I mean to keep on curing anyone who asks me of any disease they may have just as long as I am willing and able. What other men do, what they fail to do or what on curing anyone who asks me of any disease they may have just as long as I am willing and able. What other men do, what they fail to do or what men do, what they fail to do or what they charge makes no difference to me. I feel that it is my duty to carry out my own plans in my own way, however much it costs me. I cannot bear to think of men and women and little children continuing to see. and little children continuing to suf-fer and die when I have the power to save them and restore them to life and health so easily and quickly. And there is no disease I may not cure.

"You think that a broad statement? Well, maybe it is; but no broader than the fruth. I know the wonderful power I have because I have tested it power I have because I have tested it in thousands of cases. You know consumption is supposed to be incurable. Well, not long ago I had a young lady as a patient. Miss H. L. Kelley of Seal Cove, Maine. The doctors told her that she had consumption and could not live, that her case was incurable. And to them it was. The poor girl was in despair, thinking her days were numbered.

aroused widespread wonder, admiration and curiosity. Time and again he has taken cases pronounced hope lessly incurable by the medical profession and restored the patients to life and health in a most phenomenal manner.

There is considerable mystery attached to his method of accomplishing these marvels, as it is known that he does not use the drastic drugs and medicines that doctors depend upon. He claims to have discovered that a certain law of nature has peculiar properties heretofore unsuspected, and that by the application of this law there is no disease he may not the second of He claims to have discovered that a certain law of nature has peculiar properties heretofore unsuspected, and that by the application of this law there is no disease he may not cure. And it is a matter of proof that with the mysterious power this discovery gives him the has made the blind see and the lame walk. He has revived the flickering spark of life in bodies on the very verge of the grave, and restored to health men and women given up to die by doctors and specialists. He seems to have absolute control over human life and the diseases that attack $\mathcal{B}$. Notwith-standing what might be considered a most favorable opportunity, he does not extort money from those whom he treats, saying: male weakness, ulcers, chronic indi-gestion and extreme nervousness. The medicine the doctors gave her did her no good, but my treatment did. I cured her, and she says 'I raised her from the dead.' These are only ran-

I am just as ready and willing to give my services free to a poor man as I am to a rich man. When it comes to a question of life or death, sickness or health, the amount of money a man has makes no difference to me.

"A prince or a pauper, I treat them just the same. To me, as to the law, all persons are equal. I see and adatase that you possess?" asked the reporter.

"It would take too long to tell you, but here is a copy of a book I have written describing my discovery and my method of treatment. I do not sell it. I had it printed for distribution among my friends and patients and those who might be interested in this study of a new science. To them I am glad to give it upon request. If reading the book does not satisfy you, and you want to know more of how I cure any disease, tell some one who is cure any disease, tell some one who is

Public Opinion Tells the Truth About Frenzied Finance

If you are not reading "The Truth About Frenzied Figance," now running in Public Opinia, you are missing one of the most instructive and interesting exposes ever published. This series of articles—twelve in number, one appearing each week—abows Mr. Lawson in his true colors. His "Story of Frenzied Finance" is analyzed, page by page, and new light is thrown upon the interesting subject. The author of "The Truth About Frenzied Finance" is

Financial Editor of the New York Commercial

Mr. Donohoe knows whereof he writes. He will tell the readers of Public Opinion who Lais, what his methods are, and what his purpose is behind the "Story of Frenzied Finance."
Lawson's career will be traced for twenty-five years back, through all its devious rountil the present time, when he is busy in his self-appointed-job as gratuitous financial act to the American people. Mr. Donohoe will write the true story of Amalgamated Copper, so of all the trumpery and exaggeration with which Mr. Lawson has adorned it.

This series of articles is not written in defense of Wall street or its methods, or in defense of any institution or person. It is based upon the right of the American people to know held sides of every public question. Mr. Lawson has told one side of the story; Mr. Donohoe will the other side, and he will state some facts which Mr. Lawson has forgotten to mention probably would not like to have the public read at this time.

THESE EXTRAORDINARY PRICES FOR THIS WEEK

We have repeatedly advertised that our prices were from 25 to 40 per cent below what you pay at trust stores. This is not a careless statement, but an actual fact, and in support of it we herewith mention some of the extraordinary bargains that will be on sale this week. Every reduction is true. Every description is accurate. Some of the lots will probably be sold before the end of the week. Although we have made every effort to provide enough articles for all, we have found it almost impossible to supply the public demand.

Behold the Trust!

This is the latest photograph of the Furniture Who would have thought that this big, brave Furniture Trust which boasted that within all months it would have the public at its mercy, could ever get into such an undiginified situation? The bankers and furniture dealers who are reading this little character study don't think it is any jog—not much.

I take great pleasure in writing those few lines for the benefit of rupture sufferers. Eleven years ago my son become afflicted with a severe case of double rupture which puzzied physicians. He had tried all kinds of what is nalled truesse and bandages, but instead of getting better was worse. At last my house-physician said my son would have to undergo an operation, which discouraged me very much. When the doctor saw how I felt about it he then advised me to go with my son to Prof. Jeseph Fandrey, of 642 & Main et., our city, as he is the only one known whe has cured rupture by his method, without operation. We made up our mind to go and see Prof. Fandrey and after a few minutes' conversation with him we found out that his mothed was without operation, injection, medicines or any further danger. This gave my son now courage. Prof. Fandrey fitted my son with his surgical appliances of his own inventions, gave my son the full instructions were followed to the letter and in three menths' time my sea was cured, which up to date is cleven years age. The cure has been substantial and complete, with never a sign of its return. Through all these cleven years my sam my my make had to see the prof. Fandrey in the substantial and complete, with never a sign of its return. Through all these allows years my sen never had to wear bandages of any hind. This will give an idea of what a happy father I must be to knew that my sen is sound of rupture cures which he still performs, not only in our city and surroundings, but his name and reputation is known and has spread far and wide, for the truth never dies. All those who suffer from this terrible affliction will do well and never make a mistake by consulting Prof. Fandrey. Any sufferer on the unit fellow his instructions, which does not interfere with ecoupation of any kind, can be cured the same as my son, and many more of whom I personally know.

In your article give the reason for the cessation of shipments the extreme cold East and do not hint at an overproduction or else you will get into trouble with the growers. If you handle this right you can save this country many thousands of dollars, and better your standing with a large number of growers. The argument you might have to meet is that lots of the fruit firms have orders for fruit bext week or during the time that it is proposed to stop shipments; this is sailly answered this way—that the buyer will be more glad to get the car at the price agreed upon after a week of no shipments than under the present conditions, because the lack of supply cannot help but increase the value of the goods.

I have no desire to appear personally in this matter, but I have been actively in the orange business for a number of years, and am sure you can do a lot of good where I should fall. Please do not give this space, but handle the matter in your Sundayedition, follow Monday by getting the two big shippers mentioned above and all of the smaller firms having offices in Los Angeles; publish your support Tuesday and by Tuesday night every firm in the business will be in line.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—[To the Editor

A Dangerous Innovation.

CRICAGO, Jan. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In his message Gov. Durbin of Indiana recommends the massage of a law to prevent the marnage of the undit, or persons whose union is likely to result in the production of defectives. But how, we would sak the Governor, can a couple tell before they are married whether they will be well mated? I agree heartily with his view that mismated parents give birth to defective children, but still a man and woman have lived to rether for a period of time it is impossible for them or anyone else to know whether they are adapted to each other results and the man and woman are enraptured with each other, we cannot magine them coldly calculating whether their temperaments are such that their children will be a credit to he race.

While the breaking up of homes is to that extent an evil, it is the lesser of two evils, as it is fair better that homes should occasionally be broken up than that the unions of missits should endure and the propagation of weak and defective children continue. A more liberal divorce law will allow mismated people to separate and possibly to begin married life over again with others better suited to their temperament. We need not fear that the true family life will be destroyed, for happy homes, where the individuals composing them are congenial and, well mated, will never be broken up by a liberal divorce or anything else.

I admire the Governor, for he evidently has the welfare of the people at heart, but I think he is impractical. If he would use his energy and influence in liberalizing the divorce laws he might accomplish something for the betterment of social conditions. The greatest good to the greatest number should be the motto, and while it is conceivable that freer divorce laws anight be abused in some cases, the result in most instances would be the eparation of couples who, had they known their own weakness in time, would never have married. Such unions are injurious to the husband and wife, injurious to the children and injurious lo society.

facing material for streets, and in that contraction many citizens of the city have asked me to give my experience concerning gravel and decomposed granite.

I have had seven years' experience in road-making, having been road overseer of the county roads of this district for that length of time, and I have never found anything to compare with the decomposed granite such as that from old Tropico pit. There are no rocks in it and no clay in it; sets like cement and makes a road almost as hard as atone, and an eight or ten-inch covering will last for six years at least, and will show very little dust and no mud in that time, provided the street is crowned properly and is not graded too flat. This was used on Glendale avenue—just south of the Glendale postoffice—six years ago, and it is now in fine condition. The same kind of material was used on the sandy road between Burbank and San Fernando, five and six years ago, and has neither been olled nor spainkled since, and is at this time as fine as any road in the county. The road was properly graded first, then the gravel was put on and worked down perfectly even with an eight-horse grader; a roller would make it still better, and in the city it would need sprinkling, but it would not require half as much water as the ordinary material. There is some good material near Garvansa, but there are so many boulders mixed with it that it is very expensive, and the Boyle Heightz gravel that was used on the city end of the San Fermande road had too much sand and the Boyle Heightz gravel that was used on the city end of the San Fermande road had too much sand and the Boyle Heightz gravel that was used on the city end of the San Fermande road had too much sand and the Boyle Heightz gravel that was used on the city end of the San Fermande road had too much sand and the Boyle Heightz gravel that was used on the city end of the San Fermande road had too much sand and the Boyle Heightz gravel that was used on the city end of the San Fermande road had too much sand and the Boyle Hei road is always a little springy or spongy, and while it is all right for light driving and automobiling, it is nothing like as good for heavy traffic as the decomposed granite road, although oil is cheaper.

The Tropico pit is on the Giendale branch of the Sale Lake railroad and could be used, I believe, as economically as any material which is available at the present time.

Every mail since Sunday has been bringing to "The Times' Chef" recipes for about every kind of soup imaginable. Some of these are altogether original, and when published will form able. Some of these are altogether original, and when published will form such a symposium on soups as will make every man, woman and child who reads The Times hunger for a taste of the delicious broths.

Recipes for soups will continue to be received in competition for the cash prizes, until the end of the present month, and on or about February i the entire collection, or such of them as seem best, will be published in The Times, and voting to determine the prize winners will be published in The Times, and voting to determine the prize winners will then begin. First prize, five ($5) deliars, will go to the author of the soup recipe receiving the most votes. Three ($5) deliars will be paid 'A' the second best, and one ($1) deliar for the third.

After the soup symposium, prizes will be offered for the best recipes for various other kinds of dishes, and in the end all the different recipes submitted in competition will be published in pamphlet form, constituting The Times' Cookbook, No. 2.

Remember that all soup recipes intended for competition must be in The Times office by January 31. Write plainly on one side of paper only, sign name and address and forward to THE TIMES CHEEF, The Times Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us a dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

narge quantity had to be taken so get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a table-spoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years research and exis far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers.
They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulph... acts directly on the liver, and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.
Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphurs were often worse than the disease and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and

liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur found in Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting frem constipation, or malaria. I have been aurprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples, and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stinart's Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers, a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

I want you—if that means you—to come to me, and if I say that I can cure you, I don't ask you to pay me until I DO so That is fair, surely. You take no chances, as I know what I can do, and I'll run the risk.

If it were not for the prejudice due to the great number of fakes in the land I would not be able to handle the business that would come to me. The "Free Belt" fraud and the "Free Drug" scheme, which are not free at all, have made every one skeptical, but I know that I have a good thing and I'll hammer away until you know it.

Mr. Arnold F. Berri, Marshall, Cal., says: "I have used your Belt for about two months, and it has eured me entirely. I feel like a new man, and now can do a day's work easily. No more pains. I feel fine, and the Belt has been worth ten times what it cost."

To men who are run down, weak and puny, who have lost the force of vitality, who feel gloomy, despondent and unable to battle with the affairs of life; who have Rheumatism, Back Pains, Weak Stomach and Kidneys and feel generally as if they needed to be made over. If that means you, come to me and if I say I can cure you I will do so or no pay.

I don't want money that I don't earn. I don't need it and I am not after it But I am after the dollars that are now going wrong in the quest of health. Look at all these poor wrecks of humanity, that are spending all they earn on drugs—dope that is paralyzing their vital organs—that have spent all they have earned for years without gaining a pound of strength for the hundreds of dollars wasted.

That is the money that I am after, because for every dollar I take I can give a thousand per cent. interest, and I don't want it until I have cured you, if you will secure me. I have cured so many cases right here that I can prove my claims to you, but if that proof is not enough. I'll give you the names of men right near you—where you are. Is that fair?

Come and see me if you can and I'll fix you up; or, if you can't call, write to me and I'll do the same. I've got a nice book on men that I'll send sealed, free, if you enclose this ad.

"It would be a good thing," said he, "It would be a good thing," said he, "If the State were to take up the fight with the Standard. It is able to do so, and a State refinery would have sufficient capital behind it to compete, whereas the Standard now has everything its own way, dealing only with the small plants."

"The refinery business is not learned in a day," said Joseph Bacigalupl of the Southern refinery. "If the State goes into the business it will prove a costly experiment. There is no object in doing so, and it would do injury to the capital invested in the business. At present there is too much competition, and more is not needed. And horse happy, notwithstanding his precarious existence dolaing isolecene and thieving small boys.

The past week 144 cars of California oranges nave been sold at auction, and most of them were beautiful specimens of the fruit. They were large, ripe and of the coor. Today the vendors are correspondingly curiched, and are easily scanning the heavens for indications of a continuation of the sunny weather, the most remarkable in January for many years. But there is no continue on the weather.

"Messrs. Fredk. de Bary & Co. brought over last year to this side of the water a greater number of cases of Champagne than has ever hitherto been known, and these importations speak in the strongest terms of the great popular esteem in which G. H. MUMM & CO.'S Champagne is held on this continent."

But the ordinance which permits them to obtain licenses and do business says that they can stand but thirty minutes in one place, so they have stayed their limit. It prevents their obtaining advantage of each other, and also prevents their blocking up the street in front of stores which might suffer by their competition.

This evening at 6:15 o'clock all the young people's societies in the seventh and eighth districts will meet at the carriage works. Thirtieth and Central avenue, and will be addressed by Evangelist R. A. Walton. This meeting precedes the regular evening services at this place.

This evening public union services will be held in all the eight districts according to previous announcements. The meeting places are as follows:

First or central district at First Methodist Church, Sixth and Hill streets; second or Immanuel district at Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Tenth and Figueroa streets; third or University district, University Methodist Church, Jefferson street near Orchard avenue; fourth or Boyle Heights district., Boyle Heights Methodist Church, North St. Louis street near East First street; fifth or East Los Angeles Cistrict, Asbury Methodist Church, North Workman street near Downey avenue; seventh and eighth districts, Advance Burgsy Company building, No. 2000 Central avenue.

It is desired by the ushers for the central district that the public understand that the doors of the building will not be opened until 7:15. This, it is stated, is absolutely necessary to the carrying out of plans for the stationing of personal workers, who cannot possibly reach the building before that time. This announcement is made so that the scenes of Friday night need not be repeated. At that time immense crowds stood in the streets long before the doors were opened, and much complaint was made.

Thursday night and paid for it. Last night they again applied for lodging and tendered a $10 note, which was accepted and $9 in change was given back to the boys, who went out, saying they were going to supper and did not return.

A closer examination of the bill disclosed that it was a State bank bill of Georgia and was made by two fronts backed together. Officers were notified at once, but the fellows had a good start and probably caught a street car out of fown.

Cancer Cutting is Not the Thing-Only Adding Fuel to the Fire.

Hundreds of physicians and surgeons now admit that cancer cutting is a very brutal operation, and only increases the cell tissue of the cancer. Many so-called incurable cases have been absolutely cured by Mrs. S. J. Bridge—no inconvenience or suffering to patient—diet somewhat restricted. She has administered it to hundreds of patients and the cures are absolute. It only takes one or two applications (powdered or liquid form) to kill the cancer, and from six to ten weeks to make an absolute cure. This rational treatment has been applied to the delicate tissues of the throat where the cancer was well developed, and to the astonishment of reputable physicians an absolute cure was made. Many other difficult cases have been promptly and speedily cured. Mrs. Bridge says: "We often have cases come who have been cut or operated upon one or two times, yet the cancer readily yields to this rational treatment. Here are a few of our cured patients: Mrs. D. R. Humphrey, 624; Townedve; Master John Hughlet, Los Angeles; Mr. F. Wakeham, Santa Ama; Mrs. P. Yorba, 1926 Estrella Ave; Mrs. L. A. GREAT IMPROVEMENTS

At Bimini Hot Springs-Dr. Edwards Again Takes the Helm.

At the annual meeting of the directors of Bimini Water Company, Thursday, Dr. David W. Edwards was elected president. He will begin extensive improvements at once, among which will be a new building for Turkish, Russian and other hot medicinal baths and massage for men, and also elegant apartments exclusively for ladies. Turkish baths, massage, rest rooms, hair dressing, shampoo and manicuring apartments for ladies, with experienced lady attendants.

The present accommodations for those who desire the benefit of the healing proporties of Bimini water are overcrowded, and wonderful cures of rheumatism, stomach troubles, etc., are of almost daily occurence, while many sufferers are being turned away for want of space in the treatment rooms. The space now occupied by bottling and carbonating machinery will be turned into the laundry, and a large new building will be erected for the exclusive use of the bottling and carbonating business.

The dried fruits market is a center of interest and will hold attention for a while. The eastern demand for apricots is brisk. On a basis of 7½ cents for choice in twenty-five pound boxes fr o. b. California, stocks are very closely cleaned up. The market in peaches continues firm. On a basis of 8½ cents for choice, 9 cents for extra cheice and 10 cents for fancy stocks are light and eastern demand good. With light stocks in both apricots and peaches, a good demand may be looked for during the next four months. Dealers are confident that these prices will be maintained until the new crops come in and that stocks will be entirely cleaned up. The movement in prunes is not very heavy, but Coast stocks are not nearly as large as last year, and there is every prospect of a good demand for the next four or five months. The raisin market is in about the same condition as that in prunes. In corporate apples, California stocks, fancy and extra choice grades are closely cleaned up, and prices have advanced within the past week. Choice are quoted at 4½ cents, all in fifty pound boxes. The Eastern market in evaporated apples is very strong and advancing; and dealers say there can be no question of a healthy advance and good market on Coast goods for the next three or four months.

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS-P.M.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The sudden outbreak of pyrotechnics in a group of stocks which is sensitive to developments in the Northern Securities case was the feature of the stock market today, and these occurred late in the market. Union Pacific was the central figure and broke through the restraint which has held it below 120 and was rushed up to 121 7-8. The transactions on the rise were of enormous volume. St. Paul responded vigorously and sensational advances were made by Great Northern and the Chicago and Northwestern group. Northern securities, itself, in the curb market was rushed up several points above its previous highest price to the neighborhood of 155. There were very large transactions in Erie throughout the session, but that stock encountered heavy profit-taking. It has been the professed expectation for several days past that the decision of the Supreme Court in the Northern Securities case would be handed down at Washington on Monday. Beyond this there was nothing to explain the excitement regarding these stocks. The tone of the general market showed strength, but by no means in the same degree as in this special group. The greater activity which developed after the appearance of the bank statement was probably not due to its showing, although the gain in cash reserves was much larger than was promised and the loan expansion hardly as much as was expected. With gold going out in a stream because there was no adequate use to be found for it at this center, any accumulation of banking reserves here had little importance. The use to be found for it at this center any accumulation of banking reserves here had little importance. The strength and activity of a large number of obscure industrials was still a feature today. Outside of the buoyancy in the transcontinental group, the market closed slightly irregular. Total sales of bonds $5,440,000.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—Reflecting lower At the start there was considerable scattered selling, commission houses and pit traders being prominent on that side of the market. The slight decline, however, brought out a fair demand from shorts. In consequence there was soon a firmer undertone, May advancing to 1.16. Trading was comparatively tight throughout the entire session. The market closed firm with May at 1.15%.

At one stage of the game, when the furnishings for the Courthouse were under discussion, Supervisor Kimball is quoted as saying:

is quoted as saying:

"If the ——(meaning the other Supervisors) wanted to 'whack up' why in hell didn't they say so?"

The report goes on to urge economy, saying: "The reign of graft and extravagance in public affairs... has had a tendency to make even the best of our county officers somewhat careless in the matter of public expenditures."

The report is received with yarying expressions.

Without putting his horse away, he went into his office, adjoining his residence, to rest a moment. As he sat in his chair death came to him as quietly as if he had fallen asleep. He was found soon afterward, still upright in his chair.

Mr. Barber had been a resident of Santa Barbera since 1880, and had always taken an active part in the administration of the city and other public affairs, having been elected Mayor in 1880 and 1890. During his term as Mayor he manipulated some of the most extensive city improvements such in 1850 and 1850. During his term as Mayor he manipulated some of the most extensive city improvements, such as the city's Ocean boulevard and the outfall sewer, which stand as lasting evidence to his sound judgment and business ability. In 1852 he was appointed postmaster by President Arthur, and he had filled other positions of honor and trust. He was noted for his kind disposition and stalwart business principles.

In the year 1859, at San Francisco, Barber was married to Mary J. Wheaton, who still lives. The following-named children are the issue of their marriage: Sylvia S. Barber, now Mrs. H. A. Rogers, and Samuel M. Barber, this city; Ella F., wife of R. M. Woods, and Allce F., wife of W. J. Andrews, San Francisco. Barber was a prominent member of the Channel City Lodge of Odd Fellows and was connected with other fraternal orders.

CITY WANTS TO TREBLE. OCEAN PARK, Jan. 23.—Incorporated less than a year ago as a sixthclass city, Ocean Park has by special election aiready more than doubled her original territory, and if nothing goes wrong her area will probably be trabled within a very short time. Petitions are being quietly circulated within the corporate limits of the city asking that additional territory be included within the corporate limits of the city asking that additional territory be included within the city limits. This prayer is to go before the City Trustees who will call a special election after satisfying themselves as to the sufficiency of the petition, The ambition at this time is to annex to the city a strip of land lying to the east of the present townsite, bounded on the north by Central avenue, on the south by Washington street, on the west by Eighth street and on the east by the east line of Ocean Park Heights. Withing the proposed annexation there are probably twenty-five farm and ranch homes and several hundred acres of orchard, pasture and farm land.

YOU CAN INTEREST HIM ANY MAN OVER FIFTY.

ANY MAN OVER PIFTY.

You can interest any man-over fifty years of age in any thing that will make him feel better, because while he may not as yet have any positive organic disease he no longer feels the buoyancy and vigor of twenty-five nor the freedom from aches and pains he enjoyed in earlier years, and he very naturally examines with interest any proposition looking to the improvement and preservation of his health. He will notice among other things that the stomach of fifty is a very different one from the stomach he possessed at twenty-five. That greatest care must be exercised as to what is eaten and how much of it, and even with the best of care, there will be increasing digestive weakness with advancing years.

A proposition to perfect or improve the digestion and assimilation of food

such as is given by one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal. These tablets cure stomach trouble because their use gives the stomach a chance to rest and recuperate; one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contains directive elements sufficient to direct digestive elements sufficient to digest 3000 grains of ordinary food, such as

As Dr. Bennett says, the only reason As Dr. Bennett says, the only reason I can imagine why Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not universally used by everybody who is troubled in any way with poor digestion is because many people seem to think that because a medicine is advertised, or is sold in drug stores or is protected by a trade mark must be a humbug, whereas as a matter of truth any druggist who is observant knows that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have cured more people of in-increasing digestive weakness with advancing years.

A proposition to perfect or improve the digestion and assimilation of food is one which interests not only every man of fifty but every man, woman and child of any age, because the whole secret of good health, good blood strong nerves, is to have a stomach which will promptly and thoroughly digest wholesome food, because blood, nerves, brain tissue and every other constituent of the body are entirely the product of digestion, and no medicine or "health" food can possibly create pure blood or restore shaky nerves, when a weak stomach is replenishing the daily wear and tear of the body from a mass of fermenting half-digested food.

No, the stomach liself wants help and in no round-about way, either; it wants direct, unmistakable assistance, such as is given by one or two Stuart's Daylester, Tablets, after each, meal.

May Festival.

Unusual interest is manifested in the coming May Festival, to be given by a great choral force allied with the Innes Band. Said a musician the other day, "Seldom have promoters succeeded in stirring up such enthusiasm three months in advance of the musical undertaking."

Yet, the enthusiasm is very manifest, for already nearly 300 have entered the vocal lists, and are rehearsing each Tuesday night at Steinway Hall, in the Birkel Building. Julius Albert Jahn has undertaken some of the most magnifecent as well as the most difficult music in the whole choral repertoire. A merit is its newness among societies here; in instance is given the great finale to the first act of "Lohengrin," a polyphonic tempest of gorgeous sound almost unequaled by any other operatic finale in the world.

In addition to the local body a number of branch societies are being, formed in other parts of Southern-California, and the contest in excellence promises to be keen.

Tomorrow evening, at Simpson Auditorium, Vladimir DePachmann, the celebrated Russian planist, will gives

Thomas Oberle as Black Michael, Richard Vivian as Fritz von Tarlen-Hichard Vivian as Fritz von Tarlen-heim, should be good. Who will play Hentzau? No one dreams of instituting comparisons as to the relative merits of Corot and Constable, the Bonheur and Landseer. Frank Branswyn does not paint like Ziem, neither is Ter Meulen inferior to Sydney Cooper or superior to Britton Riviere. The Frenchmen paint France for Frenchmen; the Englishmen practice their art in accordance with English conceptions, and the same holds good of the artists of every nationality. The sooner all Americans strive to produce distinctively American sculpture, architecture and painting, the more quickly the fact will be recognised that here, as elsewhere, there is a distinctive national art, characteristically American, giving us an established position in the work of C. In the Architectural Record for January is an article entitled "Architecture in Southern Cali-"Architecture in Southern California," illustrated by excellent photographs, mostly of residences in or around Los Angeles. The author enthuses over the brilliancy of the sea and sky, the beauty of the mountain scenery, and introduces, with a naivete that is quite quaint, the question of architects' fees. He refers to the aimple picturesqueness of the mission buildings as "rare beauty," and clothes them with the dignity of an "architectural style." It is rather difclothes them with the dignity of an "architectural style." It is rather difficult to trace the similarity he finds in the tail clay bluffs of Santa Monica and the Thames embankment, and in what sense the Bay of Naples resembles the bay at Santa Monica is scarcely less difficult to discover. However, the article is keenly appreciative of this lovely country, albeit it is professedly "of first impressions." The opinion is also expressed that art cannot thrive without wealth, and the statement is boldly made that Florence owed as much to the patronage of the Medicis as to the genius of M. Angelo and Leonardo da Vinci. Florence would have still been the famous city she was, and is, had she been adenied the added glory of Michael Angelo and Leonardo, whose genius cast a reflected halo on the Medici. There seems to be a growing interest in art in Ireland, more particularly in native art, "made for the people by the people." A craft school and workshop has been established in Dublin, where workmen are instructed both in the design and manufacture of stained glass, and such beautiful work is now being executed that it happily seems probable that the day of "Mun-Ich" windows for Irish churches has passed away. Many hundreds of thousands of pounds were yearly sent out of Ireland for glass that was in the main bad, both in design and execution.

Mrs. Rice Entertains.

A pretty luncheon was given on Thursday by Mrs. Nicholas E. Rice of No. 2590 Wilshire boulevard, complimentary to the young women who assisted her in serving refreshments at her reception last week. The table decorations were particularly artistic, being entirely in red. A low bowl of cut glass filled with scarlet carnations rested on a shining milror, and over the table fragrant American Beauty roses were scattered. Buffet and mantel were decked with the same regal blooms. Places were marked with hand-painted cards adorned with carnations. Throughout the home Maman Couchet roses and ferns were gracefully arranged. Guests for the afternoon were: Mrs. Howard Rivers, Miss Agnes Knight, Miss Essie Rosling, Miss Alice Gamble, Miss Helen Howry, Miss Austeen George, Miss Vivian MacKenzie, Miss Viola Peacocke, Miss Gladys Reynolds and Miss Beulah Boynton of Rochester, N. Y. Miss Boynton is the guest of Miss Viola Peacocke were school friends in Rochester.

The New Spring Styles

who pretends to keep in touch with Fashion. Distinctiveness, originality and sterling worth are here merged into one. At each of these departments-Silks, Dress Goods and Wash Goods-you will encounter novelty fabric eminently worthy a place in the wardrobe of every tasteful dresser, and to discerning folks prices speak their ow story of economy most eloquently. Only a few of the late arrivals can be favored here with special mention.

Beautiful Wash Goods

At this wash goods department there are a hundred new things to charm admirers of handsome summer fabrics. Creations that written words do not describe. They must be seen and studied. Here's just the merest hint. But come tomorrow and see for yourself.

Embroidered Crepes 50c

Fine cotton crepes, with just enough of that crispy softness to set and hang properly, a new weave and a new effect. Plain white grounds with hand-embroidered polkadots in all the most fashionable shades. Ideal material for waists, kimonos or gowns. Full 28 inches; yd. 50c.

Striped Crepes 30c

A fabric the same nature as the above with soft, delicately colored Persian stripes; 28 inches; yd. 30c.

Fancy Printed Nets 35c

Nets of the etamine or voile family, that more resemble woolen goods than cotton, with print-ings of roses and foliage. Dresden and pom-padour effects; pinks, blues, greens, yellows, etc. Perfectly beautiful materials for summer gowns; 28 inches; yd. 35c. Striped Zephyrs 15c

Zephyr cloths are shown in endless varieties, pretty color combinations, new designs. Spiendid material for summer street dresses or beach frocks; 32-inch, 15c. There are also novel styles in Linen Suitings, Ecliennes, French Batistes, Zephyr Suitings, Crash Suitings, and dozens of others of interest.

Fancy Silks 27-in. Crepe Pongees $1

A strictly new silk fabric for street or afternoon gowns. Soft, lustrous, clingy, but of sufficient weight to hang correctly and wear. Tans, browns and blues 27 in., yd., $1.00.

27 Pongee Sackings $1.50 A heavy, semi-coarse woven slik material especially for shirt-waist suits, waists, coats and wraps. Elegant, rich appearing goods in greens, blues, browns, tans, champagnes, cardinals and black; full 27 in. wide; yd., $1.50.

Checked Taffetas $1.00 Shepherd checks in fine, soft, wearable taffetas, three-colored chameleon effects for shirt-waist suits. Tans, browns, blues, greens; also black and white, at yd., $1.00.

Taffeta Chine $1.25

Warp-printed effects in soft chiffon taffetas, small conventional and floral designs, styles different from any we have seen in many a year. Browns, blues, greens, grays, tans and black and white—all the best colors for gowns for any occasion, yd., $1.25.

Foulards $1.00 to $1.75

Cheney Brothers' famous productions, in dozens of entirely new styles and weaves, different enough to be called by another name are many of them. Some come in large, bold, pronounced designs, as handsome and rich and elegant as any silks you have ever seen. Others of a more modest character with dainty figures, soft pastel colorings, still others in the always popular polks dots, dark and medium colors. A majority of these foulard silks come in single, exclusive dress patterns, only one of a kind. Prices range from $1.00 yd. to $1.75.

27 Checked Taffetas 85c

For tomorrow's visitors we have a limited amount of splendid shirt-waist suitings in small checked taffeta silk. Browns, navies, greens and black and white, full 37 inches wide—12 yards will make a walking suit. While they last, yd., 85c.

The Spring Woolens

Wool Taffetas $1.50 An entirely new, silk warp fabric for eithe street suits or dressy gowns, soft, clingin dust-proof material. Browns, tans, navies black and white; full 44 inches wide, yd. $1.50

Silk Eoliennes $1.50 Highly finished, beautiful lustered, silk col ennes. A brand-new gathering for tomorrow visitors. Browns, tans, navy and Parsifal blue-hunter's green, cream and black. 44 inche wide, yd., $1.50.

Crepes de Paris $1.25

Crepes are here again in a number of laweaves, all silk-warp fabrics in every wante color, black, cream or white, priced from $1.5 yd. to $1.50. Shepherd Checks 50c

Black and white shepherd checks will lead a competitors in Fashion's race this season. V show another fresh lot tomorrow, mohairs all-wool, ranging in price from 50c a yard

New Brown Mohairs 50 The one material that does not gather dus The most satisfying of all for traveling at general utility wear. The new for browns at other colors, 38 to 45 inches wide; 50c yd. $1.25.

Handsome Black Woolen

c Topic

No demand has ever been presented to the Government that is backed by a greater weight of expert authority. Medical opinion is unanimous on the subject. The question is one that does not admit of dispute.

British authorities are always slow in adopting reformatory or remedial measures after the need of them has been abundantly shown. They have to be subjected to a great deal of hammering to make them do things that they have not done before. The report of the Committee on Physical Deterioration has aroused the doctors of the country to the necessity of bringing pressure to bear on the Government which will force it to take steps to prevent the threatened racial decadence. "The Committee believe," they stated, "that more may be done to check the degeneration resulting from drink' by bringing home to men and women the fatal effects of alcohol on physical efficiency, than by expetiating on the moral wickedness of drinking. To this end they advocate the systematic practical training of teachers to enable them to give rational instruction in on the schools of the said upon State enactive field committee on Physical Deterioration has aroused the doctors of the committee on the Government of the committee on the Government which will force it to take steps to prevent the threatened racial decadence. ST. MARK'S FALLING.

STEPS TO BE TAKEN AT ONCE TO STRENGTHEN THE FA-MOUS OLD CATHEDRAL.

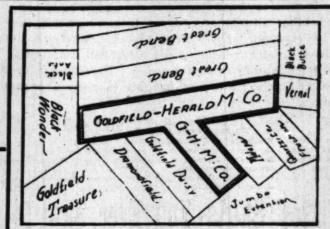

VENICE, Dec. 31 .- To thousands of Americans who have visited Venice, books and pictures have made fan with its beauties, the tidings that St with its beauties, the tidings that St.
Mark's—the crowning glory of the brida, city of the Adriatic—was in danger of collapse, must have caused deep regret. It is pleasant therefore to be able to convey the assurance, obtained by personal interviews with the municipal authorities, that immediate steps will be taken to avert diate steps will be taken to avert what would be a catastrophe not only for Venice or Italy, but for the whole world. The work of restoration and repair is to be done in the most thor-ough fashion, while preserving intact the artistic and antique value of the

to be raised; the large internal pillars which support the will be strengthened. There will be no more tinkering at restoration by patching up the worst places. The entire building will be taken in hand and given such an overhauling as will give the old church a reasonable guarantee of another thousand years lease of life. It will cost a lot of money, but to ensure the safety of St. Mark's. Venice will raily as one man, and if outside assistance be needed, Italy will supply li.

It was the fall of the unique and renowned Campanile, which for a thousand years had stood at its side, which first aroused the suspicion of the authorities that the sucient shrine itself might be in serious danger. Exitself might be in serious danger. Experts were set to work to make a thorough examination of it, and their report has shown the fabric to be in a far worse condition than any had suspected. Beneath the 50,000 square feet of matchless mosaic most alarmage evidences om decreptitude were discovered. All the walls have cracked the central dome has suffered grave damage. The subsidence of the foundations has thrown minarets and towers out of plumb. Happily all this has been discovered in time to repair the ravages of age and neglect, but had not the authorities profited by is it necessary to offer any prominent mining stock for general subscription? Why do not local sts secure the entire issue, if it promises such large profits, and why is the company willing se of any interest in a valuable property? These are common questions familiar to every one in mining investments. They seem reasonable on their face, yet they are, in fact, extremely able and illogical.

Would you ask your grocer, when he advises you to buy sugar or flour in anticipation of its s, why he does not hold it himself and make the profit? Would you ask the coal dealer be recommends you to lay in your winter supply in summer, because it is cheaper, why he must buy it himself and sell it later at a higher price? Hardly, for the very good and sufficient that probably neither would have sufficient capital for the purpose, and if the advice were ated upon, neither party would be benefited. Mining stocks are offered to general investors me man has not sufficient capital to successfully operate the property, however valuable wordy may be. The Goldfield-Herald Mining Company is one of those corporations, which, is had the desired amount of cash to purchase and develop its holdings, would never der one dellar's worth of stock to the general public. You ask why? Simply for the reason that he properts of a mammoth gold strike are practically assured.

With the news from Goldfield of enormous strikes that are being made daily it seems almost unnecessary to state that the price of 2½c a share for stock in a mining company controlling fifty acres of the most promising mineral land, is the smallest price imaginable for an interest in one of the greatest mineral belts the country has ever known. If you would buy shares in the Goldfield-Herald Mining Company, the price of which has already advanced and will continue to do so, now is the time to get in. Nearly everybody is investing in the Goldfield mining country; therefore, nearly everybody is going to share in the profits. . Do you want to be one of those who will not? When this land has been worked and the company begins to pay dividends, do you want to see your neighbor realizing profits from the proceeds of a small investment in a company in which you had the same opportunity to invest, but failed to do so? Of course you do not. Then now is the time to get your shares. Nothing makes a person feel meaner than to see his friends enjoying the proceeds of a small investment in a company into which he failed to invest simply for the reason that he did not take the small amount of time necessary to investigate a proposition, or due to some other trivial cause.

No man ever became rich who did not invest, and none ever will.

"Yes," Richman answered; then he added, with some show of importance, "and just a little further, too—to Newada."

"Gee-whillikins! Don't I wish you, just! Say, you goin' out to scalp Injuns or find gold? If you want a valet to hold your knives and pistols, just say the word, and I'm your man!" Richman laughed. The train boy's "funning" was so spontaneous and resently, glancing furtively about in, he was relieved to find that aparently none of his fellow passengers ad paid the slightest attention to him this emotions. Or if they had, they ad not considered them at all strange r nuusual.

He soon forgot them himself, it must e said, in the novelty of his situation, and in watching the reeling gallop of he telegraph poles and trees. Richman could count on his fingers the umber of times he had been on a rain, and these had always been very hort trips to heighboring villages, and, once—Oh happy time!—he had wen been to New Haven with Dr. taines. But they all paled to insignificance before this momentous jouray of thousands of miles that he was aking all alone.

A spirit of satisfaction and elation bok possession of him. To be trusted to state one such a fourney was not valet to bold your knives and pistols, just say the word, and I'm your man!"

Richman laughed. The train boy's "funning" was so spontaneous and good-tempered that it was very infectious. The seriousness of his mission had told somewhat upon Richman's spirits, and it was a relief to speak out to a boy like himself, and one who took life and things it held with so much good humor.

"Tm not going for Indians or gold," he explained, "but to find my father."

"To find your father? Say, this is gettin' interesting. Is he lost, strayed, or stolen, or what?"

But the gravity on Richman's face made the train boy's countenance serious, too, and he listened sympathetically to as much of Richman's story as the lad thought it expedient and wise to tell.

"Well!" The train boy drew a long breath. "These here books ain't in it when it comes to real life, are they?" He flipped contemptuously at the leaves of the yellow-covered one he held in his hand.

The title of the book caught Richman's eye: "The Red Trail: or, the Daring Deeds of Diamond Dick."

"Look here," he exclaimed. "I guess I'll buy that book. How much is it?"

"Ten cents to the general public, but free gratis for nothin' to my friends," said the train boy, with a generous sweep of his hand. "Here you are, and when you're on the Red Trail yourself, just think o' me, will you?"

"But I want to pay for it." Richman protested. "Twe got plenty of money."

"Nit! not on your life! I guess I kin give a little gift to' my friends once in awhile, can't I? And I don't mind tellin' you I've taken a shine to you. This book'll give you pointers on what io do when you're in a tight place among the reakkins in Nevada. I've read it myself. It's fine!"

Richman's protestations were of no avail. "The Red Trail" was literally forced into his resisting palms, much to the disfigurement of its sleek yellow covers. The train boy went away, laughing and triumphant. He came back in a minute, with two huge oranges, which he placed deliberately on "The Red Trail."

"Eat, drink, and be as merr sking all alone.

Richman ad read many tales of Western and outlier life—tales of dangers and airbreadth escapes heroically and trimphantly met. His heart beat at the nought that he was riding straight ward the scenes of all these stirring rams.

The train boy, a bright, wide-awake do f Richman's own age—had passed p and down the car several times, ometimes with an armful of paper-pered novels and imagazines, somemes with a hasket of golden oranges, actous and temptins.

He had dropped a hook into the vant place beside Richman, but the by had scarcely even glanced a it, aring he might have to buy it if yok it up and read a little in a lichman was not accustomed to cending money, and he forgot, that a was not exactly in straitened cirmstances at present, with almost ur hundred dollars neatly tucked way in his inside waistecat pocket.

Presently the train boy dumped a scarded collection of books on the ont seat of the car, and sauntered ick to where Richman sat. He ched up the book Richman had not oked at, and pushing back his cap om his warm forehead smiled inably.

know how, my son," he said, amiling, "and don't refuse a good thing because you git it for nothin."

However, Richman's time came. He managed to slip a silver quarter into his new friend's coat pocket when he was not looking. Then he felt better, and ate the oranges with great satisfaction.

It was with genuine regret that he bade the train boy good-by at the station in New York. He had helped to make the time roass pleasantly and "Yes," said Teddy, "it was in the "Yes," said Teddy, "it was in the

"And my name is Phelps—Richman Phelps."

"Glad to've met you, Mr. Pa."

"And my name is Phelps—Richman Phelps."

"Glad to've met you, Mr. Phelps.
"Partin' is such sweet sorrow, and so forth, and so forth. Ring me up by 'phone when you've struck the 'Red Trall.' Goodby, and good luck to you."

"Goodby," said Richman, wringing the irrepressible's hand with genuine regret. "I won't forget you, Harry,"
"Nor me nuther," grinned Harry; and so they separated.

The stop in New York was a very short one. Richman would have liked to explore some of the streets uptown once so familiar to his mother, and even hunt up the old mansion on Murray Hill where her uncle lived, but no another world, emitting fire and smoke and long, reverberating shrieks.

Richman was sleeping soundly, though his position in the seat was far from being a comfortable one. But suddenly he awoke, with a strange and sickening sensation of being violently hurled about. The car swayed dizzlly for a moment, and then seemed to turn on its side, with a muffled creaking and groaning sound. The lights went out like a flash.

For one brief moment there was a silence deep, terrible, appalling. Then the sinister hissing of escaping steam. Then the chrieks of men and women in terror and pain. And then—ah, me! most dreadful of all—the angry roar and glare of fire!

When I'm a man I'll sail the seas And storm a hundred forts; I'll wave my flag upon the breeze,

I'll be a hunter and a scout,
A brave explorer, too;
A man of fame, without a doubt,

I am said, "and all at once I missed it.
I am sorry, for it was the one you gave me, Emily."

"Here it is," said Teddy. "I found it down in the pansy bed. I meant to give it to you, but I forgot."

"It must have fallen off the window sill," said mamma. "I remember now; I was sitting by the garden window."

That efternoon Sister Mary asked if anybody had seen a button, for she had lost one off her blue dress; Tom inquired if anybody had run aross his jack knife, which he was using at noon and misiaid; Johnny needed a piece of atring in a hurry; and grandpa could not find a little mil. All these things Teddy produced as they were wanted.

My mother dresses me for church
When Sunday morning comes,
And all the time she hardly says
A single word, but hums
The "Tender Shepherd" hymn—yo know,
'Bout little lambs and things.
It's very nice—I do just love
The way my mother sings.

And when we get into the church
It's cool and quiet there;
I look up at the window
Where the angels are, and stare
'Till everything goes far away,
And I can only see
The pretty colored angels
That are looking right at me.

I try to hear just what he says—
The minister, I mean—
But all the other things I know.
Keep popping in between.
There are so many kinds of them
That every time I go To church I always am surprised
How many things I know!

"Mamma," she whispered, "What's the matter with Aust Edith! She's in there, talking to the girls—and using slang! Mamma, what does it mean! And I was so proud of ther! I thought she was—I told the girls—I—I—"

Kathleen put up her handkerchief and shed quick, bot tears into it—tears of mortified pride—of disappointment. What would the girls say now? Oh, what would they think?

Mrs. Douglas did not attempt to comfort her. "Why, dearie," she said cheerfully, "I can't see but Auntie is enjoying herself, and if her talk does sound a little peculiar, why, we must excuse that, you know. Slang, I have heard, sometimes adds a needed emphasis to one's conversation—makes it more animated and expressive. I wouldn't worry if I were you."

Kathleen wiped her eyes fercely.

Mrs. Douglas, entering the parior with the tray of ice cream and cakes, cast an expressive glance at her sister. Aunt Edith smiled in return and turned to the silent girls. She had heard Kathleen rush upstairs to her own room.

heard Kathleen rush upstairs to her own room.

"My dears," she said, softly, "I owe you an explanation. I've had to shock our little girl—and you—in this way, hoping to cure her of her one great fault. You all know what a dear girl she is—how good, how kind—but she has fallen into this habit of slang, and her mother and I wondered whether—well, you know the Scotch verse: 'Oh, wad some power the giftle gie us To see oursells as ithers see us!:"

"Tickled to death to meet you, girits," she said. "Kathleen's nearly talked my arm out of its socket telling about you. Isn't it the dandiest evering? Did you catch on to the sunset? It was sure the gayest I ever ran across. I guess you folks out west, here, can get up more gorgeous shows of that kind than we can, back in Boston, don't you think so?"

"The girls, like Kathleen, lost every vestige of good manners, and single, stared in a kind of fascinated horror as the words tripped from Aunt Edith's tongue.

A cold perspiration came out in big drops upon Kathleen's forchead, and she felt sick and dizay. What idid it is she f

Jauntily maintain a youthful air which their looks will belie?"

Well, we rather think the grandmothers of the next generation will not wear white caps. Half a century ago, as soon as a woman married, regardless of her age, she donned a cap, badge of matronhood. Many of the grandmothers of today have worn the cap throughout their wedded life. It is not likely that the youngerly women, when they have attained the dignity of the grandmother, will adopt the cap. As to settling down into "nice oid ladies," it is all a matter of fashion. History records plenty of instances of women who have retained their charms well into oid age, and have actively participated in the work of the world. A woman is as fold as she looks, we are told, and certainly woman's tendency is to look constantly younger for her years. There is no ground for the belief that because a woman looks young and feels young she does not possess the qualities that go toward making her a "good grandmother." All honor to the grandmothers of today! The grandmothers of tomorrow will be worthy successors.—[Housekeeper.

Oh, wad some power the giftie gie us
To see oursells as ithers see us!'"
Kathleen came downstairs, passed through the dining-room, bearing her saucer of lee cream, her eyes and nose a little red from weeping. In her usual impulsive fashion she began:
"Aunt Edith, I know you had to do it, but it made me horribly ashamed. Girls, it's just the lesson I needed, and Aunt Edith never talks that way at any other time. I'm just going to make myself stop, and whenever you hear me I hope you'll pinch me or do something to make me think. I'm going to try—and I bet I'll get there, too!"
She broke off in blushing confusion, and the girls laughed.
But Aunt Edith came to the rescue. She pulled Kathleen down beside her on the sofa and put her arm round her, then looked up at her sister.

"Then why didn't he sign it?" saks the listener.

"Why, you see, he had just purchased a gold brick from a clever traveler who was assisted by two Indians in the woods, and he had, the day before, been taken down to the harber in Philadelphia to see the hole where the explosion was, and he was in such a resenful state of mind that he was afraid the declaration would later turn out to be a promissory note of some kind.

But for that our family would have had more distinction."

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS.

Por monumental impudence it would be difficult to exceed the letter which the Central Labor Council of this city sent a few days ago to members of the Legislature, requesting them to use their influence and vote against Senator Ralston's proposed anti-blacklist, anti-boycott bill. F. W. Bell, who wrote the let-ter, said that at a meeting held in Los Angeles, "composed of representatives from every labor organization in the city," he "was instructed," etc.; in-formed the lawmakers that the labor anizations of the State were coninjure organized labor, and warned them, that the State Federation of Labor would "keep a record of the votes upon the measure," and those who received a copy of the letter are expected to appreciate what that means and vote accordingly.

Were it not that the so-called Central Council is composed of a few serub agitators who are silly enough to do any silly thing, the letters sent to the Legislators would be incomprehensible. The Central Labor Council was formed to take the place of was formed to take the place of the County Council of Labor, which was in a moribund condition for hs before it went out of existence than a year ago. A year ago growth, but preferred not to make the truth known at that time. So alarming, indeed, had conditions become, that early in January, 1904, leaders of the United Mine Workers at Wilkesbarre, made before various locals, followed gion. The leaders complained of the non-payment of dues, the non-attendwages, and said that unless the 'or carried out, but at that time there were a number of restaurant and hotel keepers who had agreements with the union, under which they were running their places. These men argued against taking action then because they did not wish to be placed in the position of breaking an agreement into which they had entered. It was then decided that so soon as these existing agreements expired the employers would decline to make new ones, and as all would expire by the beginning of February, that time was set for the establishment of the open shop.

One restaurant in Oakland has always been a thorn in the side of the One restaurant in Oakland has al-ways been a thorn in the side of the union, because it would not be domi-nated by the autocratic organization. But this restaurant, the Cottage, was run by a woman, and she employed none but female help. She refused to let her help join the unions, and then her place was subjected to a boy-cott, with attendant pickets, and threats of personal violence com-pelled the woman to take the matter into the courts.

When seen regarding the proposed and content themselves by saying they are not in the habit of meeting they are not in the habit of meeting conditions until they are presented. They say that when the restaurant keepers tell the men they must get out of the unions will be time enough for the unions to take a hand in the matter. It is not, however, the intention of the employers to tell their employes to get out of the unions, but simply to employ whom they please without reference to their union affiliations.

NOT THE ONLY SURPRISE. Oakland is prolific in surprises to the labor world just now. News comes of an attack on what has al-ways been considered by the unionists as the strongest bulwark in their defense—the Typographical Union. The employing printers of Oakland have had much trouble for years past, and have been fighting strong competition on this side of the bay while they have been compelled to stand for demands of the union which meant ruln to them.

job offices of Oakland the demand for an eight-hour day will be denied, and that while the union scale of wages will continue to be paid, the men will tave their wages deducted for the ex-tra hour taken. The employing printers have formed an association in which all are members, and are firm in their stand.

Nor are they alone in this fight, for they are backed by the newspapers of the trans-bay cities, as well as the Citizens' Alliance. With its customary boastfulness the Typographical Union announces that it will ruin every printer in Oakland, and if the newspapers do not keep their hands off they, too, will have to go by the board.

There is no effort on the part of the employing printers to change existing conditions so far as union domination is concerned, except that it is employing printers to change existing conditions so far as union domination is concerned, except that it is the intention to make the printers work the full nine hours for nine hours' pay. It is claimed that this extra hour simply means that the employers are getting what they pay for, and if the printers will not work the full time they will have the extra pay result in one of the most bitter fights that has yet come up between employers and unions, for the Typographical Union has always held itself above ordinary unions, and has claimed to be a little better than the ordinary workmen. They have been so arrogant in their demeanor toward other unions that they will get little sympathy and will have to cined malcontents who while away many hours in pagging and idle slander, would facilitate greatly our chances for doing good."

In short, Tvietmoes whine means nothing me e nor less than that there is a great falling off in membership in the local councils and for this reason money cannot be raised to meet the per capita assessments based on a swollen membership roll. In addition to this the members who remain in the unions are talking about such men as McCarthy and Tvietmee, and are talking because they have ceased make a strong showing in order convince other unions that they fight their battles alone.

BAKERS COME NEXT. There has been talk for a long time ployés.

But while this has been going on, and while the unions have, apparently, been too strong for the bosses, there has been a constant growth of the sentiment among the employing bakers that they would have to do something for protection or their businesses would go to smash. For the past six months the boss bakers have been forming an organization, and now they feel that they are in condition to test the strength of the unions. The trouble, if trouble comes at all, is set down for the latter part of February.

unions. The trouble, if trouble comes at all, is set down for the latter part of February.

The bakers who have been harassed by their employes in San Francisco have felt all along that if a strike should be inaugurated enough bread would be shipped into the city from outside cities and towns to keep things running, and there would be no help for the bosses. With that understanding the organization of the bosses has been extended until it now takes in all the large bakeries in the State, and the strength of the organization is such that they feel perfectly able to handle any strike that may take place.

The fight is coming over the question of apprentices. The unions have made a new agreement which they want the bosses to sign, and in this agreement not only have they fimited the number of apprentices, but they have established a schedule of wages which the bosses say is impossible. The new rate for apprentices is $10 a week, and this price is soo far above what an apprentice is considered worth that the bosses will make their stand on this point, and if a strike comes it will be the signal for the open shop all over the State The bosses have had several good object-lessons lately, and these have made the formation of the Employing Bakeers' Association much easier.

quiet that is causing some of the timid merchants to fear it means the brewing of a storm. They have no idea that the unions, which but a few months ago, controlled the whole city and ruled with a rod of iron can now be in a fearful mood themselves.

The fact of the matter is that the unions have become so weak numerically that they daire do nothing to bring on a crisis which will reveal their weakness. The leaders of unionism know so well that so soon as a struggle begins it will show that the beasted attength of the unions has dwindled away to almost nothing. It is this that is causing the Labor Council and the Building Trades Councit to sit still while the employers go on growing stronger in their organization with each succeeding day. Such men as Pin Head McCarthy and Trietmoe, and Benham, and Knox, know that their day has passed and they are now bending all their energies to keep the other unionists from finding out where the weakness lies.

In a recent issue of the organ of the Building Trades Council, Tvietmoe, in Building Trades Council, Tvietmoe, in his report as secretary-treasurer, makes the admission that the bodies affiliated with the Labor Council, have fallen off materially in their payment of "defense fund dues." The dues special assessments per capits, and it nets an enormous sum each year. There is no tab kept on the expenditure of this fund, and in his report Tvietmoe tells how a few hundred dollars have been sent to building trade councils in other cities, and then says "a large amount was expended for traveling expenses of the secretary-treasurer, and nearly a year's continual traveling of your able general president."

It goes without saying that the "able

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

S AN FRANCISCO, Jan. 27.—The last annual report of the International United Brewery Workmen shows that during the year there was received from local unions the enormous sum of $129.000. The balance on hand in the bank at the end of the fiscal year was $1257.40. In short, 128,000 was spent by the international officers during the year.

There is an account of receipts and expenditures which would be interesting if it told anything. For instance, there is an item "Agitation and organization, $18,946.30," which might be elucidated. It is claimed by those who know that this means whisky and barbilis, with traveling expenses of a lot of agitators.

scheme, for instance, in "Above the Gaspereau," where throughout twenty-eight pages all the lines of each six-lined stansa rhyme with one another, verges on the ludicrous. Here is an example:

Where now in early September the sun has his will—sun has his will—
The slow autumn sun that goes leisurely, taking his fill:
Of life in the orchards and fir woods, so moveless and still;
As if, should they stir, they might break some illusion and spill.
The store of their long summer musing on top of the hill.
There is often too strongly evident, too, in Mr. Carman's verse, his study of other poets—in this volume, for instance; and indeed elsewhere, his admiration and study of Browning; though Elizabeth Barrett would certainly never have written of his verse the lines which brought about her acquaintance with the man she married. It is Browning in his more delicate coloring that Mr. Carman admires; and several poems in this new volume speak eloquently of such an admiration. The form, with something of the spirit of "Rabbi Ben Egra," is repeated in two poems; and an influence of "Christmas Eve" and "Easter Day" is also plainly perceptible in both these poems. Yet these two are among the best chings in Mr. Carman's book; nor can it be said that he does not think his own thoughts in them. Here are beautiful stanzas:

"Let us go in once more,

"There bright-robed choristers
Make music in the firs, Rejoicing in their service all day long;
And there, the whole night through,
Along the dark, still blue,
What giorying hosts with starry tapers throng!

Yet surely is akin to you and me."

If we analyze, there is much in Mr. Carman's poetry, in expression as well as form, that is not strictly original. We have heard before of "amethystine eves" and "starry tapers." Nor are his original terms always impressive. "Frayed by murry" sounds a trifle too "Frayed by murry" sounds a trifle too "Golloquial: and "Apple Lands"—can they be the gardens of the Heaperides? Great virility and great originality are both lacking in Mr. Carman's verseand yet, take it for all in all, the best of it is well worth while. Here are indeed other stamas in part even finer than those already quoted.

"What lurks in the dry seed, But waiting to be freed, Asleep and patient for a hundred years?

A steer broke from the rodeo while they were "cutting out," and made straight for a row of women sitting on the fence.

With one frenzied commingled yell, they went over backward off the fence. The steer, bewildered, ran on for a distance; then turned to rush back for them. If he leaped the fence there was a fine chance for a tragedy.

Atmore came up on a dead run, threw himself from the saddie just as the steer charged; his sinuous hands went round the huge cruel horns as the braced himself for the fearful shock.

The free for all trot bringing out thenry Berry with Briney K, and Dr. Ralph Hagan with Byron Erkenbrecker's pet Rita H. attracted the closest of attention as it was labeled a sure enough horse race in advance. Rita was generally liked to win, and she started well by taking the first heat in 2:13½ after collaring Barney and making thim chuck it up in the stretch. The third leg of the Christopher Cup looked very dubious to Berry at that stage of the game, but a bad break by Rita H. at the turn, in the second heaf practically settled the race as Dr. Hagan committed the fatal error of judgment of coming on and trying to win. The mare was game and made a brave bid, but it was asking too much of her, and she was "all in" for the third heaf, finishing far behind after another tired break soon after the start.

The 2:25 pace brought out five likely youngsters, and the dark horse-or to be exact, the brown mare—won. C. A. side.

The first game on Wednesday was won by the Reds 4 to 3, the fine interference of Mackey being largely responsible. On Thursday team C. won a brilliant victory. Tom Weiss securing the ball and carrying it swiftly to the goal in the fifth period; score 4 to 2. On Friday the two winning teams played a final contest won by the Reds by a score of 2 to 2. Mackey's fine work figuring prominently in the result.

The Los Angeles players thave distinguished themselves against the celebrities entered in the game and the tournament has been the most successful in the history of the local club,

GLENDALE GIRLS WIN.

BASKETBALL WITH COMPTON.
GLENDALE, Jan. 23.—The Compton High School basketball team went down to defeat here before the Glendale team today by a score of 15 to 10.
The game was held on the court in Glendale and throughout the first half the score was even up, ending with Glendale in the lead by one point. In the first, half, Alta Stone threw four field goals for Glendale and Miss Tucker of Compton landed three pretty goals. The guards of Glendale, Miss Bettannier and Miss Alma. Stone, guarded the Compton forwards closely and each of these guards played a strong systematic game throughout.
Miss Alice Mattheson of the Compton team played a quick game against 'he superb center of Glendale, Miss Smalley, who batted the ball every time to the Glendale forwards.

During the second half Glendale walked off with an easy lead which was maintained until the end of the game. The last ten minutes, however, of this half was rather slow, both teams being badly winded. Miss Howle of Compton distinguished herself in this half by throwing three spectacular field goals. The Compton girls were disappointed in the score for they had trained hard for this meet and expected victory. This is their second defeat of the season, they having been beaten by the girls of Los Angeles High School in a game three weeks ago.

A large attendance witnessed the game. Afterward the Compton girls were entertained by the Glendales with an informal tea.

Alice Mattheson; forwards, Flora
Howle and Myrite Tucker; guards.
Alda Barron and Laura Garnes. For Glendale: Center, Emily Smalley; guards, Lucie Bettainner, Alma Stone; forwards, Blanche Davenport and Alta Stone: referee, Helen Barv: unnire,

BASKETBALL AT WHITTIER.

BYFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES!

WHITTIER, Jan. 28.—The girls of the Long Beach High School basketball team played here today against the girls of the Whittler High School team and won by a score of 21 to 5.

A feature was the evcellent guarding by the Misses Taylor, who kept the Whittler girls from making a single field goal. The five points made by the Whittler girls were all obtained through fouls made by the Long Beach girls, thus giving the Whittler girls free throws. Another feature was the success of one of the Whittler Gor-

TENNIS POPULARIZ BY PASADENA

N EW YORK, Jan. 28.—(Exclusive Dispatch.) From conversation heard in clubs and abletic organizations, it is safe to say more lawn tennis will be played in 1965 than was played in 1964, and more was played in 1964 than in 1962.

The game seems to be traveling toward one of its periodical recurrences of general popularity. About every so often very general interest in tennis may be anticipated throughout the United States.

Curiously enough, those who seem to be in a good position to know, any that golf has had a great deal to do with reviving tennis interest.

"A great many," said a well-known solfer, the other day, "have made up their minds that they have gone just about as far in golf as they ever can hope to. They are able to knock the hall around the course at decent figures, but they cannot improve them. Golf has aroused their desire to take a part in outdoor exercise, and if they can't find a player against whom they can't find a player.

Must Be Treated Thoroughly and Competently to Effect Permanent Cures

There are many cases that have become chronic from lack of vital force, from a tendency to morbific changes, from malignant conditions of an organ, organic weakness, a depraved state of the blood, blood poisoning, contracted diseases, neglect and improper treatment. I cure the conditions by the most rational and scientific means. My treatment is the most effective ever employed. It will remove the direct cause. It will build up the run-down forces, and restore to health those weakened organs upon which so much is dependent. It drives every disease germ from the system by going to the very root of the disease, removes the EXACT CAUSE and effects a permanent cure.

A Thorough Examination Free of Charge and I wait for my fee until you are cured.

I Not Only Give Immediate Relief. But Effect a Permanent Cure. I Cure Men Soundly and Completely.

Not by Mail When I treat any of these conditions I will know what to do and how to do it. In this you are not disappointed and may know what you can depend upon. Certainty of a cure is what you want, not guess work.

.Chronic Diseases.

I completely and permanently cure any case I treat of Rectal, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Piles, Fistula and Blood Diseases.

VARICOCELE—I cure in 4 to 6 days. I remove the exact cause, this means a perfect and permanent cure; there is no other known treatment that will give like results in the same length of time. Varicocele is the direct cause of many weakened conditions. With my treatment a healthy circulation is established and all avil effects removed.

STRICTURE—My treatment is the most exhown. It brings immediate results, remove vestige of disease, inflammation, soreness and the membrane to a healthy condition. Usuall 15 days is sufficient, for the most aggravated conditions.

functional weakness—Many men are treated for this condition and fall to get relief. Improper treatment is worse than none. To effect a cure the exact cause must be removed by direct treatment personally conducted. I am positive the treatment I employ is the most potent, rational and certain whereby functional activity may be restored.

MANY NOW IN PASADENA.

The following from a Minneapolis paper of recent date contains some interesting gossip about automobilists of that city, who are either in Pasadena or coming:

One of the most familiar sights to be seen on the good wagon roads of California this winter will be an automobile bearing a license number between 400 and 1000. Especially will this be true in the vicinity of Pasadena, where a number of Minneapolitans are spending the winter and incidentally touring that section of the State.

The latest departure for the sunny climate of Southern California was that of Messra and Mmes. Thomas Sheviin and C. S. Brackett, who left last night for Pasadena. Mr. Shevlin shipped his large touring car two weeks ago, and while they are in California they will visit all the interesting spots that are accessible to the machine. They will visit clony in Pasadena will be Mr. and Mrs. John See, who will leave Minneapolis tonight. They will visit the Grand Cafion of Colgrado, and then proceed to the famous winter resort. Counsel reiterated his request that Prof. Warren be kept away from the children while the mother should have them practically under her immediate care at the home of Mrs. Akin.

"I would like to submit to the consideration of the court." said Prof. Warren in collected tones, in nowise disturbed apparently by the hideous insinuation just hurled at him, "the fact that masmuch as I am now under technical arrest for having assaulted this lady (Mrs. Akin,) and the case is still pending, it can hardly be considered that he is a disinterested person to have the custody of these children. Furthermore, she is a friend of the complainant here and for that interested party."

After making this dignified yet pointed objection to the suggestion of counsel on the other side. Prof. Warren said that he was perfectly willing that any proper person should safeguard the little ones, and that he had confidence in the court's discretion. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon he entered Judge Wilbur's court with Under Sheriff Yonkin and the children.

The little girl was apparently glad to see her mother, but the boy would not go near her, and resisted her overtures. When he realized that there was even a bare possibility of his being taken from his father he cried and shook himself free from his mother's hand.

Prof. Warren is alleged to have given this book to his two children for their perusal, and in addition to thus poisoning their minds it is averred that he so conducted himself toward them as to make it only charliable to assume that he is tainted in the same way as his father before him. On the Orn thand, it is established that Mrs. Warren filed a petition in the Probate Court at Canton, Ct., for the custody of the children, and the petition was dismissed. The southern and the western hills that rear themselves in the background are shapely barriers against chill, moist winds that from the sea would blow: but a road-wound pass at the southwest seems to have been specially arranged for the indrifting of the baimy trade wind at appropriate seasons of the year. Away in the northwest the anowy shoulders of Old Baldy are heaved high above the blue lifts of the Sierras, whose sunny, cafoned slopes give no hint of the snowdrifts that lie deep on the eastern side of the range. In sequestered places between the hills that skirt the western edge of the course, olive groves are tucked away. In and out among them private roadways are to wind, terraced and well kept. Costly Pasadena homes on the brow of the arroyo are glimpsed from Poppy Hill and neighboring knolls. The old Eagle Rock road is a white band in the middle distance, below. INTERESTING HUNTINGTON.

Last fall Maj. J. H. Campbell and E. H. Strafford proposed to Mr. Huntington that this section of the Campbell-Johnston ranch was ideally adapted to the purposes of an exclusive golf club and the building of fine suburban homes. Mr. Huntington went with them and looked over the ground, but reserved his decision.

Pending his answer a quiet round-up of many Los Angeles and Pasudena rich men, devotees of golf, was made, and when word came that Huntington would buy the 320 acres all the steps reliminary to the forming of a millionaires' golf club had been taken. Last week the deal with Huntington was closed, through his business manager, George S. Patton, and the syndicate referred to in a foregoing paragraph will presently be incorporated. It has no direct connection with the club.

Robert Watson of Garvanza, a Scotchman who has had wide experience in the laying out of golf courses in Scotland and England, has been engaged to plan and supervise the arrangement of the links. The course will be a full 18-hole, with a 3-hole course for ladies. This will be twice the size of the ordinary links. The location of the course is more central to Los Angeles and Pasadena than that of any other; the Huntington shortline (probably to be begun this summer) will cut through the Campbell-Johnston ranch and pass within one-fourth of a mile of the new cluthouse. The old Eagle Rock road (a county turnpike) bisects the course from east to west, and is the line which El Camino Real Association proposes to follow in restoring the King's Highway. The Campbell-Johnston ranch road skirts the course on the east, entering from Pasadena via the California-street bridge and giving entrance to Los Angeles via Garvanza and Pasadena avenue. Thus transportation ways to and from the links are pientiful.

"AND THERE IS NO POLICEMAN."

At a Japanese gathering in Ventura, where the fall of Port Arthur was celebrated, one of the little brown men with literary aspirations read the following quaint war address, setting out that Russia is the cause of all the trouble:

that Russia is the cause of all the trouble:

"Have you heard that the Russians compelled to leave Port Arthur about twenty days ago? What a pleasing news it is. But it is right natural because Russian is a robber to break down the peace of all the world, just as the eagle do to his race. Russian is enemy to the peace.

"Now you see Japan how esteems the right. Japan don't like fight in headstrong, but, you suppose now that there is a robber in the neighbors and take all the property, and come in yours by and by, and there is no policeman. Then what shall you do? No doubt you will resist him with arms. Thereupon Japan fight with Russian, besides has no ambitions.

"Therefore Japan victory means peace of the world and by and by we will seize upon and occupy Mukden, Vladivostok, Harbin and pretty soon we can see peace of the world."

The Yaquis were incensed at the failure of the Mexican government to grant to them all the lands along the Yaqui River. Not satisfied with the result of a conference with trov. Yaabel of Sonora at San Miguel, they started out on an expedition that later proved to be one of vengeance.

According to previous letters from Clarke, the Indians were incensed, not so much against Americans as against Mexicans. In one case the Indians murdered a Mexican at his home and at the same time killed an American who was his guest.

Just how the prospectors effected procession of gorgeous sunsets and sunrises, with glarious color effects, spiak, changing each moment and with each object the eye chances to rest before the control of th smoke on the horizon is from a locomutive hauling a load of crystals to the salt works on the margin of the waste.

We were in a populated country now, and to our camp-fire each night strolled inquiring residents. With thoroughly characteristic American bluntness came the almost invariable series of questions:

"Are you looking for land?"
"Are you prospecting?"
"Are you a government party?"
When negative replies had been returned to all three queries, there followed inevitably the amaged demand. "Then what in thunder are you doing here?"

We soon discovered that such explanations as "sunshine," "scenery" of "a holiday" merely provoked a laugh of incredulity. So we packed our wagon and stole on our homeward way, leaving behind us a trail of wonderment.

Even the genial editor of the Submarine bade us good-by with a wronged and a doubting look in his eyes. Had we struck gold on the Salton salt-pan, or discovered a pearling bed beneath the coral reef? Had we found a new remedy for tuberculosis in the sap of a cactus, or pegged off the site for an hotel and sanatorium in the Thousand Palm Cahon? Had we wrung from the stern, grim deserty yet another of its many secrets and wealth-bestowing potentialities? And, having done any or all of these things, were we deliberately robbing the enterprising local newspaper of its legitimate journalistic "scoop?" But it the day may come when ha will require a special shipping column, in which will be recorded the passenger lists of the numerous pleasure craft salling—on wheels, and with mulepower engines—in and out of these magic desert seas.

Did you ever figure out that when you pay a tailor to make a suit or overcoat, you at once place yourself in an un-business-like position?

We have convinced several thousand men that Alfred Benjamin & Co.'s clothing is better than any tailoring to be had in Los Angeles.

This isn't a "guess" or a "supposition," but an actual achievement. We have convinced all these men, including many of your own friends, that we can fit them better than their tailor-and "fit" is the whole battle.

No man objects to the fact that our clothing costs half what a tailor

We are so sure of this clothing, we guarantee a suit to hold its shape. Tailors don't do that.

In point of style, Alfred Benjamin garments so far exceed local tailoring that no man, however prejudiced he may be in favor of tailoring, can help admitting the fact.

These reasons have attributed to the phenomenal growth of this store. Men who want and enjoy wearing good clothing, come here. We do not draw comparisons between Alfred Benjamin's clothing and ready-made clothing. There isn't any comparison. Gream and milk are no wider difference. Simply in price is Benjamin's clothing like other makes.

We'll do our best to please you. Try this modern clothing and you'll wonder how you ever got along without it.

We are clearing up winter weights in our $20.00 to $25.00 men's suits. They are Alfred Benjamin's cleverest styles. Tweeds, cheviots, and novelty materials. Absolutely perfect in fit and strictly hand tailored throughout. You'll wear one of these suits with more pleasure than any $35.00 tailormade suit you could secure in the city.

Alfred Benjamin's Evening Attire

In no class of garments does Alfred Benjamin's tailoring stand more apart than in evening dress—full dress suits, tuxedos, Prince Alberts.

This apparel has an air of dignity and richness not to be had in local tailoring. Prices half what your tailor would ask. Any tailor in the land would tell you, if you had his confidence, that a tailor counts on disappointing at least one patron out of every two customers whenever it's a matter of a full dress suit or a tuxedo. Alfred Benjamin garments can't disappoint you because you can see just how they look before you purchase.

Insidiously, persistently, tirelessly, the land grabbers are working to gobble up what remains of the public domain before it can be acquired by home builders. Westigers makes his words worthy of some consideration, at least.

How to big the Canal.

Review upon "The Panama Canal From a Contractor's Standpoint," George W. Crichfield makes a strong plea for a sea-level canal. Mr. Crichfield evidently speaks from a thorough knowledge of his subject—a fact which makes his words worthy of some consideration, at least.

The substance of Mr. Crichfield's remarks is that the best way to dig the Panama Canal is—to dig it. He maintains that a sea-level canal is much to be preferred to a canal with locks, and that in order to have a sea-level canal it is only necessary to dig cirt. The amount of earth to be dug out is, of course, enormous. But the undertaking is colossal under any circumstances. The building of locks will be expensive, while the removal of dirt will be inexpensive by comparison, because of the cheaper tools and the cheaper labor required. The lock systems, he points out, would be especially vulnerable in time of war, besides being "dangerous, difficult and costly." He believes that the most troublesome part of the entire work will be custly in more senses than one; for with the best sanitary precautions known to science it will probably cost a great many human lives. This part of the work will have to be done in any event, whether the canal be built with locks or at sea level, although the dredging would have to be much deeper for the sea-level canal.

The question of labor is, of course, proposition in a constitution of the ment for Moral Back, Railer, Moral Back, It is at the en invitation in a constitution of the constitution of peons of the low ands of Mexico, Central America and South America, and that they should be under American and German superintendence. For the practical conduct of the work, he recommends that the job be cut up into suitable sections, and that bids be advertised for separately on these sections. In his opinion, the work would thus be completed far more quickly and satisfactorily than if the government should undertake to prosecute it with labor employed by itself.

The foregoing suggrestions have, no doubt, ere this been brought to the attention of the canal commissioners. They are surely worthy of careful consideration. As for the sea-level canal, our engineers have long been convinced that it would furnish the most thorough solution of the problem, but the vast amount of work involved in the cuiting down of the Culebra ridge has deterred them from urging it. That the sea-level canal would be the most sconomical and the most satisfactory in the end is altogether probable. By a combination of modern excavating machinery with efficient but comparatively low-priced labor, the big ditch could probably be dug from sea to sea, without locks, almost as cheaply as we could construct the canal on a higher level, with the necessary locks. Upon the question of building the canal in sections, by private contract, there is plenty of room for divergence of opinion. The plan has much to recommend it, and there is much that may be said against it. In the letting and fulfillment of contracts and subcontracts of so great magnitude there would be endiess opportunity for fraud and "graft," while if the work were performed by the government, under the immediate direction of its own engineers, this danger would be reduced to a minimum, though it would not then be altogether absent. The private contract plan would probably facilitate the work considerably, for excavation could be in progress simultaneously all along the line of the canal. It would be necessary literally to "remove mountains" in order to excavate a sea-level canal. B The only periment question is: "What so we need to do?" not "How can we io it?"

Scarcely a day passes in Los Angeles that the newspapers de not record some story of shame, where a young man with a bright future has ruined his prospects, taking money that did not belong to him and gambling it away on the races. Many a white-headed parent sits today with head-headed parent sits today with head-headed parent sits today with head-headed parent sits today with headheaded parent sits today with head bowed in grief mourning over the downfall of his hope and pride. It is sad, sad story. A race track is like a gigantic cancer, spreading its deadly venom through the whole community. All over town, in every place of public resort, you see scattered around re-ports of the races, and on every side taken to gambling, and are neglecting obliging friend, an appearance in the divorce court, the brothef, morphine, a suicide's grave. Overdrawn, you may say. Not at all. Only too common is say. Not at all. Only too common is such a story as this.

Gambling is among the worst of all vices that afflict humanity. When once a man is thoroughly infected with the gambling fever he is done for, mentally, physically, spiritually.

It is true that dealing on Wall street is gambling—ga is gambling—gambling pure and sim-ple—but it does far less harm than the race truck, because the latter is patron-ized by millions, whereas the former is only available to thousands. It is like

THE TEST OF A SOUL.

A few days ago Booker Washing ton accepted an invitation to address the Legislature, the Supreme Court and the State officers of Kansas. Upon the day fixed he waiked to the Capitol building in Topeka, arm in arm with the Governor, and was received by the distinguished audience that awaited him with every possible show of honor and respect. It was a day of glory for the great leader of the black race.

Oftentimes, however, as this world goes, the day of glory is followed by the day of shame. The world has a way of lifting men up to pedestals for the mere sport of knocking them down again. Mr. Washington found this to be the case in his Kansas experience, for the following night, while in the town of Wichita, neighboring Topeka, he could not find a hotel that would harbor him nor give him a morsel to eat. Fresh from the accilant and an analysis of the world have to make good a few of his boasts or go eat. Fresh from the acclaim and ap-plause of the capital where he was showered with honors, he was upon the very next day forced to walk the

He was obliged at last to seek the shelter of a humble fellow negro's home in order to find a place to lay his head.

All this, of course, brings up again the eternal negro question. Upon that question enough has been said and it is not the purpose here to reopen it for argument. But it is in order that another pains of view of a case of this In the campaign which the entomolo-gists of the University of California are about to open against insects, it is to be hoped that some attention will be given to the parasites which afflict

And that point of view is the barbarous crueity with which we seek to test the greatness of the human soul. Perhaps it is well that the soul should be tested, sometimes, but it is inhuman and unnecessary that the trial should be so severe and so relentiessly harsh as it is in the case of Booker Washington. He is a great man with a great A New York man has sued a firm of druggists for selling his wife morphine without his knowledge. He is too great, too noble and too unselfish to be treated like a dog by any one in any town in America. But the real question is how great must a great soul be to bear up under such treatment? How long can it bear the burden and not break? Under the black skin of Booker Washington there is a nature as fine and as sensitive is a nature as fine and as sensitive in its make-up as is the nature of any Caucasian. Every day of his life he is subjected to insult and ignominy at the hands of people who are not fit to be mentioned in the same breath with him as far as the essential qualities of heart and mind and character are concerned. Yet almost every waking hour of his existence he is subjected to the withering scorn and the undisguised contempt of his fellow-man, sknply because God sent him forth with a dark

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]
CITY OF MEXICO, Jan. 19.—The awakening of Japan, or rather the awakening of the world by Japan, may mean much to Mexico. Already, as tated in my last letter, a high official of that government has come to Mexico to investigate the sugar possibilities of this country. As a matter of fact, Mexico will this year exportionly 20 per cent. of her sugar product, leaving the rest in the country to meet its own growing demands. But Japan has evidently tired of the beet sugar poured into the country by Germany, and wants cane sugar, and furthermore thinks Mexico can let her have some out of her big sugar-bowl, framed in the mountains of Morelos, Japan consumes sugar to the value of $20,000,000 in gold each year, and raises scarcely one-twentieth of that amount. This is raised in the island of Formosa, the only portion of the empire that raises sugar. Mexico has had intimate relationships with the Extreme Orient, and the Mexican peach, except by the long-sea route of the Seac Canal, is vis the Trans-Siberian Railway.

Nevertheless. Mexico has had no commercial relations worth mention of that government has come to amount. This is raised in the island of Formesa, the only portion of the empire that raises sugar. Mexico has had intimate relationships with the Extreme Orient, and the Mexican peso has held its own as the favorite currency of the yellow races. Mexico, furthermore, is a nearer market to the East than are the old countries of the European continent, whose only appreach, except by the long-sea route of the Suez Canal, is via the Trans-Siberian Railway.

Nevertheless. Mexico has had no commercial relations worth mentioning with China and Japan. Even its pesos go to the eastern market via pesos go to the eastern market via one in the stormy days of the early New York or San Francisco and even via London. One reason, of course, is that Mexico has as yet no Pacific ports capable of receiving and forwarding products direct to the East.

We dee, Miss Arline G. Meade, Miss A warding products direct to the East, for no railroads yet connect central aexico with the Pacific. When one of the seven roads now heading for the tentral and the seven roads now heading for the californias and for Central and South America, but also to the far-away Cathay that has wakened since the days of Tennyson. Medican peace going to China, Japan and the Philippines, carried the eagles of Mexico across the sea, but not the eagles of conquest; they were and are those of conquest; they were that bankless country, some day they will spend those burled millions.

THE TOBACCO INDUSTRY.

THE TOBACCO INDUSTRY. The statistics just prepared by the Department of Encouragement show that the tobacco crop of Mexico during 1904 amounted to 2250 tons. That exported has steadily declined, until last year it was barely 300 tons, the rest of the product being consumed in the Mexican market. The tobacco imported into. Mexico last year was valued at $200,000 gold, the most of it

It is a fact not generally known, that Mexico leads the United States in the consumption of cigarettes. The consumption in Mexico last year was 3,456,000,000 cigarettes, while in the United States it was 3,306,487,215. Per capita, and bearing in fact the smoking capabilities of the two Republics. the proportion in the United States was one to five in Mexico. There are manufactured in this city 280 different kirds of cigarettes, and Mexican to-bacco is used in the manufacture of all these distinct classes. The largest all these distinct classes. The largest plants in the world are in this city; they employ nearly 2500 persons, and the daily output of the three factories is 12,000,000 clgarettes. Their out-put is not sufficient for the local needs from France, Egypt, and other tobacco rom France, keypt, and other totales manufacturing countries.

Pulque is such a staple that its market is seldom builed or beared. Its price remains practically the same, year after year, while the supply and demand increase phenomenally. But the traffic in this white curse of Mexico has just received a rude joil Clavillo. The sensational report that there is the traffic in this white curse of Mexico has just received a rude jolt. Clavillo, a pest, has appeared in the maguey districts in the States of Puebla and Tiaxcals, that is attacking the plants and vitiating them, and thus decreasing the supply. This may soon cause a rise in price, and incidentally further the cause of temperance by causing less drinking in Mexico.

If the railroad schemers really want to weaken President Roosevelt's staying qualities, it might be a good idea for them to buy Mike Donovan off.

After a calm survey of the bunch of new Senators elected by other States, it would appear that, Missouri might as well elect Col. Dick Kerens.

The two most familiar headlines in eastern newspapers at the present writing are "Found Frozen to Death," and "Lost in the Snow."

Perhaps it is only fair to state that this notorious Chicago person, Johann Hoch, is not in any way related to Hoch der Kaiser.

It will also be noted with regret that the situation in Morocco has become binding.

THE TRIBUNE ALMANAC.

In Horace Greeley's time the Tribune Almanac became famous as a political handbook and it retains its reputation today. In recent years the volume has been greatly enlarged and the issue for 1905 thas 416 pages. Its information is in compressed form, readily accessible and reliable. The election tables are exceptionably extensive and there is a governmental roster which will prove of general interest.

Since "the great frost of 1832" FlorMa has been steadily recuperating from the ravages of the cold wave which in that year came near putting the Everglade State out of the orange industry for good. Whole groves, representing hundreds of thousands of deliars in private and business fortunes, had to be torn up by the roots and replanted.

And new, again comes the news that the Frost King has crossed FlorMan "frostless beit" and stalked with white, noiseless feet among her fair groves and gardens, sowing ruin by wholesale in the night. Dispatches estimate that 300,000 boxes of oranges, in blossom and fruit, have been destroyed, end that the greater part of crops are lost.

Such bitter tales as these bring home to us of the real Southland the glorles of the heritage that Nature's God has here bestowed.

The anti-prise-fight bill now under consideration by the Legislature was given a strong and dignified boost the other day when William Greer Harrison, S'frisco's social arbiter, clubman and patron of clean athletica, appeared before the solons to urge its passage. Mr. Harrison gave his word, which in this as in other matters of public import is a creditable one, that pre fighting in California is debauching amateur athletics and turning amateur athletes into professional brulsers. Mr. Harrison lives in a city where crooked boxing has been developed to a high state of financial productiveness, and no one knows it better than this polished guide, philosopher and friend of the Olympic Club. Here in Los Angeles "we" have succeeded in raking in huge harvests of the Fellow rocks without recourse to ring faking, so "our" glass house at least has wooden shutters. But whether it be crooked or "on the level," the prize fight as an affair is deplorably unsportsmanlike and as an institution is brutish and demoralising. It draws together the liowest and most victous characters, and by its open brutality whips them into a mad fury of bestial passion. It is un-Californian and un-American. It should be banished beyond the borders of the State.

Alderman Tom Carey, who ripr'sints the immemorial Stockyards District in Chicago's City Council, has left his string of horses in humbler hands at Ascot Park and hied him homeward, whither beckoned by matters of state. And yet some people fling stones at the class of citizens who patronise racing in this town! Why, Alderman Carey stands as high as "Bathhouse John" or even "Hinky Dink." But there's no pleasing the "longhairs."

Forest planting on a most extensive scale, not bythe government, but by private individuals, is now proposed for some of the many uncultivated hills in Southern California.

At least, so declares Edmund E. Wigston of Oregon, who passed through Los Angeles yesterday on his way to the City of Mexico, where he is going on a business trip in connection with land deals.

Mr. Wierston said yesterday: "The matter of forest preservation, agitated by government officials and irrigation promoters throughout the entire West, is most interesting, and merits serious study on the part of thinking individuals. It seems, however, that forest production—the raising of actual timber on land not held by the government, has been omitted in these calculations.

"A business concern now proposed in Oregon is investigating tree planting on private lands, with two ends in view; first, the establishment of watersheds and rights which may be used to advantage, and next the use of matured forest trees for lumber purposes.

"Throughout California, as in other to advantage, and next the use of matured forest trees for lumber purposes.

"Throughout California, as in other parts of the Pacific States, thousands of acres of untillable land are to be found on the hilitops and cafon lands. This land is used for grazing in the wet seasons, and in other months of the year runs to rocks and bushy undergrowth. Much of this land is owned by private estates; in Southern California some of it is held in great grants and subdivisions of grants made by the old Mexican government; it is in most instances regarded as an incumbrance, and a most unvaluable asset.

"My investigation looks toward the leasing of some of these lands for long terms, with the benefits that may come from any improvements going to the lessees. The original outlay will not be great, provided the system of tillage and cultivation is done scientifically, and in time the returns will be great.

"Scientific attention to the work is the whole secret of profit in the investment. If it is not undertaken scientifically the entire scheme will prove a South Pacific bubble of colossal asininity.

"Many trees would not grow at all

"While the Grizzly Glant is the greatest in girth it is not the tailest, being not over 150 feet in height, while the highest tree of which I know in the park towers 155 feet above this.

"For a long time the Grizzly Glant has shown signs, of failing. It has been decaying, I should say, for about 1600 years. It leans very much to one side and the possibility of its toppling over is such that the commissioners have considered the feasibility of supporting it with heavy cables."

Appointed commissioner and guardian of Yosemite Park at the time it was ceeded to California by the Federal government in 1884, Mr. Clark held those positions, for sixteen years, and again in 1889 he was appointed guardian, serving eight years.

Throughout his long terms of office and during the intervening time he maintained his residence in the park and is one of the few men who have pnssed entire winters in the valley. With snow sometimes at a level of ten feet, he and his companions made their way about the wonderland on snowshoes. One danger that beset them was from great avalanches of snow that at times slid from precipitous heights and fell into the valley. These snowsildes the old guardian likered to waterfalls.

rad to a biting cross-examination. Soon the examination took a political trend. Conrad admitted that he had told friends who were delogates to the Republican convention that if Wismer was nominated he, Conrad, would resign. Conrad also admitted that Assessor Lewis had told him at different times that as soon as he got rid of Nunnaley Conrad should have the chief deputyship.

Conrad said that he kept the time for two months, marking the days deputies were absent. He turned this statement of time over to Nunnaley, but the latter discarded it and allowed all the deputies "full time."

City Accountant Bostwick testified that he had frequently gone to the Assessor's office for information regarding assessed valuations and that his experience with Nunnaley was decidedly unsatisfactory; that information which should have been handed out right off the reel was not forthcoming for three or four days.

James A. Noel, a former deputy in the Assessor's office, testified that Nunnaley was considered by the rest of the office force as a huge joke; that he had frequently seen Nunnaley in the office force as a huge joke; that he had frequently seen Nunnaley in the office force as a huge joke; that he had frequently seen Nunnaley in the office force as a huge joke; that he had frequently seen Nunnaley in the office force as a huge joke; that he defice hi a state of intoxication and that he saw Nunnaley done sked him for $15 to get Wismer a diamond ring; he declined to give up and was soon afterwards laid off. But in cross-examination Noel societ the frect of this by testifying that he drew full pay for this time off, Noel accused Nunnaley of taking insurance statements in the office which should have been taken in the field. He said Nunnaley, was agent for a fire insurance company and that he heard Nunnaley tell on vour assessment."

fire-engine test between the La France and Nott companies, the Fire Commission yesterday afternoon referred the report of the special test commission to the Council.

In a cañon of Elysian Park, by a big reservoir, machines of the competing companies spouted and puffed for two days under the guidance of expert engineers, while a commission of machinists took notes of the behavior of the two engines. This test is to determine which make of engine shall be used by the local fire department. The committee's report is said to be something in the nature of a compromise, each machine being credited with a certain percentage of victories. The Council has the final purchase to make public its recommendation.

This was on the ten new indictments of the Riverside grand jury. Four of these indictments run jointly against. Tom Hays and Maj. John W. A. Diss, former general right-of-way agent for the Salt Lake Railway Company, being felony charges of obtaining money under false pretenses.

The other six indictments are against Tom Hays alone, and were based on the old bank steals, ranging in amounts from 150e upwards, the total amounting to probably $10,000.

It had been arranged that Hays and Disa were to meet in Los Angeles yeswaluation clerk under former Assessor Wismer.

He said that right after the Republican convention Wismer and Nunnaley called him into the Assessor's office. There Wismer said that he was through with the office and turned the management of affairs over to Conrad. Nunnaley about the same time showed a lively interest in Ascot Park races. Conrad estimated that Nunnaley went to the races at least fifteen times during the month of December, Conrad was then keeping the time of the deputies in the office. Nunnaley exhibited pool tickets, was sometimes clated ore winning, again downcast over failures of good things which failed to come through.

Attorney Meservé, representing the accused chief deputy, subjected Conrad to a biting cross-examination. Soon the examination took a political trend. Conrad admitted that he had told friends who were delegates to be Republican convention that if Wismer was nominated he, Conrad, would resist. Course also admitted that Assessor Lewis had told him at different times that as soon as he got rid of Nunnaley Conrad should have the chief deputyship.

Conrad said that he kept the time for two months, marking the days deputies were absent. He turned this statement of time over to Nunnaley.

Alt the line of the pure sworn out before the suggestion of the next meeting of a the grand jury, Judge Noyes made the statement that he would see to it that a grand jury, Judge Noyes made the sarand jury, Judge Noyes made the statement that he would go before them and urge them to "go to it." This, it is add that he formed the court is and that he courted that he had told friends who were delegates to be Republican convention that if Wismer was nominated he, Conrad, would resident to the court is and that he was considered useless to proceed with the justice court asses.

It is understood that the new indications to proceed; and the case will doubtless have a hearing on that date.

PUEBLO PROTESTS.

INVOKES MEXICAN GOVERNMENT Dumb as a brute led to the slaughter, Juan Antonio Pueblo has sat through-out his trial for the murder committed seven years ago in Santa Monica Cafion, but when about to be sentenced smith yesterday he lifted his voice in protest.

Pueblo spoke through an interpreter, but the flash of his now animated face and the raps of his hand as he struck the table to accentuate his remarks plainly indicated what he thought and the way he felt.

Pueblo murdered Albundio Garcia in Badillo's saloon in the cafeon on August 13, 1888. Until a vety recent period he contrived to clude the law officers, for the reason that he skipped over into Mexico, of which country he is a native. But Chief of Police Hammel heard that Pueblo was working close to the line and sometimes came over into United States territory. The Chief and Police Officer Talamantes went down to San Diego as a point of vantage from which to watch for a chance to arrest Pueblo. Talamantes and a companion, it is claimed, discovered Pueblo in Mexico working in an outlying camp, and there laid hands upon him. They brought him across the border to Campo, in San Diego county. Chief of Police Hammel was informed that Pueblo the jury found the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed the punishment at imprisonment for life. When asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed the look of dogged resignation that had distinguished Pueblo disappeared. He straightened up and answered that he had.

"Td like the Mexican Consul to be here so that it may be known where I concern," responded Judge Smith mavely, "which can be settled by the smavely, "which can be settled by the respective governments at any time."

"That's just the reason," sharply answered Pueblo, "that I want the matter brought under the notice of Mexico at the present time."
The defendant concluded his harrangue by saying that he was not satisfied with the proceedings and the passing of sentence. The court said that he was not surprised, there being very few men who like to take the punishment meted out to them. Pueblo was then formally sentenced to be imprisoned for life at San Quentin.

As a last and parting shot the defendant voiced his indignation.
"I don't think it just for sentence to be passed under these circumstances."
"It will do you no good to express."

McCarty and made G. W. Bothweil party defendant.

Erickson owned a tract of land at Imperial and forty shares of Imperial Water Company, No. 5, stock, represented by two certificates. The first of these was issued to the Sunset Commercial Company by Bothweil as president; the other was issued by the president and endorsed to the plaintiff and by him endorsed later to McCarty. The latter toid Erickson that he had a little piece of desirable land in San Diego, quite close in and only eight blocks from the St. James' Hotel. He said it was worth $400, and he wanted to change it for the Imperial property and was willing to make up the difference in value with two shares of the Grapeland Irrigation District, for $500 and $100 respectively, and top it off with his note for $600. As Erickson valued his land and water at $1000 the proposition appeared fair and the trade was mande. But then the plaintiff avers that he found out that the land, shares, and personal note were not worth altogether more than $35. The land in stead of being close to the St. James' Hotel was nearly four miles from that hostelry. The courts had long ago declared the Grapeland Irrigation District bonds to be only so much waste paper, and McCarty's personal note was about in the same category. Erickson says that he has heard that Bothweil claims some kind of interest in his old property by reason of advances made, and for that reason brought him mite the suit. He asks that an infunction issue against McCarty protubiting him from disposing of the property in his possession and that the deeds and assignments set aside.

COLORED MAN PLEASED. Fred Andrews, a colored young man, went into court yesterday with a face as long as a fiddle. He was ready to plead guilty to an assault with a deadly weapon, but he was afraid of a long term in prison. He acknowledged with a bad grace that he had fired two shots at Albert Bynam, both of which missed their mark, but said that he didn't intend to do the man any particular harm: He was only returning the compliment of a crack over the skull with a rock. Judge Smith sentenced Andrews to one year at San Quentin, and at once the face of the defendant almost split in two with the heartiness of his laughter. Has Acquired a Competence.

[Dayton Herald:] Nestling among the snow-clad, derrick-capped hills of Sugar Creek, Venango county, Pa., in the heart of the great Galender oil district, is the home of "Ad." Moffit. Moffit is the brother-in-law of J. W. Steele, known to history as "Coal Oil Johnny," the man who years ago became famous as the greatest spend-thrift in the United States, and whose story was used as an object lesson.

Although reported dead times without number, and as an immate of charitable institutions just as often. "Coal Oil Johnny" is today living in comfortable circumstances in the home of his brother-in-law. The latter, when asked if it were true that Steele had acquired a second competence, replied: "I wish I had as much." And Mofit is well supplied with this world's goods.

Time has dealt gently with "Coal Oil Johnny." He does not look like a man who threw away money in handfuis in his youth. In the heyday of his career he was a red-cheeked, full-faced, muscular fellow, good looking in a wholesome way. Today he is pretty well preserved, although he has deep wrinkles around his eyes, and the lines about his mouth are eloquent. His cheek and jaw bones are terominent, and his cheeks sunken. He is a quiet, self-possessed man who realizes the value of a dollar.

He is industrious, and during the summer and fall is seen about Franktin bringing garden produce to customers.

"I was born in Mercer county, Pa."

Stomach and TAFE WORMS, Somach, Intestinal, Thread Worms and Bowel Troubles all other parasites which infest the human body, which are the cause of so many Chronic Troubles, can be removed without inconvenience or fasting.

One of the most prominent symptoms of the presence of parasites is the accumulation of mucus in the stomach and bowels. This mucus, which is formed by these parasites, adheres to the sides of the intestines and in time commences to show itself in the stoois. This condition, which is no more or less than a symptom, is in hundreds of cases treated as catarrh of the stomach and bowels. It has been the history of every case we have treated that the ormation of his mucus ceases after the thorough removal of these parasites. In the past year we have cured hundreds of cases of se-called stomach trouble, and have absolutely cured five cases of epilepsy. We diagnose and tell you whether you have any of these parasites or not. All charges for treatment are moderate. No charge if you are not satisfied.

Consultation and diagnosis free. Hours 9 a.m. to 12, 1 to 4 p.m.

breakfast was in honor of a young girl who has made a hit with a new book, and is being lionized quite a bit by the smart people.

But to return to our luncheon. Mrs. Van Cott and May both rose as we entered the drawing-room, and the latter's very self-satisfied, complacent look, when she offered us her hand, should have aroused our suspicions.

should have aroused our suspicions. Only buds, the smartest in Aunt Eleanor's set, by the way (forgive my modesty) were present, so our inno-cence may be forgiven. There is one satisfying feature connected with entertaining in New York. Guests, as a rule, are punctilious about arriving on the minute. Unless a wheel flies off their carriage or they hidden by the silence cloth and gleam ing damask. If a bare table with open work doilies is desired, then the smaller polished top must be used. Mrs. Van Cott's top cloth was of very fine, plain linen with a deep border and broad, circular centerpiece of filet lace. The only floral decortion was a slender cut-giass vase holing perfectly-formed pink rosebud not more than a dozen blossoms. not more than a dozen blossoms, imagine. There is a marked revival of simple, airy effects in table decorations, and great ribbon bows, corsage bouquets or luncheon souvenirs are considered bad form. The only touch wheel flies off their carriage or they are arrested for motor scorching, they all reach the home of the hostess within ten minutes of the hour named on the invitation, so there is no tiresome wait. Therefore, at 1:30 exactly, when the last of the fourteen buds crossed the threshold of the drawing-room, the all-wise butler appeared between the curtains and said, quietly: "Luncheon is served."

Mrs. Van Cott led the way to the dining-room, and as there was no were at table. The first course was ly: "L'acheon is served."

Mrs. Van Cott led the way to the dining-room, and as there was no guest of honor, she took her place at what might be ternied the head of the round table, with May directly opposite, while we found our places between the two, on either side, by means of dainty plate cards, handpainted, with thy love knots and wreaths of roses.

By the way, I want to explain a clever trick for altering the size of your round table. The highly polished

The process of digestion was then halted with a sherbet colored a delicate pink and served in high, slender glasses, which are just now enjoying online a vogue. After this. joying quite a vogue. After this, squabs with heart of romaine salad and French dressing. Exquisitely delicate cakes were served with the ice cream, which came in individual formers. figures, miniature Cupids in pale strawberry cream, carrying gided bows and arrows. This course pre-pared us for the announcement which came with the coffee when Mrs. Van Cott said, very quietly: "It gives me great pleasure to feel that you, who have shared with my daughter the pleasures of her first season in society, should be, also, the first to hear of her engagement to Mr. John Doug-las Cartwright. Their marriage will occur at Easter."

There was one of those trying, breathless instants of utter amazement, and then we came out of the trance (for be it known that May is one of the youngest debutantes) and wished her much joy. As young Carticle is convenient in we thought a luncheon, but here, with the season rushing mady to its close, everything is done quickly and informally, and at the majority of luncheons and breakfasts we have laid aside only our heavy wraps as at a reception. MOVEMENT OF "MOSQUITO" PLEET, ARRIVED-SATURDAY, JAN. 28. No arrivals today. SAILED.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.-A gang of 200 ing snow for the city and had seen ing snow for the city and had seen gang after gang of Italians employed, finally lost patience and began a series of attacks on the Italians. They punched and kicked the Italians, took away their shovels, picks and scrapers and broke the tools.

The men were enraged because they claimed the Italians got the jobs, some the proving to redeeme?

ers and broke the tools.

The men were enraged because they claimed the Italians got the jobs, some by paying to padrones 25 cents each and others by paying 5 cents an hour for every tour they worked. The showlers receive 25 cents an hour and it was ascertained later that the padrone story was true.

Many of the thinly clad and hungry men, waiting hour after hour in line, saw themselves passed over again and again because they did not have 25 cents to pay the padrone. Some were homeless, others had wives and children who were waiting for them to bring home food.

When word was sent to the waiting ones that no more men would be hired until Saturday they marched on the Italians in a body. There were eighty in the first party attacked and most of them took to their heels. The few who did resist were badly beaten.

The attackers were dispersed by the police, but got together and continued their work.

BATTLE CONTINUES.

SZEFANGTAI (Sixty versits southwest of Mukden) Jan. 28, via Pekin, Jan. 29.—[By Asiatic Cable.] A battle commenced at daylight January 25. The right flank, reinforced by troops from the east, began a movement against the Japanese left. One corps, leaving Szefangtai at midnight, January 24, marched about seven miles southwest, and at daylight attacked.

The infantry, backed by artillery, drove the Japanese from two villages at midday, after a sharp fight, and continued to make progress, the rest of the right flank becoming engaged. The Russian artillery fire was heavy, but the Japanese remained almost silent.

It is snowing and bitterly cold, and the troops eagerly seek the protection of the villages, which, in this district, have escaped destruction.

January 26, there was a heavy fire along the right flank front and an advance was made. The wind at the Russians' backs drove the snow into the faces of the Japanese, and it was very difficult to see any distance. Once Siberian rifles suffered.

January 27, the fighting continued on the right flank, but it does not seem to be developing along the center or eastern flank.

Great Grain and Stock Ranch

Situate nine miles west from Red Bluff, Tehama County, California. Rail and steamboat transportation. 8000 acres of this ranch produced 45,000 bags of grain in one season. Crop sold for $100,000.

Government reports show average rainfall there for fifteen years of 25.56 inches annually.

This ranch will carry 5000 head of cattle, 3000 hogs in addition to its grain production. Soil is alluvial, highly adapted to fruit and vines. Crops never fail there.

FOR COLONIZATION PURPOSES THIS OFFERS A SUPERIOR OPPORTUNITY.

It will supply productive homes for 100 families. One man has farmed it heretofore.

His recent demise has caused representatives to instruct us to sell it at much less than its recently appraised value.

This is the land of certain and abundant rainfall and sure crops.

Will sell as a whole or to a number of people at one time in sub-divisions to suit at the same price, five dollars and sixty cents an acre. This ranch cost owner $250,000 twenty years ago.

Every hour brings the beach season closer and closer. Venice of America will be the paramount attraction of the entire Coast line during the coming season, and advancing prices will be the feature of this property. We have set forth with a great deal of detail the various attractions of this magnificent planned seaside residence city. The only further word we have to say, and we want to say it strong, is this-"BUY NOW." You'll be glad to pay an advance on today's prices within two months. This is not the shop talk of a real estate salesman, but a condition that is bound to work itself out.

We ask those desiring a seaside home in the most desirable -the most exclusive and the most beautiful location on the sea front, to call at our office and make arrangements to visit the property. Hundreds of thousands of dollars ARE BEING EXPENDED by Mr. Abbot Kinney in improvements at the PRESENT TIME. Nothing is left to the future. Venice of America is a proposition of today, for the people of today. We urge no person to buy-but we do urge careful investigation. Go down and see for yourself. WE AREN'T BROKE

Last May we started to do an unheard-of thing. We began to sell high-class lots in good locations at $10.00 down and $1.00 per week. People predicted failure, but we arn't broke yet. It Caught On. The public appreciated our efforts. We did a wonderful business, and now we have many imitators. Imitators, however, never equal the originals. We were the first to offer high-class property on easy terms, and we have stuck to this policy.

ELYSIAN PARK TRACT

Elysian Park Tract has been on the market but a short time. It is building up rapidly with fine homes and a very desirable class of people. No other tract in the city offers so many advantages at more than double the price. Elysian Park Tract lots are selling, for the city has built a fine schoolhouse adjoining the tract, as you will notice in the above cut. There are no bridges or railroads to cross in getting to this property. Prices will be advanced on all the lots we have left in the tract the first day of March Make your selections before the choice lots are all taken or the prices go up. Do it now.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Within two or three days the House Committee of Rivers and Harbors will have put the finishing touches to the Rivers and Harbors Appropriation Bill, and the measure, which has been in course of preparation for about two months, will be brought into the light of day. Just how much money is carried in the bill cannot be told now, but it is said that it carries a new appropriation of $250,000 for Wilmington Harbor, Cal., so the work upon that project will be put in shape to be pushed forward until Wilmington Harbor has become a fit complement to San Pedro Harbor.

In their official report to the German government, Drs. Ohlmuller and Praliset forth the following condusions:
First—By the treatment of water with otone a remarkable destruction of bacteria is produced, and in this regard ozonization is in general superior to separation of bacteria by sand filtration.

Second—The cholera and typhus bacilli are destroyed.

Third—Viewed from a chemical point of view the water is affected only in of ar that the oxidability is reduced and free oxygen increased, both of which mean an improvement of the water.

Fourth—The ozone which is introduced in the water is of no importance from a technical or health affecting onsideration, as it rendily changes into oxygen.

Fifth—The treatment of it improves the water by making it colorless. Sixth—The taste is not affected, etc. Primary advantages are:

First—That it is a clean mechanical arrangement, securing a perfect regularity in operation without interruption from ice, conditions of weather, etc. Second—That: in times of threatening danger by epidemics the quantity of some can be increased or the mount of water handled decreased.

Are you interested in business property values on S. Main street? Are you on the lookout for a logical, substantial investment, where the future carning power of your money is assured? If so, we ask you to consider 63x16? feet on S. Main, near Washington. This property has the certainty of a 8008 advance inside one year at the price now fished, 5000. Think this over, and if skeptical, get a few prices down that way. This will convince you that this frontage is not only cheap, but can be financied with $200, balance 5 per cent. OUR COSMOPOLITAN SCHOOLS.

N EWCOMERS to Los Angeles need not feel lonely.
Whatever be the State of the Union whence they hall, they will find that folks from the old home neighborhood have proceded them, while if they be travelers from afar, they will be quite sure to meet here a goodly number of their countrymen, settled in the Far West under the flag that has always welcomed good citizens of all nations, and afforded them opportunities under its protecting folds to achieve pros perity and happiness such as many of them would never have enjoyed in their old lands. It may be said without fear of contradiction that Los Angeles is not only the most cosmopolitan city of its size on the American continent, but it is also the most thoroughly resentative of all America. Sweeping assertions of kind are sometimes made, without the production of documentary evidence or the power to produce it But the proof of what we say lies at our hand. We take the last annual report of the Los Angeles Board of Education, and we turn to a couple of pages where the nativity of the school children is set forth in statistical form. Though the columns of figures look dry as dust, from them can be read a most interesting For by the children shall the fathers and the be known, and from these records youth in our midst we can get a fair idea of the ele combining to make up our citizenship,

Well, there are just close upon 31,000 children enrolled in the public schools of Los Angeles. About one-half of these, 16,028 to give the precise figures, are Californian-born. It may be taken for certain that only a small proportion of them are Californians in the second generation. Their fathers mostly came from other States or across the ocean, and the school statistics give us no information as to their nationality. But it is a reasonable assumption that the parents of these 16,000 young Californians are pretty much the same sprinkling of all States and nations as those of the 15,000 other children from whom we get a clear and direct clue. It is therefore only with the latter contingent, those born outside the State of California, hat we need concern ourselves for the purposes of this investigation.

Every State and every Territory has sent its quotum Illinois has been our most industrious colonizer, for no fewer than 1474 children record the Prairie State as the place of their nativity. Kansas with 916, Missouri with 881, Colorado with 766, Iowa with 743, Texas with

693. Nebraska with 546, and Arizona with 445, show how steadily settlers in the Middle West have kept march ing still further west, selling out their farms and busies for the newer land of brighter skies and brighter promise. Ohio likewise stands out strong with her co tribution of 604. But the Eastern States proper, the thirteen original States of the Union, have also sent across their young married men and women in liberal numbers from ocean to ocean. New York stands high with 791 school children, Pennsylvania with 505, while Massachusetts is well represented by close on to 300, and even tiny little Rhode Island has given us twentyeven of her offspring to educate. Figures, dull dreary figures these, which mo ost newspaper readers shun the devil shuns boly water, but full of interest if the inferences that flow from them be read as well. And from Northern States and Southern States also, even from the frozen mountains of Alaska and the surfbeaten islands of Hawaii, our An nerican school children have come flocking into this City of the Angels, givling by their bright young presence a new aptness to the name of the old pueblo of the Spanish founders. Now for the foreigners in our midst, mainly good

Americans, in fact or in making, once they have drawn into their lungs the soft balmy air of Southern Cali in and dutifully sent their boys and girls to imtibe American ideals from the American-born children in our public schools. Mexico heads the list with 364, but our young native Californians are really of the soil-they can hardly be classed as foreigners, they are rather our good neighbors, from just across the divide The next contingent in strength is from our neighbor or the north; 354 young Canadians have exchanged the ows of their native prairies for the orange Southern California. England, Scotland and of Southern California, are separately given; 124 is their total. But surely there is something wrong with the figure that records only thirteen Scottish-born children in attendance al the public schools of Los Angeles. Have the enumera-tors missed the point that the patriotic Scot is also ughly patriotic Britisher, and rarely obtrudes his sub-patriotism when abroad, even accepting the title of Englishman which the customary use of the word of Englishman which the customary use of the word has thrust upon him? We fancy there must be a few Scots by birth among the 106 children returned as English. Germany has given us 80 of her native-born youngsters, Russia 41, France 35, and Austria 28. And every other European country is represented, likewise Asia and Africa, South America and Australia. In all no fewer than forty-two different countries stand upon the list of contributors to the school life of our upon the list of contributors to the school life of our

THE COST OF PEACE.

14 THE strong arm of the government in enforcing respect for its just rights in international matters is the navy of the United States. I most earnestly recommend that there be no halt in the work ailding the American navy. There is no m perforic duty before us as a people than to keep the navy adequate to the needs of the country's position. . . . Our voice is now potent for peace, and is so potent because we are not afraid of war. But our p deserve the slightest attention if we were impotent to

The foregoing words are quoted from the recent meisage of the President of the United States to Congress. Following on the heels of this we find that the estirollowing on the neels of this we find that the esti-mates of Secretary Morton for the navy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1996, are in excess of $114,000,000, which is an increase of more than $17,000,000 over the naval appropriations for 1905. There is to be set apart for the construction of contemplated new warships alone, the sum of $45,000,000. We are now spending on our navy each year a dollar and more for every man, woman and child in the nation. We are at present the third naval power in the world and the desire is to keep at it until we shall rank second. England is now, as it has long been, first in strength, but it is ght necessary that we should either eq outrank her.

In speaking of the proposed enormous naval appriation Secretary Morton advances the following argument:

"The naval estimates for the next fiscal year are the largest ever submitted, notwithstanding the fact that they have been cut down from those sent in by the bureaus more than $17,000,000. We have asked for less than the money actually required to continue the naval programme as laid down by the general board of which Admiral Dewey is the head, notwithstanding all who have studied the question carefully agree that this prohave studied the question carefully agree that this programme should be carried out. The past year was an important one in the history of our naval construction. Never before were so many ships launched by this or any other nation in one year. Vessel for vessel and type for type, I believe our ships will compare favorably with those of any navy affoat, and every American should be proud of the progress and character of work now being accomplished, not only in construction, but now being accomplished, not only in construction, but in all branches of the service. Last year the navy cost a little over a dollar per capita. It cost little compared to what war would cost, and it is the best insurance we have against war. We want such a navy in size, style, and 'sand' that no other navy w an engagement with us. It is our green favor of poace. The larger our navy is the it costs us, the greater the fixed charges and yet I believe I am safe in saying the further from the wish of the American treat the navy in a niggardly manner navy that we cannot all be proud of of the American navy can be stated in construction, instruction and destruction

These arguments are scarcely control a manifest necessity that the Unit continue to spend hundreds of millio navy, army and coast defenses, as he of foreign invasion is in existence. government and its people—is undoubte universal peace and disarmament, but ceed on those theories until joined in th by the other powers of the ASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—I give you today a chat with one of the live workingmen of the United States Army, a young officer, who for the past as been in the thickest of the fighting in Manchus one of our military attaches, he was assigned by ar Department to the Japanese army to report as operation in the field. "You remember that the Japanese have as many men stationed along the Sha-ho as there are men, women stationed along the Sha-ho as there are men, women stationed along the Sha-ho as there are men, women stationed along the Sha-ho as there are men, women stationed along the Sha-ho as there are men, women taking in Washington. Every one of them has to warm clothing, and if possible a place to sleep at In the winter the thermometer gets down to or zero in Manchuria, so you see that a war like this other problems than those of mere fighting. The problems confront the Russians."

The Japanese are living chiefly on rice and meat.

The rice is in a raw state, just as you find it in our grocery stores, and it must be cooked before it can be calen. This necessitates water and fire, and makes it a bad field ration. I think the Japanese are discovering that. It is not like our hard tack, which can be carried to the field and caten at any time. In addition to this the Japanese have canned meat, put up with a kind of sauce, in Japan, The soldiers eat it out of the can, and seem to relish it, but a foreigner does not like it after two or three meals. nt a foreigner does not like it after two or three meals.

but a foreigner does not like it after two or three meals. It is not so bad when cooked as a soup."
"What is the food of the Russians?"
"They are better able than the Japanese to live off the country. They can get a deal of fresh meat in the north, and their four comes from the Harbin mills. Those mills are large enough to supply the army. The Russian commissary is well managed. Each company has a great cook stove on wheels, in which a big boiler of soup is always cooking. soup, and there is a hot bowl for each soldier at regular intervals. In this respect the Russians are better off than the Japan

Armies in Furs.

Armies in Fura.

"How do the men keep warm there in midwinter? They cannot have fires when under arms?"

"No, the most of them rely upon their clothing for warmth. Both armies wear more or less furs. The common soldiers of Japan have long, thick overcoats of kaki, with high fur collars, which they can turn up about their faces, and the officers wear fur-lined coats. As to the Russians, some of them are clad in turs and some in sheepskins. The Cossack uniform is almost all fur, including an enormous fur cap.

"As to fire, one of the most serious questions is that of fuel. The march of Kuroki's army, with which I was, has been largely through a wooded country, and we have cut down the trees for wood. At times charcoal has been sent in from Japan for the use of the soldiers, and just now they are doing all they can to pump out the Yentai coal mines. These mines are not very far from Mukden. They were used by the Russians, but they flooded them before they left, and they are a fill full of water. The Japaneee are doing all they can to get pumps and empty the mines."

Railroads and the War.

Railroads and the War.

"These mines are reached by the railroads, are they not?"

"Yes. The Japanese now have the southern end of the Chinese Eastern Raiiroad. They have changed it to a narrow gauge, in order that they may be able to use Japanese engines and rolling stock. You may remember that the Russians have a broad gauge. For this reason the Japanese could not use the road until it was changed."

"Is the Traus-Siberian road working well?"

"Very well, indeed, I understand," said Capt. March: "The government has taken charge of it, and they are pouring soldlers into Mamchuria over it. There is a steady stream of fighting men moving across Siberia day and night, and as fast as the soldlers die or become disabled they are replenished by others. It is wonderful how little the Russians seem to regard the loss of men.

You would have thought that the 50,000 soldiers who were killed in the last great battle would have disorganized the army and disarranged its plans. It did not seem to affect the Russian policy one iota. The officers took it as a matter of course, and also the men. The fact, it seemed to me, made a serious impression upon the Japanese. Before that battle they had no doubt of their ultimate success. Since then they have begun to wonder whether after all they can wear out or conquer a foe like this."

The Russians as Soldiera.

"What kind of soldiers are the Russians?"
"They are brave and will fight until they drop. "They are brave and will fight until they drop. They know nothing elee. We captured many of them, and there were thousands dead on the battlefield. Many of the grivates are fine looking. They are big-boned, lusty fellows with fair complexions and light hair. This surprised me, as I had expected to find dark-haired men. I had heard many stories of the viciousness and saragery of the Russian peasant. The faces I saw had no such characteristics, and the papers found upon the men conveyed the opposite impression. Every soldier had a pecket testament or at least the Pour Gospels, and upon many of the dead we found lotters written and ready for marking to their families at home. The letters were simple, affectionate and loving, giving the little dotalls of camp life and carrying messages to dear ones, large and small, in Russia. It seemed to me that men who could write such letters must be more than ordinarily decent. small, in Russia. It seemed to me that men who could write such letters must be more than ordinarily decent. Speaking about the Testaments, it was a curious fact that the names of the company and regiments of the men were ecratched out. This was to keep the Japanese from estimating the character of the Russian army."

"From what you say, captain, the Russians must be reliefone?"

"They have all forms of religiou, and I do not see why we should not give them credit for honesty," said Capt. March. "Every set of troops has its priest with it, a high-capped man in a long black gown. The soldiers sing hymns as they go into battle, and even during their night attacks, they charge, singing."

The Japanese Soldier.

"How about the Japanese?"

"They are just the exposites of the Russians. They make no noise whatever. They sing no military songs, and, in fact, you never hear them singing. They are quiet in camp and on the march and in battle; but they go steadily ahead and fight to the death. There are no braver soldiers known than the Japanese, and none, I think, more efficient." think, more efficient.

"Are they well trained?"

"The they well trained?"

"Thoroughly so," said Capt, March. "The work they are doing in Manchuria is not new work for them. They have been doing this same thing in their maneuvers at home year after year for fifteen years. They have been moved by water from one part of Japan to another, and have had to fight upon landing. Almost every problem that has come up in the war has been solved by them in these maneuvers again and again. They are organized after the German system. Each man knows just what he has to do, and the army works like a great machine.

"The Japanese army is composed of picked men," con-like a great machine.

"The Japanese army is composed of picked men," continued the military expert. "Every year all the able-bodied youths of Japan of a certain age have to appear before the authorities and the best are taken for soldiers. This lot is weeded out again and again until something like 40,000 or more men of equal height and good physique remain. These are trained for the army. As a result the Japanese troops are about as evenly matched a body of men as you will find in any army. They are intensely patriotic and almost every man esteems it an honor to die for his Emperor."

The Officers are Able.

"What do you think of the officers of the two armies?" "They are able men and men of experience. This is so of both Japanese and Russians. Gen. Kouropatkin evidently understands his business, and where will you find a braver or more gallant character than Gen. Stoessel? Gen. Oyama has shown his ability as a commander, and the same is true of Gen. Kuroki. As to Gen. Kodama, the chief of staff he is to a large evident the chief of staff he is to a large evident the chief.

and the same is true of Gen. Kuroki. As to Gen. Kodama, the chief of staff, he is to a large extent the brains of the Japanese army. None of these men is young. All have been connected with the great developments going on in Japan, and have risen from rank to rank until they attained their present position.

"There is one thing I would say about such officers in contrast with the general opinion held as to their position. The popular idea is that the general of an army goes dashing along at the head of his men, swinging his sword and calling them to come on. In the fighting of today the commanders are well to the rear, connected by telephone and messengers with different parts of the field. They play the game of war after a fixed plan, and the breaking away of a regiment or a company is not noticed. All the working is toward general results."

Many Night Battles.

Many Night Battles.

Many Night Battles.

"It will seem odd to the old soldier of the United States," Capt. March went on, "to know that most of the fighting between the Russians and the Japanese is done at night. This is caused by the destructive nature of modern guns. The artillery mows down men like wheat if the gunners have daylight to help them. The guns are long-ranged and the destruction is awful. In the laier hattles the Japanese have used the darkness to make their way closer to their enemy. Today they might perhaps be a mile away, firing at the Russians behind their intrenchments. Tonight they would make a rush and get perhaps 2000 feet nearer, and there they would throw up fresh earthworks and dig trenches. The artiflery would keep firing upon them, but in the dark-ness not one-tenth as many would be shot as in the day-time. All the next day they would lie in those intrench-ments, and when night came would make another rush under fire 2000 feet nearer, and dig another set of trenches to form their resting place the following day, and the third night, perhaps would storm the battery. and the third night, perhaps would storm the battery. These night attacks have been common upon the part of the Russians as well. As to digging, I doubt whether there has ever been a war-in which so many fortifications have been thrown up or so much digging done in proportion to the time occupied. A large part of Manchuria looks as though it had been occupied by mound hulldera."

"How do you regard the fall of Port Arthur, captain?

"How do you regard the fall of Port Arthur, captain? Does that indicate that the war is nearing an end?"
"Not at all," was the reply. "I don't think the Japanese look upon it in that way, and the Russians certainly do not. Port Arthur has been a very profitable investment for the Russians. It has kept 100,000 Japanese busy and away from the fight with the troops farther north. It has paid for itself fifteen times over for all it has cost in both men and money. The Japanese estimate that it contained 40,000 men. I think the number has been overrated."
"What do the Chinese in Manchuria think about the situation?"

situation?

"They seem to regard ft entirely outside their business," said Capt. March. "If the Japanese and Russians choose to kill each other, why should they care, as long as each army pays them well for what it takes. This is the case at present. Both Russians and Japanese want to be friends with the Chinese, for in case either should secure possession of Manchuria, it would have the Chinese to deal with. For this reason, perhaps, the Chinese are well paid for their services and supplies. Nearly all the transportation is done by them. The vehicles used are heavy Chinese carts, which will carry a ton or more on the level. The price for a cart is 15 yen per day, equal to $7.50 of our money. This is a fortune in China."

tune in China."

"Are the Chinese afraid?"

"No. They come and watch the fighting until they get tired, and then go back to their farms. They are ready to be hired for all sorts of work, and as they are lusty fellows, many of them more than six feet in height, they make excellent laborers. Indeed, I don't see why they would not make good soldiers. What they need is organization and good leadership."

Carnation Day.

HOMAGE TO BE PAID TO THE MEM-ORY OF WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

By a Special Contributor.

ODAY is carnation day, the birthday of the late President William McKinley, when in every part of the United States carnations will be worn in the coat, lapel, hair, bosom, at the throat or carried loosely in the hands, as an expression of appreciation of the life and great services rendered the nation by the martyred resident.

The carnation was William McKinley's favorite flower. He were it on all occasions, as it expressed to him pur-ity, beauty and simplicity as no other flower did.

When Mr. McKinley was Governor of Ohlo, a bevy of girl students at Lake Eric College, at Painesville, O., made him an honorary member of their class, at the same time pinning on his coat their class flower—the carnation. From that day on he was seen to wear this flower in his button hole.

The incident occurred when Gov. McKinley was in Painesville, a guest of the Garfield Club. He ever afterward evinced an interest in the class, and often remembered and was remembered by them.

Mrs. McKinley took great interest in the class and its insignia, and provided a bunch of carnations for her husband's room every morning. A reunion of the class was in progress when Mr. McKinley was first nominated for the Presidency, and a congratulatory telegram was sent him.

At each reunion of the class the President was remem

At each reunion of the class the Freshicht was remembered with a box of carnations.

The idea of "The Carnation League of America" occurred to Lewis G. Reynolds, of Dayton, O., the founder of the memorial, on the 14th day of September, 1902, while in the city of Buffalo.

BLUNDERS OF AUTHORS.

The blunders of eminent writers would make an amusing volume. M. Emile Faguet has added a gem to the collection in his monograph on Gustave Flaubert. "His father, son of veterinary surgeon at Nogentsur-Seine, after studying medicine in Paris, set up a practice at Rouen, and there became the celebrated Dr. Bovary, principal surgeon of the Hotel Dien, where he lived." This diverting slip makes Gustave Flaubert the son of Bovary, whereas he created Bovary and put him in a novel.

The novelists, however, are even more liable to com ical oversights than the critics. Thackeray, describing Arthur Pendennis dancing a quadrille, wrote, "He advanced with a thumb in the pocket of each waistcoat." How many times did the novelist read that without seethat he meant each waistcoat pocket?-[London

Mr. Reynolds, knowing that the carnation was Mr. Mckinley's favorite flower, purchased a bloom, tied a bit of black ribbon to it and wore it in his buttonhole the entire day without, for the moment, thinking of what it might mean later on. The idea of "Carnation Day" grew upon him, however, and a few weeks later he brought the matter to the attention of "The McKinley National Memorial Association," at Candon, O., and it met with the instant approval of the late Senator Hanna, Judge William R. Day and other trustees of that association. It was Mr. Reynolds's original idea that "Carnation Day" be observed on September 14, the anniversary of Mr. McKinley's death, just as the primrose is worn in England on the 19th day of April, in memory of Lord Beaconsfield, but Alexander H. Reveil of Chicago, a Carnation League trustee, was successful in having the date changed to January 29, as being much more appropriate. priate

The idea was promulgated through the newspapers on December 22, 1902, and met with universal approval.

The day was first observed on January 29, 1902, the sixtieth anniversary of Mr. McKinley's birth, with the greatest unanimity throughout this country, and by Americans all over the world. Mr. Reynolds has had letters from almost every city in the Union and from every civilized country on the globe.

MURDER AS A FINE ART AND COM-MITTED AS A SACRED DUTY.

By a Special Contributor.

MERICA has appropriated the word "thug" from MERICA has appropriated the word "thug" from the Hindustani language, but with characteristic American freedom has modified both the propusation and the meaning. "Tug" is the correct pronunciation in the vernacular. And the thug was not a mere bludgeoner, political or otherwise. In the Bisral sense of the word he was a deceiver, a trained and skilled deceiver. But this was a mere euphemism. The thug was very much more. He was a professional assassin, a strangler. Thuggee was murder reduced to a fine art, and practiced by gangs working in cooperation.

The thugs were really a religious sect, who worshiped The thugs were really a religious sect, who worshiped the goddess Bowani, wife of Siva the Decroyer, one of the Hindu trinity. They paid-homage to this dread goddess by elaborate religious ritual, making sacrifices to her, solemnly invoking her blessing, consulting the cases she vouchsafed her worshipers, counting every neglect in her service an impiety that would surely be visited by disaster. With the votaries of Bowani the taking of life was a sacred act; a good omen from the goddess meant an order to kill, failure to carry out which was sacrifiere.

The thugs formed a close secret society, and members, although utter strangers to each other and from detances wide apare, could recognize their fellow-handicraftamen instantly by a word or a sign. They had also a system of signals on the roads, whereby by the placing in some particular manner of stones, or haves, or little heaps of dust, it was shown in what directions parties of thugs were traveling, where they had destined victims in their company, whether mere help was required, and so on.

At the scarous of travel, when merchants were wont is set forth with wares they had purchased for the replenishment of their stores, or wealthy pligrims to journey to some sacrel shrine, thugs would assemble in the big cities, and form themselves into organized gangs, cometimes a hundred strong, with regular gradations of rank and regular subdivision of duties. The minstrei troupe is performing—xithers are softly playing, drums tum-tumming, cymbals clanking.

And then comes the jhirnee or dread signal of death. For some time past the leader of the thugs has been gazing fixedly at the heavens, and all the eyes of his fellow-votaries of Bowani have been fastened intently gazing fixedly at the heavens, and all the eyes of his fellow-votaries of Bowani have been fastened intently upon him. At last he pronounces some commonplace words, as prearranged: "The moon shines bright tonight," and raises his hand. Then in an instant each strangler has the fatal noose around the throat of his appointed victim, every dying man is clutched by the hands that resist his writhing contortions, everyone but the thugs in that camp of travelers is in the death throes. In a trief minute or two all is over. The tragedy is complete.

There have been no guiltless witnesses of the stroous crime, no possibility of rescue or escape, no noise or cries for help, for these stranglers are too skilled in their deadly work to have permitted a single cheep to be made. And now nothing remains but to cover up the traces of the foul deed. This is simple, for there has been no effusion of blood. The grave diggers creep out of the dark ravine, and carry away the stripped and rified bodies. There is a grave ready for every victim, and convenient piles of rocks have been made to heap over the covering sand, that, the hyenas may not be able to dig out the corpses and so becray what has heppened. Armfuls of brushwood, too, are ready for artifully concealing the signs of recent excavations. But who will come to that lonely nullah? No one. The villagers across the plain dread it, because of the or cries for help, for these stranglers are too skilled

The villagers across the plain dread it, because of the man-eating tiger who has made it his chosen lair.

With the breaking of dawn, the attenuated cavalcade moves again on its way. The spoil has been divided on a fixed scale of apportionment—so many shares to on a fixed scale of apportionment—so many shares to the leader, archpriest of Bowani, then so many shares to each strangler who held one of the coveted posts of honor, down to the single share of the inveiglers, who may be mere youths serving their apprenticeship in wholesale assassingtion. By evening the gang has dispersed in a score of different directions, making in small parties for their homes or for cities where their small parties for their homes or for cities where their plunder may be disposed of, and a nwe campaign of villalay organized. An impenetrable veil of darkness has been thrown over the whole tragedy.

There were no telegraphs in those days, no country police, and every trace of the crime lay buried with the bodies in the lonely gorge. Wives wa'red sadly for husbands who never returned, children wept for absent fathers. But never a word of the travelers who had disappeared. And the Hindus are fatalistic beings—they accept in silence the decrees of Providence. A merchant would wonder what had become of his old neighbor in the bazzar. But the latter had ventured forth on a long journey, the dangers of the road are many, from wild beasts and from robbers who openly neighbor in the bazaar. But the latter had ventured forth on a long journey, the dangers of the road are many, from wild beasts and from robbers who openly ply their vo ation, cholera swift to strike down and kill ever staiks the land. So the heirs apportioned the goods, the shop was reopened by another trader, and the world moved on.

And all the while, for generations and for centuries, those teaceful Hindus themselves had never known that thuggee existed in their midst—that every day in their lives they were rubbing shoulders in the bazaar with fellow-countrymen who planned wholesale murders without misglying, perpetrated them without remore, and remembered them without pity. Think of the amazing loyalty that kept the secrets of this grim society inviolate, and the superb organization that enabled it to hide its terrible deeds right in the midst of a teeming population. After intercourse with India for two centuries, and the exercise of sovereignty over a large part of the country for more than half that a large part of the country for more than half that time, the British rulers themselves remained quite ig-norant of the existence and habits of the murderous

But at last discovery came. It is not so very long ago—just seventy years since the dread mysteries of thusgee were unraveled by the English authorities. Suspicion arose tecause segoys, traveling on leave with their army pay, failed to return to their regiments. Now the Indian sepoy is proud of his calling and he goes home to his village invariably intent on bringing soes home to his village invariably intent on bringing back recruits to join the service of the sirkar, as he calls the ruling power. Trusted soldiers, non-commissioned officers and men of tried service, had never again been heard of. So strict invertigation was set on foot, and as a result a gang of thugs were surprised in the very deed. They were arrested, imprisoned, tried, and convicted of murder. But the truth was not yet all known. Only when the death sentence on the criminals broke the religious spell of Bowani's power to protect her votaries did confession follw.

Then came the astounding and ghastly disclosure of what thuggee in India had really meant during unnumbered generations. On the part of the miscreants who told the story, there was no penitence, no remorse, just chastened and fatalistic regret that their idol Bowani had been broken, through their own laxity un-doubtedly in observing her sacred religious rites. "There were always signs around us," said one of these fanatics, "if we had been wise enough to discern them, and religious enough to attend to them."

The nature of their superstitious observances may just be indicated. For example, every expedition had to be opened with a solemn invocation of Bowani. This was the formula, given out first by the high priest, and then repeated by all present: "Great goddess! is hunting. On the plateau above fires are alight to leave the wild beasts, and around these are listed the merchants, with their bales of costly goods and then repeated by all present: "Great goddess! and then repeated by all present: "Great goddess! universal mother! if this our meditated expedition be fitting in thy sight, vouchsafe us help, and the signs and cases of lewelry, unloaded from the wagons that of the probation." Then the omens were watched. The meeting of a person who had lost a limb, the crystanght oxen are safely tethered for the night. Also and similar unusual happenings foretold disaster. if the auspices were propitious, the party set, forth. They took with them, awathed in cloths, a sacred pick-ax, emblem of their goddess, on which the oaths of secrecy had been made. It was entrusted to the shrewdest, most experienced, and most cautious thus present, and carried hidden in his loin cloth. No traveling party could be without the sacred pickax, it traveling party could be without the sacred pickax, it was a constant thing of solicitude and of reverence, and all manner of omens were associated with it from day to day, even from hour to hour. Thus if it chanced to fall from the hand of the man who bore it, dismay spread through the gang, and the enterprise on hand was immediately abandoned.

Now that the truth was out and confession freely made, regular burying places of the thugs all over India were disclosed, and the bones literally of thousands of victims discovered. Every member of the caste was secured, hundreds were hanged, thousands were transceured, hundreds were hanged, thousands were trans-secured, hundreds were hanged, thousands were transported to the penal settlement of the Andaman Islands over the kall pani or black water which the Hindus dread, for to cross it breaks their caste, and ostra-cises them forever from the fellowship of their brethren. The cult of Bowani was extirpated, root and branch. The very families were broken up, so that the abomi-nable teachings of murder as religion and of strangling as a fine art should cease as a fine art should cease.

Thuggee had not been confined to adventurers upon land. The rivers of India were found to be infested by members of the accursed fraternity, fresh-water pirates who left no victims to tell tales. They operated in considerable parties. Those who did the work of boatmen were dressed like other boatmen; but those who were to take a part in the other operations were accountered as travelers of great respectability; and there were no craft on the river kept so clean and inviting for travelers. When going up stream the thugs always pretended to be men of consideration, proceedviting for travelers. When going up stream the thugs always pretended to be men of consideration, proceeding on pilgrimage to some sacred place, such as Benares, or Allahabad. When going down, they felgned to be returning home from such places. Their inveiglers, well dressed, were sent out upon the high roads, and pretended to be going by water to the same places as the innocent travelers they fell in with. On coming to the landing stage, the treacherous villains would see the nice-looking boat, with the respectably-dressed thugs amusing themselves. They would ask the captain to take them on board, as he could afford to do so cheaper than others, having, apparently, his boat already engaged. The captain would pretend to be cushed for room, and the thugs to be unwilling to have any more passengers on board. But at last the earnest entreaties of the inveiglers would be yielded to, and the new travelers accommodated. Thuggee has now been banished from the face of the Thuggee has now been banished from the face of the earth. But the story shows in tertking manner how marvelously the oriental mind can hold its secrets, not merely from the west, but from the different castes among their very selves. And as showing the wonderful hold thuggee had upon fix votaries, let me quote another sentence from the confession of one of the leaders. I may explain that "goor" is coarse native leaders. I may explain that "goor" is coarse native sugar, which, after having been ceremoniously blessed by the goddess at the initiation ceremony, was passed round and eaten by all present the novice included. "Let any man once taste of the sacred goor," said this thug, who, with his own hand had strangled well over a hundred victims, "and he will be a thug, though he know all the trades and had all the wealth of the world. My father made me taste of that fatal goor, when I was a mere boy: and if I were to live a thousand years, I should never be able to follow any other trade. He was hanged. EDMUND MITCHELL.

A SONG BY AN ABSENTEE. California! What a music Seems to dwell within that word! What a world of subtle sweetness Hath its boundless echoes ctirred; h, what mem'ries thrill my bosom! With what peace my soul is crowne With what peace my soul is crowned hough in realms remote I wander— Still in dreams am homeward bound. California! Realm of beauty-Land of sunlight, joy and song!— Thou to whom hath Nature given All that could to earth belong!— Balmy air of health and rapture, Vales of verdure, fields of flow'rs, Deathless gardens, golden summers, Years as light as childhood's hours! Still I see the groves of orange Orchards vast and meadows fair, loudless skies that smile above them, Earth an Eden shorn of care; Through the oak and eucalyptus Golden hills in splendor gleam: Fig and olive, palm and perper. Cast their glamour o'er the dream Far beyond the fields of poppy Lies the tranquil Sunset Sea,
And I seem to hear it murmur
As though calling—cailing me.
Ah, could I but live forever
On that bright, enchanted shore

I would ask no sweeter heaven

MANUFACTURES IN BELGIUM. LONG HOURS AND LOW WAGES FOR BOTH MEN AND WOMEN.

By a Special Contributor.

AVING taken up in previous letters the agricultumain and mining industries in this country, in other words, the production of food for the people, the maintenance of muscular force, and food for the furnaces, the maintenance of the steam force for the factories, this letter will give some information about the principal manufacturing industries in which the muscle and coal are used. These industries in which the American people are more or less interested will be those considered.

In metal works of all kinds about 95,000 people are en loyed in the whole kingdom, nearly 30,000 of whom ar spondingly indigestible. Like the beer, they are very cheap, about 1 to 2 cents American apiece.

A Cheap Luncheon

One can get three excellent rolls of wheat flour for 3 cents, for 3 cents a bottle of light beer, not over 4 per cent. alcohol, and for 3 cents a slice of excellent cheese, which will be sufficient for a light lunch for three per-sons. You have 1 cent left for butter, excellent unsalted butter, and for a dime of our money three persons have had a nice lunch.

In making shoes 42,000 persons are employed, and in wooden shoes 12,787. Here in Brussels on the streets many people wear wooden shoes at all times. The to-bacco factories give employment to nearly 10,000 hands.

Small Factories.

Another feature of Belgian industries is the great numer of small establishments all over the kingdom. The oer of small establishments all over the kingdom. The old way of doing things survives here in a remarkable degree. Not only bakeries are owned and operated by the members of a family who make and sell all of their own product direct to consumers, but the same is true of tobacco and cigars, shoes, wooden shoes, garments, etc. There are almost as many establishments where wooden shoes are where are there are almost as the area are almost as a same area.

Wages as They Are Today.

Before me lies a government report for 1903, list of over 1,000,000 toilers. I have above selected groups running into a quarter of a million in a former letter set forth the conditions pamong the 1,200,000 persons occupied in the cof the soil. The government reports are morate and most exact. The working people are carefully by age as well as by sex. In all there are from tens to thousands whose wage 50 centimes, 9% cents a day. These are all years of age. The two largest lists numerical this head include those whose wages a 9% to 9% cents a day. A smaller num from 30 cents to a little more. Taking the sixteen years old, we find hundreds and even the whose daily earnings fall below 1.50 francs, or American. There are fewer in the group getti employed in the various industries now foundrymen. Most of the iron used in Belgium is im-ported, in Hainault less than 9 per cent, being from Belgian mines. France furnishes the largest amount of this, Germany next, although in times past England sent the largest portion. The United States sends a small amount of crude iron.

Armies of Factory Hands.

Textile industries of various kinds find over 80,000 peremployed in various capacities as wage earners, on claims over 15,000 of these, linen over 22,000, and about the same number.

There are nearly 40,000 toilers engaged in making gar-

Ceramics give employment to 7043, and glass works

The sugar factories employ 22,689 people.

There are some strange features in connection with Belgian industries. Few families here do any baking of bread or cakes. There are in the kingdom 15,040 bakeries. Most of these are managed by the owners, and all the work done by the family. The women do most of it. There are, however, 8412 employés connected with this industry.

They Drink Some There.

There are no less than 3427 establishments in Belgium devoted to the production of beverages, mostly alcoholic. They are mostly breweries, and count one for each 200,000 people, young and old, rich and poor. Yet more beer comes from Germany than is made in Belgium. The number of persons employed in this industry amounts to 16,555. The wines consumed here come mostly from France, next from Germany, and some from all over the world wherever wine is made. Eclipse champagne from California is advertised in most of the restaurants, and costs about the same as in San Francisco and Los Ange-les. The bakery and the saloon dispute hotly one with the other for place on the streets, and they are numerous. Good beer sells at 15 centimes, 3 cents a full quart bottle, and the number of brands is only exceeded by the almost infinite variety of the cakes sold at the baker-jes. These are largely made of sugar, butter, eggs and marmalade, jams or jellies, are very rich and correcities, on principal streets, on side streets, on alleys. The front room is the salesroom. There is no big display window as with us. Any window does to put a few samples on show, with a little sign telling what is done there. There are innumerable little printing offices managed in this way, where an old man sets his own type out of a few cases, runs his own press, without power, and thus gains a livelihood.

Cheap Printing.

It would be an excellent object lesson for the owls in America who sit in dark grottoes, brooding over the memories of the past and hooting at the blazing light of modern civilization to see some of these survivals of the unfittest industrial methods. I wanted a few visiting cards the other day, and went into one of these little places. The old man was bent with hard work rather than age. He was the pink of politeness. His daughter, a girl of about 18, pretty as a picture and soft of manners as a princess, helped him. I picked out a thick, well-finished card and gave the "copy" to be printed on it, in a pretty face of some "text" style of type. I asked the price for 100. In Los Angeles it would have been $1. Here it was 25 cents of our money. The cards scarcely cost less than 10 cents, and for all his trouble, he had 15 cents, less a little ink, a little wear and tear of his plant. It would be an excellent object lesson for the owls in cost less than 10 cents, and for all his trouble, he had 15 cents, less a little ink, a little wear and tear of his plant, and a little rent. Did he clear 10 cents for his labor? It could scarcely take him less than an hour in all, and if he did ten such jobs in the day he had $1$ for it all. He is a proprietor. He commands its own time. He is his own boss, Is he better off for the enjoyment of all these privileges? Is not the employé of a big establishment who can earn three times this amount in wages, who works fewer hours for it, has no responsibility nor anxiety beyond doing his work well, keeping his job and drawing down $18 to $20 a week, in better circumstances, to say nothing about his opportunity to save part of his wages and some day join with others, put in part of his wages and some day join with others, put in a good plant and build up a great business for himself? Is not that the history of nearly all the great printing houses in America today? Is not this history being repeated daily in America?

Mr. W. J. Bryan, Eugene V. Debs and other deeplinking, philanthropic citizens, whose progress is like that of Hamlet's crab, who clamor for government owncrally of railroads, may have some interest in the paragraph about to follow. And the attention is also solictied of that considerable and growing body of men in America disposed to follow such leaders as these:

hly Rates of Wages

Japuary, 1905.]

For men who work by the month here in Brussels, common railroad hands get $22; trainmen, $21; switchman, $23; conductors, $35; machinists, $40; firemen get $12; head book-keepers, $50; clerks, $15. The government owns nearly all the railroads in Beigium. The salaries, it will be noted, are not fat; Nor is the service good. There is more red tape and less efficiency than with us. The fares are low—if you will go second-class and not impose your somewhat unwelcome presence on your betters, who must have room for their dignity and tiles. The fare is very low if you can stand a third-class compartment with common toilers who for the most part never heard of a bath since they were bor a who change their garments but infrequently, and whose "fell of hair" is as populous as the beard of the famess Emperor of the eastern empire known to poster-ly as Julian the Apostate.

Ne Trusts There.

Truste There.

The government monopoly of railroads is about the only trust in Beigium. These various industries are mostly controlled by firms with but few incorporated companies among them. The government tax on corporations is so excessive that Beigians who organize for operation abroad take out patents in foreign countries, sotably in-Switzerland. These firms come down from ather to son, generation after generation. Here is another pregnant fact. It is not trusts, nor monopolies hat make wages low. But the firm feature does tend to reside the best feeling between employer and employs.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ARCHITECTURE.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ARCHITECTURE.

Elmer Grey, in the Architectural Record for January, asys of the architecture of Southern California: "The buildings of more pretension, that constitute the real architecture of the country, might be styled, for convenience, as those which have and those which have not been affected by the influence of the missions, for the California missions are a factor that must be reckoned with in any complete discussion of California architecture. The original missions are most of them monuments of rare beauty that have a quality peculiarly in harmony with the Western landscape—a quality made up broad, simple masses, plain wall surfaces and of low-pitched roofs that do not compete with Nature's own mountain architecture. What do you think of the Mission style? is a question repeatedly asked, and the answer is, that the original mission buildings bear about the same relation to the architecture of California as do the first Colonial buildings to that of New England. In both cases the original models are good, but their influence has been good, bad, and indifferent. Mr. Grey goes at to say that: "The appirit of the style is made up of the low-pitched roofs and broad masses before mentioned, of courts and cloisters designed for out-of-door bring, of thick masonry walls and consequent deep winding as the proportion of parts. The flowing lines of some of the gables are a very incidental feature. Adaptation of the style to a modern house plan almost presupposes a patio where a family may live out of doors, the out-of-door lands are served. California planning being one, it may be add in passing, that has not yet been sufficiently recognises set out under arbors or loggiss, where some of the sa

2 The Anna Humming Bird HOW SHE BUILDS HER HOME AND How SHE KEEPS HOUSE.

By a Special Contributor.

WILL select a single individual of these beautiful creatures for my story. As I have observed one I have observed many make their nests and rear their young within easy reach of eye and hand. What is true of my Anna as I shall describe her is true of her neighbors, as regards habits and materials used in house-keeping.

I first met Anna some time in December. Sne sat on a bare branch in the sunahine, now and then preening her lovely feathers and then singing for minutes at a time one unmusical invariable note of tzp, tzp, tzp. Doubtless she thought it pleasing to the ear, as judieed it is to mine, since I have come to love Anna particularly, and I am sure it pleases her sweetheart. The note was her love call, and so her lover came. He went through with all the gyrations peculiar to making love in mid-air with gentlemen of his kind, and was successful, for the two flew off together toward the blue-gum trees. In a day or two, while I was slitting in the garden, I observed Anna pecking at the loose fibers of a tiny piece of old cheese cloth. I had stuck on a thorny branch of an orange tree on purpose for the birds. She flew into the shrubbery, and I laughed softly, thinking of the secret I would soon share with her, provided she had not chosen a nesting site too high for me.

Soon she returned and began pulling strands from the little garden spider's webs in the Monterey Cypress hedge. She pulled it strand by strand with the tip of her beak, doubling the thread on itself back and forth until she had a transparent little bunch of the gauzy stuff. Then she flew straight to the same point in the shrubbery. I followed this time and remained still, where she disappeared. Suddenly out of her heppy heart I heard her familler "tzp, tzp, tzp," and, gaided by the sound, found her on a twig a foot or more from the dainty little platform foundation of her next. It was in the crotch of a one-year-old blue-gum as high as my shoulder, in plain sight from the path over which everyone traveled to the house from the street. This common habit of the hummers of building near a road or I first met Anna some time in December. She sat on a

Well, Anna did more than preen herself and eat her breakfast; she went on with her nest-building, bringing back with her a load of materials each time she ieft, the nest, continuing the process until the birdlings were full grown, by this means fitting the nest brim and breadth to the needs of the hour. A violent storm came on, and then she never left her charge, but clung with all her might to her treasures, the rain dripping from her tiny beak and wing coverts. When the eggs were ten days incubated I looked in and saw a couple of black little naked grub-like creatures astonishing to behold. They were blind, and without strength to so much as turn the head. The little mother turned the mouths with her own beak to a convenient position for feeding, and, placing the tip of her beak down the throats of her darlings, nursed them with food already warmed in her own breast, as the finches themselves do. Every fifteen minutes they were so fed until a week had passed, when an hour or more intervened. Gradually the gray dawn appeared, and the little birds were able to turn in the nest and make a little call cry for their absent mother. I then took to feeding the babes between meals, much to their satisfaction. I dipped the tip of my finger in honey and make a little call cry for their absent mother. I then took to feeding the babes between meals, much to their satisfaction. I dipped the tip of my finger in honey water and held it to their lips. They put out their slender tongues and lapped the sweet, looking into my eyes as if they recognized a foster mother. If Anna returned and caught me at the trick, she took her place on the nest brim and looked confidently in my face. She had earned to trust me.

One day there came the hardest storm of all the spring, and the wind tore the nest from some of its moorings. Anna flew between the showers and brought little spider ropes with which she mended the torn places. I thought I would help her, and spread my apron above the nest, pinning it to the twigs. This prevented the storm from which they incubate.

From that time I watched Anna at her work, learning many things. She brought plant down, delicate lichens, and tufts from last year's pampas plumes, always within reach of the birds at nesting time. Alternating with these materials, she brought the spider web with which the whole assortment was bound together by invisible cords. visible cords

When the nest was about as large as an acorn saucer, the little mother bird deposited her two little oblong white eggs in the bottom, on alternate days. These tiny pearls were the size of a baked bean in Boston town. Then of course commenced the incubation. On dark or Then of course commenced the incubation. On dark or cold mornings she never left the nest; but when the sun shone warm, straight into the little structure, lightly shaded by the moving foliage, she flew away to preen herself and to take her meal of little insects, or nectar in the flowers. Often I saw her visit a weed patch, where hundreds of little midgets were frolicking on invisible wings in a rift of light. She flew through and through this mid-air assembly with her beak open, gathering the tlny creatures by the dozen.

And right here I must describe the beak of this hummer to such as do not already know the secret. The

After some discussion with his followers, Tokong decided to give the frog's plan a trial, and so when they attacked the robbers the next day they took good care to carry off the heads with them. What was their astonishment on reaching the river again to find their boats already launched. As soon as they were seated in the boats they began to move of their own accord; the very current of the river changed and flowed up hill. On their arrival at the village they found that the rice which had only been planted a few days before was already ripe; that those who had been left behind ill were now recovered; that the lame could walk and the blind see.

Thus, we are told, head hnting began among the Dy-aks; and the custom, once started, took a great hold upon the people and became incorporated in their relig-

Heads Required for a Number of Ceremonies.

Before head hunting was suppressed, freshly-taken heads were required in connection with a great number of civil and religious ceremonies.

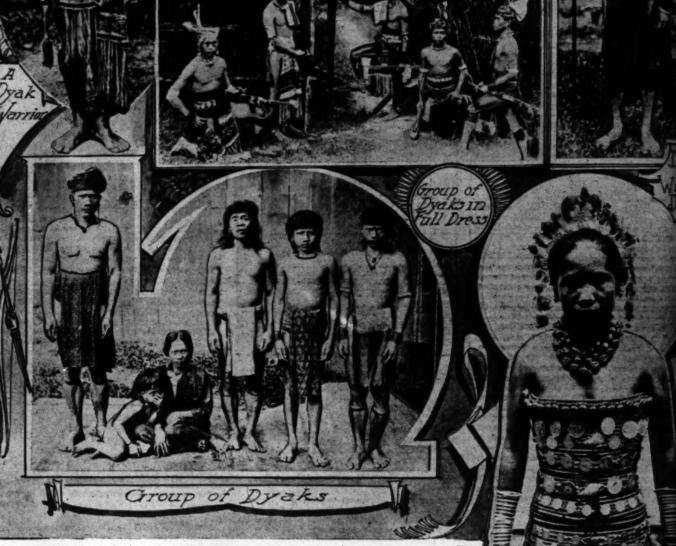

If a chief died, it was necessary to decorate his grave with a head, for if this were not done the spirit of the departed, on paying its last visit to its earthly home before retiring finally to Balun Maiai, "The Fields of the Dead," would see that proper respect had not been paid to his corpse, and he would curse all his surviving relatives so that they would become blind, deaf or lame. In some tribes it was the custom to secure a number

State.

It appears that a certain chief of the Sibop tribe of Dyaks, Tokong by name, was off with some of his men an an expedition to punish a band of robbers who had attacked a Sibop village. They traveled by river until they reached a point near the camp of the robbers, and then, after fastening their boats to the bank, they waited in the shade of some trees to cook a good round meal before they made the projected attack. Just as they were about to start, Tokong heard a gruff, bass voice, issuing from behind a boulder, and on going to the spot he saw a large frog, surrounded by its young ones. He

But there was surely any important occasion which did not cail for heads. A chief's child could not be given a name until a head had been secured; a Dyak youth could find no favor in the eyes of his sweetheart until he had taken a head or two; nothing insured so much good luck, either in war expeditions or in rice planting, as the addition of a few heads to the collection, with which the veranda of every Dvak house was decorated.

This peculiar form of village is the product of the general conditions of life in the Borneo jungle. The forest presses right up to the back of the house, and affords abelier for any enemy who may be looking for trouble, so that the effect of the long house is to place all the people under one roof—a very great advantage when at-

Dyak Life Full of Curious Custom

Dyak life is full of curious customs, rigorously prescribed for every event of any importance or interest. The naming of a chief's son is set about with a most peculiar ceremonial. Before describing a part of it I may mention a very singular fact in connection with Dyak children. The naming of a child is one of the most important events in its life, for until a child is named it is not considered to have any existence. So firmly is this idea imbedded in the Dyak mind that an unamed child is not counted when the number of a family is spoken of, and the parent of an unnamed child regards its death without any grief.

In the naming of a chief's son, as in all other matters, the omens must be consulted, and, in addition, heed must be paid to the phase of the moon in selecting the exact any for the ceremony. There are twelve, moons in the Dyak life is full of curious customs, rigorously pre

In the evening of the naming day a great feast is held

In the evening of the naming day a great feast is held to the evening of the naming day a great feast is held in the gallery of the long house; but before the feast commences a very curious and, to foreign observers, a very disgusting ceremony must be gone through.

Awful Ordeal at the Evening Feast.

All the men present sit in two long rows in the gal-lery awaiting the arrival of the women, who have retired to deck themselves out in their best things in order to play their part in the ceremony.

Presently the women appear. One marches in front with a large bowl of a pungent and horrible mixture, of the ingredients of which the less said the better. Then with a large bowl of a pungent and horrible mixture, of the ingredients of which the less said the better. Then follows one with a spoon made from the shell of a coconut, and she is followed in turn by a girl bearing a large tray, on which are piled small square lumps of raw pork fat. All the women come on in groups like this. They then form a line and pass slowly down between the two rows of men. To each man is administered a spoonful of the mixture and a square of pork fat; and it is an unbreakable law that, until the last woman has filed past, each man must take what is put into his mouth. When this awful ordeal has come to an end the men are allowed to run down to the river to wash their faces, and on their return the real junketing begins.

A large book might be written on the single topic of Dyak social customs, and, indeed, several already exist. The reader who wishes to know more of the Dyaks should read Mr. William Henry Furness's work, "The Home Life of the Borneo Head Hunters."

I spent several months in Sarawak, and saw a good deal of the Dyaks. I found them a pleasant, kindly people, full of curious superstitions, but hospitable to strangers, and, on the whole, peaceably inclined.

An occasional case of head hunting occurs in the interior of the country, but as a national custom it has died out under the influence of a just but firm government, which has declared hunting to be against the law.

In a future article in this series I shall give some account of the government of Sarawak and of the romantic circumstances under which an English gentieman has come to be King, or Raja, as the local term is, over a territory in Borneo, of an area about equal to that of England.

 The Tramp in California. THE CREAM OF THE FRATERNITY SEEK THIS FAVORED CLIME.

By a Special Contributor.

THE tramp, like the tourist, is attracted here by our glorious climate.

As the tourist in the luxurious Pullman car glides

As the tourist in the luxurious Pullman car glides swiftly down the slopes of the Rocky Mountains into the land of everlasting summer, he notices campfires glimmering and twinkling along the sides of the railroad track. Perhaps, in his eastern ignorance, he thinks they are the campfires of Apaches and Shoshones. If so, his ignorance is enlightened by the conductor, who informs him, in a tone of lofty contempt, that the campers are not Indians but only tramps.

campers are not Indians but only tramps.

These fires are made by our old friend, Weary Willie, who is cooking a hobo stew. A hobo stew consists of a chicken, procured about the hour of midnight, and vegetables of various kinds. The vegetables are probably obtained from some Chinaman's vegetable garden and without the formality of the Chinaman's consent. This, with a loaf of bread "bummed from the baker," and a can of coffee, form his frugal repast, and afterward, with a feeling of conscious rectitude, he lights his pipe, the tobacco for which is obtained by the operation known as "shooting snipes." Snipes are cigar butts. Weary Wille carefully picks them up from the sidewalk, and thus his pipe will often give forth the flavor of the finest Havanas.

Perhaps on the very same train carrying the tourist Perhaps on the very same train carrying the tourist may also be the tramp, perched on the roof or hanging on the rods or seated on the blind baggage car or the cowcatcher. The tramp prefers passenger trains to freight trains. On the latter he is chased after by the brakemen, who are anxious to make him pay his way, not for the benefit of the railroad company, but for the benefit of themselves. Brakemen have been known to make more money this way, in a month, than their regular salary would amount to. Tramps have a tradition that there was once a big, beautiful brakeman who haughtily refused to take bribes; but he died. It may be said that no money is obtained in this man who haughtily refused to take bribes; but he died. It may be said that no money is obtained in this way from the professional tramp, who objects on principle to paying for anything. Workmen out of a job but with a few dollars in their pockets are generally the kind who pay for a ride in a box car. They are called "gay cats" by the regular tramps, and this paying for a ride is one of the causes of the deadly enmity held against them. Why are they called chts, and why gay? It would seem as if the regular tramp is the more gay of the two. He takes a cheerful view of life and does not believe in worrying any more than in working. The men who do not pay for a ride call themselves the "wise ones," and their wisdom consists same length, or if they are greatly different in length, in getting through the world with the least possible the omen is bad. The strips should just differ slightly in length, and that is taken as a sign that the name is well chosen.

The wise ones do not believe in carrying a roll of blankets. It looks too much like hard work and it is difficult to beat their way on a train with a big bundle, the father whispers the name of the child to the Day-one, who then proclaims it is aloud value. oward the gay cats.

It does not follow, though, that all men on the road who carry blankets are looking for work. There is a certain clas of tramps who carry blankets and never beat a train; but they are heartily despised by the rest of the fraternity. They are mostly old men, though there are some young men among them, who wander through the country the year round, making their bed at night in a barn or under a tree. These pedestrians usually revolve around some large town where the farmers are thickly settled, returning again and again to the same place. One lady assured the writer that one old man had called regularly at her home for a meal, every summer, for the last twenty years. His tale of woe is that he is just recovering from an attack of rheumatism and so, for the time being, stands excused from hard labor. His tale is always the same and ka is evidently under the blissful delusion that the lady has forgotten him during the intervening welve months. She has never attempted to dissipate this delusion. It might spoil his appetite which, for a chronic invalid is excellent.

These old men will stay in the same district around It does not follow, though, that all men on the road chronic invalid is excellent.

These old men will stay in the same district around a large town for years, and seldom leave it. They have learned to know the good places, and besides, in the Western States, the distances between the big towns is too great. There are two such centers in California, one around San Francisco, the other around Los Angeles. The deserts and the thinly-populated country in between form an insurmountable barrier to these old men who do not aspire to riding on a train. It is very different with the active young fellows, who think nothing of jumping from California to St. Louis in two weeks, to see the St. Louis Fair, and who will make another jump to New York in a week. From San Francisco to Los Angeles will take them only three days, unless on the way they are forced to pay a visit to the county jail, and partake of hospitality at the expense of the county.

It is only in the United States that the tramp habitually travels on trains. The other countrier laws are

It is only in the United States that the tramp habitu-ally travels on trains. The other countries' laws are stricter. In Canada, also, such traveling is sometimes done, but nearly always by tramps from this country, for the native Canadians are not yet instructed in the gentle art of stealing a ride. They are provincial and behind the times, and have an old-fashioned notion that, if a man cannot pay for a ride, he ought to walk, or stay at home.

At some of the stations on the Canadian Pacific they have mounted policemen to stop this stealing of rides, but these seldom accomplish much. The man stealing a ride generaly does it at night and keeps himself concealed in the ditch or behind a woodpile or some building until the train begins moving. Then there is a hasty rush and a wild grasping of rods or side ladders. Once on, he is safe; it would not pay to stop the train to put him off, and the horse of the mounted policeman only helps him to ride alongside of the train and exchange compliments with the tramp until the superior speed of the train carries the latter out of hearing. In England the beating of trains is practically unknown, and the punishment is six months. In Germany it is a penitentiary offense, and there is no saying what they would do to a man in Russia who tried to beat his way. They might regard him as a dangerous lunatic who might have designs on the life of the Czar and exile him to Siberia.

Czar and exile him to Siberia.

The problem of the tramp is tougher than the tramp himself. The public in the United States do not believe in meting out a severe punishment to him. His crime is not that he has done something but that he has done nothing. He can manage to put up with the discomforts of life in jail, so long as there is no rock oile attached. The rock pile is certainly the beat method so far devised for getting rid of the tramp. He distlikes work with pay, but work without pay is a subject on which his language is unfit for publication.

If it were not for the climate, less would be seen of the tramp in California. Here he can sleep out the whole year. Back East, in the winter months, he is often obliged to seek a jail for shelter at night, and here he comes in contact with a class of men with whom he considers it had form to associate. Many tramps come out to California, every winter, just to avoid the rigors of the eastern climate. In the summer, when there is plenty of work here, they return East, and leave the sorrowing Californians to get along as best they can without them.

In fact, there are many who consider Mohammed the most wonderful man the world has yet seen, and he was undoubtedly a genius from many standpoints. The piece de resistance of his art, however, concerned itself with enforcing his rule on the Mohammedan world, and performing what no man since his time would attempt, the veiling of millions of women. Ever since the day when the Koran became the gospel and law of one of the largest fractions of the world's population, and Meeca was made the shrine for the peoples of the best part of Asia, Mohammed's ruling has hidden the faces of countless millions of beauties, and only now, when the twentieth century is creeping slowly in on the sixth in the Orient, are the first actual departures being made from the rule.

An Interesting Bit of History.

An Interesting Bit of History.

As far back as 315 B.C., Salonica has been the center of turmoil, and a pretty woman was never safe on its streets. Kassander it was who really founded the city, driving the inhabitants of a town to the south into it by force, and giving the mushroom village the name of his queen—sister of the omnipotent Alexander—Thessalonica. Thessalonica had a good struction here on the Thermaisian Gulf, and what with strong fortifications and stronger alliances, it rapidly aspired to power, becoming the metropolis of Macedonia in an incredibly short time, and remaining the capital of that province, when Macedonia was swallowed up in the Roman empire. We have heard much of old Thessalonica. Cicero lived here in exile; and here, not over a half-century before one birth of Christ, the Paul did the preaching which survives in our Bibles, while Rome was in the tender mercies of Nero. In fact, St. Paul is reputed to have founded a church at this place, and it was to this point that the two famous Epistles were addressed. Of the strenuous lives of these early Christians history has had a good bit to say, for then and there was the beginning of troublous times for the Salonicans.

Further, even with this, the pretty sister must sheitered from the eyes of overly admiring men, and see the veil. And the veil, ever since, has distinguished Christian from Moslem. Even in later times it served, too, to protect the Turkish women. During days of mob rule, in 1876, when the French and man Consuls were killed by the populace, and at these of the consultant days of mos raile, in 1876, when the French and tan Consuls were killed by the populace, and at time of the great conflagration, where 2000-odd were destroyed in order that somebody might his revenge; as recently, in fact, as the demonstra-incident to the dynamiting of the Ottoman Bank, pril, a year ago, it was this difference that alone many a woman from injury or insult.

Nor is this strange when one resers that everywhere in the East the costume is y local, and that there is as much difference bepurely local, and that there is as much difference between cities located as closely as Boston and Salem as there would be between New York and Los Angeles. Down in Herzegovina veiling still persists to the greatest extreme. There a hood, projecting far beyond the face, is attached to the black coat of the matron, and, sol content with this, the Turkish women draw a plece of black cloth directly over the countenance. Upon this latter a scarlet or golden design is embroidered, so that as the women saunter down the harem lanes, one imagines a butterfly or beetle perching on a field of black inside the poke bonnet. Yet in Herzegovina, ever since the Austro-Hungarian occupation, women have been as safe as they are anywhere in the Christian world. But here, in wicked Salonik, where no one could swear that, even excepting natural causes, he will be living to-morrow, the Turkish women are now beginning to abw, the Turkish women are now beginning to abperformed the face covering, and it is probable that before many years have passed they will go about bare-faced, mashamed. The Mohammedan gipsies of the Sandchak of Novi-pazar have already arrived at such condition, and I am told that among the settled Moslem tribes of Minor a like state prevails

It must affect the social status of all Turkey, and with the present status completely overthrown, the Ottoman empire will either rise to new heights, or else tumble to the ground. There can be no half-way measure. It goes without saying that had not Mohammed given such absolute sanction to the wearing of the veil, Mosiem women would never have become as distinct and held so far aloof from the Christians in their country at they have. Consequently, the harem life would have been modified by contact in the centuries, and the traditions imbibed by the Turk, while still in his mother's care, would have been wholly other. Incidentally, too, had the young Turkish girls mingled more with the non-Moslem women, there would never have been drawn such sharp lines in fashions as now exist, determined by religious beliefs alone, and in every town in the Orient, from Buda Pest eastward to the Amur of Afghanistan's dofinains, instead of two sets of raiments in every city, village and town, there would today have been but one. All in all, the Turkish women of Salonica dress better an do the dames of the proletariat anywhere else in the Balkans. Satin and silk are the general favorites, and the women do not stint. Great flowing sleeves, black satin edged with crepe, is the regulation attire for the matron. A widow's veil fits over the rear of the head, while across the face a band of brown, checkered or plain, completes the costume. Most of the women carry black parasols, no matter what the weather, and almost all of the wealthier Turkish dames are attended by their stalwart Moorish slaves. puffed wairt, and tastily-embroidered skirt, all of here giant blacks, following the small, hooded women These giant blacks, following the small, hooded women of falonik, make one realize more than anything else that the East is still the East of the olden time. Much has been asked, in the last few years, of the status of slavery in Macedonia, and a Consul tells me it is this: A slave can go to any foreign Consul and make declaration of unwillingness to remain any longer in bondage. This testimony the Consul then presents the Vall or Governor, and the slave is declared free. In Ottoman domains, slavery, per se, is legally prohibited, but the law is a fiction unless enforced in this wise. In Salonica I was assured that the majority of blacks one sees on the streets are the absolute slaves of their mistresses, and as a Moslem will never mistreat a fellow Mohammedan, many of these have not the slightest desire for freedom.

Now and then the younger girls accompany mamma and the Moor on the day's shopping, and in their brown and white checked gowns, and the veil over the upper half of the face, like a domino mask, they add a bit of color to the street picture. Father is never along on these shopping excursions—men seem much alike the world over—and aside from an occasional peddler, like he who swindled Mrs. Aladdin of her magic lamp, the residence streets are almost barren of men in the businewholed Mrs. Aladdin of her magic lamp, the residence streets are almost barren of men in the business hours of the day. A lad from the tinner's shop, or a donkey train, heavily-laden, or some water-seller with polished urn of brass, may draw the inmates of the harems to the lattices, and, like the only man at an American seaside hotel, these peddlers become absolutely "it."

Strict as are the Turkish women, as to the proprieties in matters of dress, to just such degree is the Salonik Jewess negligent. Probably in all the world where European dress prevails, there is not a race of women who wear such decided open-work, whose waists are as low-cut save for lace, and whose flounces so loosely cover the figure, as do these Jewesses of Salonik. Further, the play of colors in their costume is such as to attract attention. Your Salonik Jew grows rich very quickly, and what he earns his wife spends on her clothes. Black silk skirts that outrival those of the Turks, open-work waists of the finest Flemish laces, and, above all, a low-cut cape of black satin, fringed with just enough gilt braid to make the glossy black seem immaculate, such is the regulation costume. On the head these women wear a "coffle," a circular flat cap of red, with triangle of black worn on the front. Suspended from this and braid to make the glossy black seem immaculate, such is the regulation costume. On the head these women wear a "coffle," a circular flat-cap of red, with triangle of black worn on the front. Suspended from this, and in relief against the black of the cape and skirt are two or three broad ribbons of the greenest of green, which the wind lifts, now and then, and flaunts in the faces of passers like advance posters of an American circus, half-torn from some city biliboards. Attached to these ribands are the Jewesses, fleshy and small of stature, and if once one has seen a group of them gossiping in their spoiled Spanish, which is here printed in Hebrew letters, you will-never forget the sight. Up to the time of marriage these Jewesses wear loose, ordinary European attire, but after that sacrament it is this costume that alone prevails. There are just as many synagogues as mosques in Salonica, thirty apiece, while the Christians have but twelve churches.

These Jews are descendants of exiles from Spain who took refuge here in the year of America's discovery. As result of a religious revival in the seventeenth century, some of these people became converts to Islam, but as they took on only the externals of the faith, the Mohammedans scorn, rather than affiliate with them.

The lighter shade of Salonik life is given by the Greeks. Short white skirts daintily fluted, white waists, a great red belt full of pistols, finely-chased, and tall red fez, make the Greek men perfect types of Oriental splendor, especially in contrast to the dirty Spanish Jews of masculine persuasion.

This, however, is picking the melée to pieces. Bring in the background of sea, Olympus and the chain of low,

This, however, is picking the melée to pieces. Bring in the background of sea, Olympus and the chain of low, bluer hills, and then let these folk commingle, and the scene takes on kaleidoscopic variation. Greek in white, with sash of red and fez, Turk of fair complexion and swarthy, bearded Jew, men in Occidental attire save for the fez of the nearer East. Jewish women, Turkish women, the street wagons drawn by the Cape buffalo—one must needs be ever snapping the kodak!

Going shopping or marketing in Salonica is like visiting a World's Fair Midway. In the fruit stores, where lemons are piled high on the floor, fishermen, like those of the Bagdad tales, in great fur coats and with fish in band, are stopping. Near by are the bazaars of baubles and trinkets, cheap glass bracelets, candles, soap and fligree, cloth of gay colors, and all thronged with people in costume. Close beside is a meat bazaar, with the flies nesting on the mutton in the doorway, and one wonders if an export of American ice chests would not prove as great a bonanza as our sewing machines have been. Near at hand is the fish arcade, equally flithy, with its baskets of sea trout and eels. Beyond the cheeses are Near at hand is the fish arcade, equally flithy, with its baskets of sea trout and eels. Beyond the cheeses are sold, and vegetables are stacked in the distance.

The clothes bazaar of Salonik is one of the most curious in the world. Shops of the sort, including venders of dress goods, silks, filigrees of better quality, nargilehs and embroideries, line one steeply ascending thoroughfare, about the width of an old Boston cow path, and over this lane a lattice work roof has been thrown, so that the avenue seems one great arcade. On the second floor of this tunnel the shop owners usually live, and that no sound of trafficking may disturb their slumbers, these bazaars are closed in the evening.

The Salonik Turk is exceedingly impetuous in his calls these bazaars are closed in the evening.

The Salonik Turk is exceedingly impetuous in his calls to the foreign buyer, and one cannot pass through the arcade, it is safe to say, without at least one more tidy, pipe, scari, or bit of stoneware. More of these narrow arcades lead off to left and right, that one may become lost in the tantalizing mazes, and what between fruit stores and bakeries, tobacco booths and cafés this Salonik is a strangely other one from the petrified mass of walls that rises up from the wharf when seen from the harbor. There are modern hotels and warehouses, and foreign postoffices that one's mail be not confiscated if the Turks suspect treasonable content; but here things Turks suspect treasonable content; but here things truly Turkish. Get lost among these unlit streets cish. Get lost among these unlit streets her's night and you will appreciate the face of a dark summer's night and you will appreciate the fact most thoroughly.

How the men make a living in the nearer East is a baffling question to the American. Except that a stranger pass through the bazaars, the Turks, in particular, remain squatting over their nargilehs at the edge of the booths the livelong day, and buyers do not seem plenty. "Grain, cotton, wool, cocoons, and goat's hair" are listed in the exports of the city; there are a few steam mills in the town, some cotton spinning, a tannery, dye houses and metal manufacturies, but who does the work is a question. ork is a question American Shoe Polish.

The only absolute and incessantly busy factor of Sa The only absolute and incessantly busy factor of Salonican life is the chestning vender and the bootblack. Nowhere in all the world are there more absolutely pestering bootblacks than in this vilayet capital of Macedonia. Boston shoe polish is consumed almost exclusively over the Balkans, and the best sales are in Salonica. Many of these little bootblacks sell souvenir postals also, Many of these little bootblacks sell souvenir postals also, and they drive one to extremes with their pestering. One of them would come time and again, to our table on the quay, verily push the cards in our pocket, saying, in his broken French, "he gives them to us," and then start shining our shoes under protest. Finally to teach both him and the others a lesson, we pocketed the cards and walked into the lobby. He waited an hour for us, but we did not appear with the money. Then, through the shutters we saw him begin to cry. We reappeared and explained that, he having given us the cards, and shined our shoes without orders, we did not have to pay for them. So he wept, and his comrades looked on in indignant sympathy. They knew too well that against foreigners, who might bring into play the power of the the figure, as do these Jewesses of Salonik. Further, the consults at Salonik, they could expect absolutely no justice in Turkish courts, so there seemed nothing for tention. Your Salonik Jew grows rich very quickly, and what he earns his wife spends on her clothes. Black of them, pleaded poverty, and we were touched by his story. We returned him his pictures and a plaster for present, more than he would clear by his blackings in a week, and he went away, rejoicing. But after that our shoes were shined only when we so desired. The crowd had learned its lesson.

Another unexpected feature in connection with costumery in this heathen land are the venders of rosaries. Many of the Turks retain the fez alone as symbol of their faith, and in order to be distinguished from these Mohammedans, who wear a rosary also, the Greek Catholics carry the sacred beads, but of another sort. Not even on the streets of ultra-Catholic Rome have I seen so many rosaries in actual use as here in this infidel meso many rosaries in actual use as here in this induct inc-tropolis, and, with the background of Moorish gates into high-wailed courtyards and the turbaned tombstones or the fountains, the picture is strikingly incongruous. If then, a Jew, too, should pass, with a copy of the "Life of Roosevelt" that one finds in all Balkan book stores, under his arm, the comminglement of interest would be foreibly complete.

The introduction of the veil has affected architecture also, in the East, for Turkish women must needs take the air, and so you enter the house through a courtyard, and this is inclosed by a towering wall, at whose doublethis is inclosed by a towering wall, at whose double-doored gate one knocks, that the women may retreat or cover. Lattices, too, are at the street windows, and through them one gets inklings of harem squabbles that make us wonder how the two later wives of the Turk agree with the omnipotent first one.

Such is the nearer East today in the matter of social life, and for such as it is, in every vital phase, we owe thanks most to Mohammed.

* Superstition Mountains. THE STORY OF MYSTIFYING PEAKS ON COLORADO DESERT.

By a Special Contributor.

HE weirdest, wildest, strangest and most mystifying mountains in the West have "looked pleasant" and had their pictures taken, for the first time in many centuries of their existence. They have also st been explored and, for the first time, the real story of the unique piles is about to be related.

A little more than a year ago, when the writer was traversing the southwestern portion of the Colorado desert, he saw rising out of the plain, on the western side of the desert, a little chain of peaks, which in the distance blended and presented the appearance of a long, low-lying solitary mountain. When he asked one of the desert dwellers the name of the eminence he was told that it was "Superstition Mountains."

e name at once suggested that there was a story ected with the peaks, but three days of patient iry failed to elicit any information regarding the day previous to the one when we reached the peaks, the mountains looked very near. We thought we the mountains looked very near. We thought we might reach them early in the day, but the longer we inight reach them early in the day, but the longer we traveled toward them the further away they appeared, till about the middle of the afternoon, when they seemed very near again. They continued to draw near until near sundown, when they again receded. The march toward them was continued long after dark, with their dim outlines and the stars for guides, and when night camp was finally made because the clumps of night camp was finally made because the clumps of greasewood had become so small that it was feared that beyond would not be found aught to which we could tie our burro, the mountains seemed as far away as ever. The same peculiar impressions prevalled in leaving the mountains. Some of the time they appeared to be following us, again they would retreat to the distant portion of the plain.

Then, too, the contour of the mountains was constantly changing. A part of the time—they copeared like one long low mountain; again like several peaks; and again like many. This phenomenon is one of several which have given the mountains a bad reputation with the Indians, but this feature, at least, is not difficult to account for.

To begin with, the mountains are surrounded with miles of sand drifts which are from a few feet in fields of lava and volcanic débris. the occasional tremors of the earth ther the results of deep down boilings and by yet uncooled sea of moulten rocks, the re ancient active spouters.

The approach to these mountains is almost as as the mountains themselves. could not be done.

About ten miles south of the mountains the dunes are left behind, for a time, and a plain lies a fore which is hard, almost, as a paved field, but shall thickly with irregular pebbles from the size of a mut up to stones larger than a hen's egg. Every a in nature is here represented. There are red and mottled granite pebbles, faspers, green serpent chalcedony, agate, hyolite, gneiss, gypsum, fluore and many other varieties of stones and semi-presents. While they are pretty to look upon the trave finds them extremely unpleasant to the feet, for thickly they lie one cannot avoid stepping upon the Beyond this plain, which is three or four miles.

Beyond this plain, which is three or four midth, is a plain, equally hard, thickly set with white, glassy pebbles the size of peas. Still I this is a field of rea volcanic mud which has has to the constituency of India rubber. This is aprithe foot and not unpleasant to walk upon. He is one of the of the evil spirits and one of the chief high houses, is surposed to be his.

But little vegetation is found in the Supership Mountains, or upon the plains at their base. Two a three lilies of an unknown variety were found in course of a day's exploration, and on the top of a of the tallest peaks were found growing specimens a dwarf variety of eactus, heretofore unknown to writer.

At the base of one portion of the range, upon a of loose, drifting sands, was found a charming surp The base of the mountains lie nearly or quite 100 below the level of the sea. The ancient beach marks left by the California gulf when it extende to this point, is still to be traced along the sides of mountains. It was along this ancient beach that found acres of brightly-blooming flowers, saturathe air with a rare and delicate fragrance. They the wild verbena—so called, the pink abronia, or ronia pulchella, so common to sea beaches along coast.

No doubt the ancestors of these flowers bloomed the when the spray of the waves of the gulf fell along the now dry and sandy beach. Century after century has they held possession of that ancient shore and he bloomed unseen and wasted their sweetness upon the desert air. These scions of an ancient stock did a live wholly in vain, however, for our burno make fragrant and juicy meal off the gaudy plants.

Have the mountains a future? Perhaps. There and doubtless minerals of value in their breasts. One of pan color out of the red earth which has been wasted own from them. There are stones scattered over the plain which hint that gems may lurk in the recessed the hills. It will not be surprising if some day the pick and drill, the crusher and the stamp mill had displace the evil spirits. Wah Didin may move out a give room for the hoddens of Fortune.

informant. "They believe them to be the home of the evil one and of all evil spirits."

There is a reason why the Indians look upon the mountains with awe and trembling, and why they have peopled it with the spiritual enemies of the tribe. Owing to certain conditions, which will be explained further on, the mountains, seldom present the same appearance twice. They are costantly changing their contour and seemingly their location on the plain. One man, in reply to a question as to their location replied:

"Well, at this season of the year I should judge they are probably twenty miles north of the Mexican line. Last spring they were about down to the line."

The writer, with photographer, C. C. Pierce of Los Angeles, visited the mountains, for the purpose of exploration, in December of 1904. The morning of the

Some-times they add a line of hills several miles long to one end of the chain of peaks, and again they are found on the other end. the mountains themselves are formed, are left bare.

The shadow effects also have much to do with the transforming of these mysterious mountains. The morning sun siriking the white sand drifts, sends black shadows over other parts of the mountains, shaping in black and white lines, to the vision, peaks and cafions which do not really exist. The noon sun changes these lines, giving a very different appearance to the range, and the evening sun works still another transformation.

 The Poverty of London. AWFUL CONDITIONS RESULTING FROM OPEN PORTS.

By a Special Contributor.

To an American the squalid, gloomy poverty of London is appalling. Knowing full well that in all large cities there will of necessity be destituted, he is prepared to see a considerable amount of it in this, the biggest city in the world; but no such soverty as exists in London is he prepared for, it simply, to use a now time-worn phrase, staggers humanity, it is everywhere, unhidden, walking gaunt and grim on the highways of fashion and commerce, and herding it are and fifth in the slums. In New York or Chicago it is kept pretty much to itself, but here it rubs elbows with the business man in the city and the fashionable woman in the west end. And this state of affairs is not because there is no desire to restrain it within bonds, but simply for the reason that there is so much dit no amount of care will keep it from the public view. The workhouses are full to overflowing, so are the jalls: and every charitable institution is unable to keep up with the demands made upon it.

Under normal conditions it is estimated that in London ihe really destitute, who in some way or another used praviding with the necesaries of life at the hands of the state number one in forty-five. Compare this viih one out of 170 in France, one out of 200 in Germany, and one out of 419 in the United States, and it can be seen at a glance what an awful amount of destitution there is in this great metropolis. Such a state with one out of 170 in France, one out of 200 in German, and one out of 419 in the United States, and it can be seen at a glance what an awful amount of destation there is in this great metropolis. Such a state of affairs as this, even in the normal times referred to, needed careful, earnest management. But now it has gone beyond management and thinking men look aghast at what the consequences of it all will be. In Poplar, one of the London districts near the docks, at a meeting of the Board of Guardians, a few days ago, it was announced officially that there were 80 per cent. more prople in receipt of relief than at the same time last year, and last year the amount of poverty was above the average. At West Ham, another subdivision of this great city, frantic, starving men meet daily and off out for food, or work that they may earn it. And just think of it, never a morning dawns in that gloomy district, but the army of 10,000 starving men and women are reminded, by the inexorable hand of death, that eas or two of their number gave up the struggle during the night, that struggle for life in London in which so many fall. The list of the fallen, were it put on paper, the names of those whose death has been directly due to starvation, would reach from end to end of that august assemblage, the House of Commons. The list would find no need for going back over five years, either.

At the dock gates crowds of men gather and fight with their fists for a place in the line where they may each an erroloyer's eye, and gain a few hours' work to earn the bare necessities of life for wives and children. The London poor! What a question it is! How is it going to be answered? The American there musiness may well hold his breath and ask how, and well, too, may he exclaim from the bottom of his beart in no Pharasaical strain, "Thank God, we are not as these people!" for as he asks himself the question how it is all going to be remedied, he notes that to steps are taken to keep out the alien pauper. On the authority of Maj. W. Evans Gordon, member of Parliament, there are twelve shiploads of poor forguers arriving weekly, and 40 per cent. of them are stitute when they land. No wonder the pauperization of London goes on apace. How we, in this land of first, may congratulate our Congressmen for having mad an alien immigration law which prevents such in a way, to do it, but we must also congratulate our of affairs beneath the Stars and Stripes. It is suited in a way, to do it, but we must also congratulate our congress has have on this alien immigration attracts to our shores he mechanics and artizans of England. Under our seem we get our recruits from the top. The best as in the trades see the inevitable. The influx of some aliens from the continent, often driven from the estimant to England, lowers the standard of living, lives wages, of course, bit by bit, and the best men, selling themselves crowded from below, leave before it is too late. Masters of their trades, they come with their avings, the accumulation of years of patient toil, to belp build up our great republic. Under the system to the total conden? the dock gates crowds of men gather and fight feling themselves crowded from below, leave before it is too late. Masters of their trades, they come with their savings, the accumulation of years of oatient toll, the belp build up our great republic. Under the system now in vogue, England recruits from the bottom strata of society. But this is a digression. What of London? What of the poor there? Will the rich help them? Anwer that by asking further. Why should the rich try to help by stemming the tide of foreign immigration? England is a free trade country, and a great morning daily paper on the 15th of December, the leading free trade journal in London, made an eloquent plea not only for free trade in dead commodities but for free trade in living men and women. It was prettilly written, but it was that sort of writing which would bring a meer to our men's lips if they saw it in an insertent daily. No, the rich have nothing to complain of it wases do go down. Men with settled incomes are better off-thereby, and nowhere else in the world is there so large a class of those who toll not, neither spin. Everything the rich want is cheaper there than is the United States. Diamonds, champagne, silk, satin, lace, condiments, delicacles and luxuries of all kinds; it is only when one comes to the absolute necesities of life, the things the working class only buy, with the exception of sugar, that we see a dearer set of figures. Best, coffee, bacon, cheese, butter, eggs, lard, flour, all are dearer than with us, while the workingman's made are simply out of the comparison so infiniteshally small do they too often appear; and they are dropping, dropping all the while. One never hears free trade advocated, now, in the United States. Protection that protects is our motto. It has come to stay, to stay, also, are our rigid allen immigration laws. Perhaps our tariff is higher than necessary, we will grant that for the sake of argument, but that it is as much a poor man's tariff as a rich man's we must maintain. One glance at London's poor and we are willing to have our tariff too high, we should be willing to tolerate even a higher one still, if it should add one step to the distance which separates us from such conditions as prevail in England.

We are sometimes told, by men who have not been step to the distance which separates us from such conditions as prevail in England.

We are sometimes told, by men who have not been there, that London can keep her gate open to the oppressed humanity of the world and not suffer. So vast is London, they say, that every class of alien can be assimilated. Experience gained by observation does not bear this out. Americans interested in the wheat trade and shipping, interests which take them much into the East End, not that things there get more deplorable year by year. In the last ten years, they will tell you, the face of much of it has entirely altered. It is possible to go down street after street and see the stores kept by foreigners outnumbering those kept by the home-born, and whole rows of houses have not an Englishman in them. Pollah Jews, Russian Jews, Armenians and Bohemians are often the only faces to be seen in a crowded car. In some of the schools of the East End, where ten years ago there was but a sprinkling of foreign children, they now predominate, and but a sprinkling of English are to be seen. Then there are factories which employ nome but Jews, and there are sweat shops in the same quarter beside which the sweat shops of New York and Chicago may be regarded as princely. Such things as these strike an American as a result of a wrong system of political economy—a pity, that is all; but they do not touen his feelings like the sight of woe-begone men, women and children standing in line at the doors of some charitable institution for their bowl of soup and slice of bread, all that there will be to keep the lamp of life burning for a whole day. And going home at night, if a man ever has to walk on the embankment, on the bridges which cross the Thames, by the park railings, under the long avenues of trees here and there, he will if a man ever has to walk on the embankment, on the bridges which cross the Thames, by the park railings, under the long avenues of trees here and there, he will see the figures of gaunt men and women flitting in the half light like specters. Some will beg from him, others will let him pass by unmolested, but wherever he goes, he will meet the awful poverty, until he is driven to take a cab home to avoid it all. That is London now, and the winter season has not half gone.

London now, and the winter season has not half gone.

As usual the Salvation Army is doing a good work. Without it, where it most needed, in London, thousands more would be in jail, and tens of thousands worse off. In a vast multitude of cases it has furnished a lifeboat escape from the stormy sea of trouble where the hopeless sink at last from starvation. Col. Laurie of the Salvation Army's city colony, in the Whitechapel Road, has done a great deal, to make the poverty of his district known. There, as in other districts, the army has an immense soup kitchen where dock laborers and others out of work can get a pint of soup and a big slice of bread for one cent, between the hours of 6 and 10:30. For the benefit of their famflies the depot is open again from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m., when a quart of soup is supplied for one cent. This accommodation is for those who have got past the self-supporting stage, but can still, by some odd, scraps of work, find one or two cents per day for foud. It is unnecessary to say that, if there is no cent to pay for it, there yet will be the soup supplied. But when this is so, the army's agent investigates the case and acts accordingly.

And this is London—London where there is so much wealth, and so little general welfare. Contars this state of things with that prevailing in our favored land, and thanks must be felt that our workingmen have not been gulled with the Siren cry of free trade in either merchandise, or living men and women. The Republican party has built this bulwark. It has taught our people that the good of the individual is the good of the community. Some day they will learn that in England, and when they do, the awful poverty of London will be checked. In the meantime, it is a good object-lesson for us to see what we have been saved from.

MEDIEVAL RELIGIOUS WARS.

On both sides of the great controversy which took such fearful shape in the middle of the seventeenth century, but especially on the Protestant side, the minds of men were devoted, not to seeking that peace which was breathed upon the world by the New Testament, but to finding warrant for war—and especially the methods of the chosen people in waging war against unbelievers—in the Old Testament. Did any legislator or profesor of law yield to feelings of humanity, he was sure to meet with protests head upon authority of Holy. sure to meet with protests based upon authority of Holy Plunder and pillage were supported by ref Scripture. Flunder and pillage were supported by reference to the divinely approved "spoiling of the Egyptians" by the Israelites. The right to massacre unresisting enemies was based upon the command of the Almighty to the Jews in the twentieth chapter of Deuteronomy. The indiscriminate slaughter of whole populations was justified by a reference to the divine command to slaughter the nations round about Israel. populations was justified by a reference to the divine command to slaughter the nations round about Israel. Torture and mutilation of enemies was sanctioned by the conduct of Samuel against Agag, of King David against the Philistines, of the men of Judah against Adonibezek. Even the slaughter of babes in arms was supported by a passage from the Psalms, "Happy shall be be that taketh and dasheth thy little ones against the stones." Treachery and assassination were supthe stones." THE EARTH'S CAPACITY.

IN NORTH AMERICA IT CAN BE DOUBLED BY THE WORK OF ENGINEERS.

WORK OF ENGINEERS.

[International Quarterly:] The conditions of the lands which are now open to the increase in population which has to be expected within two or three centuries may be taken approximately to show that, at most, there is enough to admit of something like a doubling of the present numbers; that without any-considerable engineering work in lands not available for tiliage a total of about four thousand million can be supported in tolerable comfort.

The question arises as to the additional food-giving capacity of the earth which may be won by means of engineering and other scientific work, as in irrigating arid fields or draining those which are excessively watered, or by improving the methods of fertilizing soils now iff use.

It is impossible, with the present lack of information, soils now iff use.

It is impossible, with the present lack of information, to determine accurately how extensive is the field which may be won to tillage by the work of the engineer; this winning from the excessively arid lands will be done by irrigation, and from the morasses, the fresh-water swamps and the marine marshes by drainage. In Europe the larger part of the land thus winnable has long been brought to use; it is not likely that an increase of 10 per cent. in the food-giving capacity of its soils can, by any known means, be realized. In the less developed continents the gain is likely to be much greater.

Thus within the lim'ts of the United States the

to be much greater.

Thus within the limits of the United States the writer has estimated that the fields improvable by drainage in the manner already applied in Holland would add to the tillable ground of the country an area somewhat exceeding 100,000 square miles in extent, with a food-giving value about four times that of the State of Illinois, wherein the soil would be far more enduring than that-of any upland district. The complementary process, that of irrigation, promises to afford yet larger gains, including the area of the South and the Middle West, where the system would greatly increase the food-giving value of the soil; we may and the Middle West, where the system would greatly increase the food-giving value of the soil; we may reckon the possible enlargement from it would be even greater than that afforded by a complete drainage of the morasses. Taking the continent of North America as a whole, it seems probable that the existing capacity of its soils for feeding men may be doubled by the work of the engineer through his skill in watering and unwatering its deserts and morasses.

On the other continents the opportunities for winning good land from arid deserts are probably less than in North America, yet the possible gain is such that we may reckon that when his great work is done the engineer will have recovered land enough to feed the existing population of the earth. In Africa there is the magnificent problem of the Nile, a river which wastes to the sea in its annual floods water enough to fertilize tenfold the desert that it now makes fertile. There is the valley of the Twin Rivers of Asia, where a realm once fertile has become a watte by the loss of its irrigation works. There are in all the great lands vast areas of lakes, swamps and marshes awaiting the skillful labor which has won Holland from the sea. The largest opportunity of profit is in such brave combats with the incomplete work of nature.

The problem of how we are to maintain the fertility f the soil when the earth is taxed by a population of the soil when the earth is taxed by a population thrice as great as it now supports depends upon our ability to restrain the excessive rapidity with which tilled soils pass to the sea and our ability to restore to the land the materials which the cultivated plants remove. We shall find that both these needs are fairly to be met by the resources of modern science; the first by a proper control of the movements of water from where it falls upon the land to its station in the ecean, and the second by a resort to the occan and under the where it falls upon the land to its station in the ecean, and the second by a resort to the ocean and under the earth for the materials to renew the fertility of the ground when it is exhausted by cropping. There is much to do in order to make the earth fit to bear the life to come, but there is every reason to believe that our science is ready for the task and that within two centuries of peaceful endeavor we may prepare the class of the second place for it.

VEST POCKET DINNERS.

VEST POCKET DINNERS.

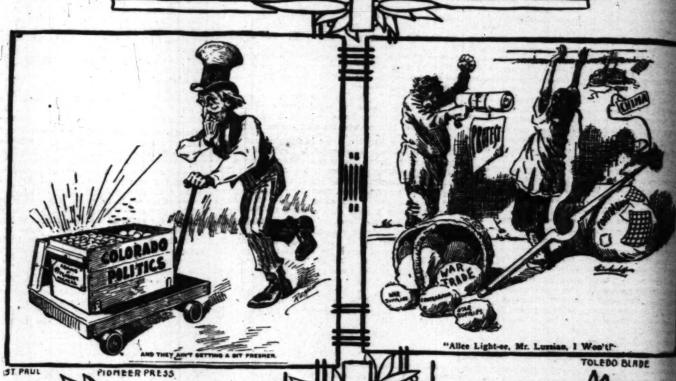

It is said that a German student of food concentration has succeeded so well with his experiments that a single small capsule now suffices for a full meal and that ten seconds is the average time he spends at either his breakfast, luncheon or dinner. The prediction is freely made that within a few years we shall all be subsisting upon capsules, there will be no more cooking in our households and the servant problem will be solved most beautifully. Of course, under these conditions, there would be no more public dinners or banquets of state, our caterers would be thrown out of employment and the great hotels would become simply dormitories. We would buy our meals at the drug stores and carry them in our pockets. The sign "Quick Lunch" would disappear from our streets, for we could all be walking restaurants.

all be walking restaurants.

Whatever the possibility of such a condition from a scientific standpoint, there is not the slightest danger of its realization within the lifetime of the present generation. Most of us, to be frank, are too fond of eating and drinking to be content with capsule repasts, however convenient as time savers. The element of sociability, too, must be taken into consideration. The gathering of a family about the table three times a day adds immeasurably to human enjoyment. It is the place of all places where good cheer should present place of all places where good cheer should prevail. There are sufficient influences at work for the destruction of home life in these busy days without adding one more. We fear the food capsule will be a long time achieving the popularity at present enjoyed by beefsteak ar i totatoes.—[Housekeeper.

If we had expired in of such diversion is plain; yet as you know everyone goes on playing—a few because they are natural gamesters, and the rest of us because we are not strong enough to decline/invitations, and thus openly disapprove of our friends. But really, Tom, I don't think I can endure bridge parties any longer. You see, if you play, you want to win, and then, when you do up others who can't stand for it, you feel much worse than if you had lost yourself—so there you are. Sometimes I think it would be far easier and better for the general health of the madding crowd to saw wood for a change—for charity, of course—with prizes for the largest piles. Fuel so obtained might do a lot of good; for, you know, it could all be sert to the Orphans' Home."

"And the incentive would be not only charitable, but

"And the incentive would be not only charitable, but "And the incentive would be not only charitable, but polendid for the muscles and nerves of participants." Thomas put in with caustic fervor. "I think you had better give a sawing party at once. The entertainment might prove novel for the early winter. A number of our trees need pruning badly. We'll invite the men to a chopping match, allowing you women to use the saw. What a sweet little orphans' woodpile you can make in the course of a day. Then in the evening there should be a bonfire and a 'Blazed Trail' supper on tin plates. Surely the plan is wonderfully original; any orphan ought to feel warm at the very thought of such combustible charity." tible charity.

"You always joke when I am the most serious," Mrs. Marian interrupted.

She pressed her temples with the tips of her fingers, then rang the hell for Gam, the Celestial.

"I am going to have a sick headache; I feel it coming on," she said dejectedly. "This maited milk is so un-on," she said dejectedly. "This maited milk is so palatable; I think I shall try something else."

"Bring me a dish of cream toast," she comman when Gam entered the breakfast room. Her serv beamed significantly and retired. In an incredibly si time he reappeared with an inviting tray.

"I think you eat too much good things—that party," volunteered, with the frank pleasantry granted to voted heathens of long household standing.

Mrs. Marian had suspected that Gam was in dire distress to hear about her visit; to know if the Bains' Chinaman had excelled her own in the art of cookery. She now perceived that a cross-examination was in order. As all Californians know, the individual pride of a first-class Celestial servant is unsurpassed by that of any other nationality. A cook of the first water is heart-broken if he fancies for a moment that his mistress is impressed with the culinary efforts of a rival heathen. Gam crened up without further parley. "I know Miss Bain cook—where you go; he very grand!"

The lady smiled. "Very good," she answered coolly. Gam's yellow brow shone. His mistress had not said "delicious"—he was satisfied. Mrs. Marian had suspected that Gam was in dire dis

He leaned back in his chair and laughed half guildily.
But Gam did not retire to the kitchen. Something was on his mind—something back of the point in question.
He fingered his tray, then spoke desperately:

"That flend I tell you bout get allested down China-

"That fiend I tell you bout get allested down Chinatown, last night."

"Indeed!" said the maxter; "what was the matter?"

"He play fan-tan all same his boss." The reply came with strange directness. "He say his boss not get allested—he think that old cop not allest China boys. He tell me not fair do other way. Gam nodded; then a smile spread upon his countenance. "I glad I skip plenty time!" he exulted.

Mrs. Marian played thoughtfully with her fork. "What is your friend going to do, when his case comes up for trial?" she asked.

With a furtive glance at his master, Gam laid bare his with a furtive glance at his master, Gam Jaid bare his plan. "Oh, that nothing!" he declared. "When my flend consult, I tell him my boss make old cops heap sick. I say my boss best lawyer this city."

He was very proud of his English vocabulary, and fond of unusual phraseology. The lady explained the meaning of unique as best she could, while the heathen persisted in repeating the term with flattered confidence.

"Yea," he boasted, "I understand; plitty soon I tell China boys my master that great, unick lawyer!"

He laughed gleefully. "I say my boss heap better—more smart—more wise—more kind—more good—all same big man—great unick lawyer! "And in the future?" suggested Marian.

"My dear," her husband answered, "don't speak of the future; the present is quite sufficient to face. In fact, I seem to be suddenly involved in a regular Ibsen tragedy of causes and effects. My legal brain feels inside out, and upside down, and you must not expect me to reform in a moment. But I promise you one thing—I'll taper off. It's monstrous to be self-ordained as a foreign missionary all in a day. I had no idea the healthen were keeping tab on my little Indiscretions."

PLANTING NOTE-Sow Sweet Peas plentifully during the com-weeks. Evergreens and shrubs may be planted.

there was ever a citizen of Southern California who sneered at "Smiley's Folly," he is not to be located today, unless indeed he be some unfortunate individual who has such a load of moss on his back that he has never climbed the hill from Crescent avenue, and looked over the magnificent valley surrounding the beautiful city of Redlands, Dulled indeed must be the sensibilities of the man who, having taken the crive over Crescent avenue to Smiley Heights, rising to the viewpoints of the Cañon Crest Park, does not express in some way an appreciation of the betterment of the world generally, and Redlands especially, by the establishment of this beautiful park. True, if one be in a critical mood, or inclined to look superficially, there can be found faults. The landscape gardener may exclaim over opportunities lost, for while there are relended vistas in the arrangement of the planting at Smiley Heights, yet there are many "sins of omission," if but few of commission.

And, all this, this possibility of pleasure for multitudes who annually visit Smiley Heights has resulted from the generous thought on man.

The Proper Arrangement of Shrubberies.

Talking recently with a man known the world over for his splendid work in landscape gardening, and who is an ardent admirer of Southern California, he said to me: "Why do your people constantly struggle after the things in plant life that Nature never intended for them? This is a wide world, and you have many lands them? This is a wide world, and you have many lands to choose from, if you find after a little experimenting that a certain plant can only be secured with great difficulty, and then not in perfection, why not content yourselves with the perfection of others that you may easily have. It is all nonsense, this striving to make northern pines grow in tropical lands, and vice versa, and especially in public planting it is worse than folly."

Now my friend was both right and wrong. I had rather have one heakby rose bush (and I can)—than a dozen dwarfed camelias—(which I can't!) The healthy rose bush will cost me, it may be, ten cents to plant,

The Glory of Redlands

Today, of all the famous drives and boulevards in California, I know of none that lends more glory to the State than the Canon Crest driveway over Smiley the State than the Cañon Crest driveway over Smiley Heights. The gradual approach through a 'tree-lined avenue that curves at the base of the hills just enough to give a sense of surprise at each onward movement, the splendid pepper 'rees waving a gracious welcome to each passer by, on either hand fine orange orchards and magnificent villas where home making in its perfection may be seen. Ascending the hill one passes through bowers of roses, past masses of green shrubbery enlivened with vivid blossoms, up to the summit, passing the beautiful but modest home of Albert K. Smiley, and on to the crest of the cañon. The view on either hand can not be surpassed, man can never mar the great plan of the Great Landscape Artist here. and a few months: loving care, while the camelias might cost me $100, and all the love I might lavish, would not make them flourish in the particular locality in which I wish to live, but, on the other hand, and speaking directly of floriculture, this is a new land of ours. We have not much of precedent to go by. Our gardening must be largely a matter of experiment for many years must be largely a matter of experiment for many years to come. Very slight changes of aktitude, or of temperature, or of humidity, will mean life or death to plant life, and in a way; (and this largely owing to an overcautiousness on the part of our commercial growers,) there is much yet to be tried in plant life in our section. I think I have said before that it is the duty of every flower lover to do some of this experimenting, and this department stands ever ready to chronicle such experiments, to advise regarding the difficulties, and to assist or suggest regarding anything which relates to the advancement of floriculture.

A Redlands Villa on

Now, one suggestion that has come to me very recently is that in the planting or massing of shrubberles a very common error made is that of attempting too marked contrasts, or the planting side by side shrubs that have such entirely differing habits, that they may, so to speak, never be "happy together." A rule fol-lowed by landscape artists is that varieties of the same cies are more generally effective if placed in con-ction. For instance, in the acacias, the foliage is very distinctive in each variety, so that, placed side by side, two trees are, save to the botanist, absolutely like, yet the same conditions of culture will satisfy both and cause them to flourish. While on this subject I must again revert to the use of our many beautiful native shrubs. Along the slopes of the Sierra Madre grow many rarely beautiful shrubs, and yet time and again my heart has ached, to see them ruthlessly dug out or maltreated by some home builder, who destroys the growth of many years of a Hecteromeles arbuilout or maltreated by some home builder, who destroys the growth of many years of a Hecteromeies arbuti-folia (California holly) or a splendid Prunus illicifolia (wild cherry) and substitutes for it in the garden mak-ing, some poor little hothouse-grown alien, or perhaps an imported shrub of the same family, that will take years to become acclimated, and perhaps fail to survive the process. It is so much easier to tear out, and than it is to build up, or preserve, but the tim s. It is so much easier to tear out, and down COMFORTABLE HOMES FOR PEOPLE SOF REFINED TASTE.

By a Special Contributor.

HE small house is just beginning to receive the attention it deserves. Not the workingman's small house; that has been planned and written about for many years. We have had the workingman's house labeled in groups and in whole towns. The experiment has been tried in all its phases, and it must be admitted, saily, usually without success. The houses themselves, whether isolated or in groups, have been well planned and well built. The failure has not come through careless or inadequate planning, has not been the fault of architect or builder, but of the occupant. The houses have been too far in advance of the demands of the workingmen and their families, and their care has seemed a hindrance rather than a help. Of course, on the whole, good has come from the experiments in a certain measure of education in comfortable and sanitary living. The "model" house for workingmen will be generally built only when the workingmen appreciate and demand its conveniences, when it becomes a pleasure rather than a care; and this will be only lafter there have been many such structures sacrificed to opening the create than a care; and this will be only lafter there have been many such structures sacrificed to opening the create than a care; and this will be only lafter there have been many such structures sacrificed to opening the create that delayed attention, is that designed for people accustomed to refined and comfortable living, but who either cannot or do not wish to five under the burden imposed by a larger, structure. The great number of flats and apartment houses in the larger cities testify to the growing disinclination to live in large houses. Yet few people are satisfied to live long in this way. They quite universally feel it a makeshift, and where the city in which they live is small enough to make it possible, are continually on the outlook for a home which combines the affective proper are satisfied to live long in this way. They quite universally feel it a makeshift, and where the city in which they live is small tractions of both the apartment and the detached house. On the whole, there is a movement to simpler living among the mass of our people. We are beginning to leave oxientation to the "four hundred" of each community and the body of hangers on who are trying to break into the sacred ranks. The sane, sound mass of the people are coming to feel the folly and burden of caring for a house and its furnishings which are beyond their real needs, even when they can easily afford the money outlay. To spend the best part of one's life caring for superfluous "goods" seems one form of mental unsoundness. There is no greater dignity than in a simplicity which carries with it beauty.

Again, there are small families of two or three people who have small means, but to whom refined and artistic surroundings are as real necessities as food and clothing. They need and can afford only a small house, but is must contain all the essentials of comfort and dignity found in the larger and more elaborate structure. Beauty to him of true culture need not be a matter of large outlay. It need cost far less than ostentatious ugliness. To be sure there is a certain beauty which is costly, as the diamond and pearl are costly, but there is also a beauty that satisfies which results from the skillful use of relatively inexpensive materials by one with a love for good form, true proportions and harmonious coloring. It, of course, takes more thought and a keener artistic sense to attain such beauty than that of greater ostentation.

It is possible to obtain such service in planning the small house. The writer recails several which have been built recently for people whose children have married and who no longer wish the care of the old cumbersome home; several for young married people of small means; one for two sisters, elderly and unmarried; two for widews—friends; one for a mother and daughter, who live ows-friends; one for a mother and daughter, who live alone-both teachers. None of these liked life in an apartment. They preferred the dignity, freedom and comfort of the isolated structure, and the joy of a wee

Because a house is small is no reason why the sense of spaciousness and repose on either outside or inside should be lost. Both qualities are requisite to dignity. To obtain them requires the highest skill in design, yet it has been and can be done. It is a fatal mistake to try to build such a house—small and inexpensive as it is—without an architect. When one of ample means builds, a mistake financially is comparatively trivial; to one of small means, it is momentous. An architect can get re-sults both of construction and design which an amateur cannot hope to achieve, and for the least possible ex-penditure; otherwise he has made a mistake in choosing ne is sure to ask how to enlist such services when the time spent by a busy and successful man in planning a small house to meet the individual requirements of a client would bring him much more money if employed on more important work. It is unquestionably difficult to get an old and successful architect to give such plans his individual attention, but such men usually have in their officer young men well schooled in give such plans his individual attention, but such men usually have in their offices young men, well schooled in this country and abroad, who can execute such work well, especially under the supervision of the older man. Thefi, there are always young men who have just gone "in business for themselves" who have both time and skill to give to the smaller commissions. Such are to be found in every considerable city.

The keynote to the small house is the living-room. Such houses are usually built for two or three people of similar tastes and approximately the same age. This condition makes possible the comfortable use of one large living-room, rather than two very small ones. Such a marcoom, rather than two very small ones. Such a m gives the note of spaciousness and repose to what the else seem a cramped and confined (welling. It what makes the simplicity elegant, what adds dignity distinction to a house which might easily be most commonplace. If necessary, it seems wise to sacrifice much to obtain this large room. In one such house the much to obtain this large room. In one such house the writer has in mind, occupied by two people, the dining-room was simply an alcove off the living-room. The large connecting opening in which hung portieres dispelled the idea of the dining alcove being cramped. It could be either a part of the living-room or an independent space. A wee staircase hall and a small kitchen completed the first floor. On the second were three bedrooms and a bath

In general, these are the number and character of rooms comprised in such a house as we are describing. It is curious how many different plans may be made with this combination, clans which vary with the disposition of the rooms themselves, and with their relation one to the other. A
and staircase hall in the center. To the right was the very charming noise of this type had the small entrance and staircase hall in the center. To the right was the living-room, 16x24 feet, running the full length of the wee house. This gave windows on three sides of the room. On the fourth was an ample mantel and fireplace. To the left of the hall was the dining-room 16 by 14 feet, and back of it the kitchen, 14x12 feed. Back of the stairway were the pantries and cellar entrance. It would be way were the pantries and cellar entrance. It would be difficult to find a more charming room than this living-room, ample in size, simple in detail. The peculiar charm was due in large measure to the windows on three sides, a feature not possible in any but a small house, except at the expense of a separate wing. The floors were of quarier-sawed yellow pine, which takes a beautiful color with age, and polishes well. The doors and casings were of stained white wood or poplar, in this case a dull green, which was carried out in the more delicate shadings of the mantel tiles.

A feature of the second floor was an enclosed porch at the back of the house over the living-room. The space over the front part of this room was used as a dressing-room, while that over the rear was occupied, as said, by an inclosed porch used as a bedroom. The two exposed sides were inclosed with the heavy exterior Venetian blinds so well known, which can be set to exclude the view from the outside and admit the air, and also, if desired, keep out both rain and mit the air, and also, if desired, keep out both rain and snow. The occupants of this house—which was built far enough north to give severe winters—slept here during the entire year. With the ample and comfortable dressing-room adjoining, there was none of the discomfort attending much out-of-door sleeping. There were two other bedrooms and a simple but ample bathroom on two other bedrooms and a simple but ample the second floor.

The decoration of this house is unique in that but one color in many tints was used through both inside and outside. Each room was treated in some shade of green. Variation was secured through the tint of green used and as well through the color combined with it in the various rooms. It was a daring thing to do, but successful because it was skillfully done by one with undoubted artiscense. Beyond question it is the most restful as well as one of the most dignified houses recently built. No exception is made to any house of whatever size or

Space permits just a word in regard to the exterior of the small house. One thing must be sought above all others; the idea of apparent size and repose. The house must be made to look as large as possible. This can be done through the preservation of wide spaces between windows and doors. In other words, avoid such features as bay windows, gables and projections of all kinds. Instead of filling the house with "features," which accentuate its small size, make it one broad, simple feature in itself. Make of it a unit which the eye takes in at a glance, and place on it the least possible decoration of any kind.

THE SILK DRESS BALLOON.

Even as early as 1862 the Union Army had been using balloons to examine the positions of the Confederates, and even that early the scanty resources of the Confederates made the use of balloons a luxury that could not be afforded. While gazing enviously that could not be afforded. While gazing enviously that could not be afforded by the gazing enviously to the handsome balloons of the Federals floating serenely at a distance that their guns could not reach, a Confederate genius suggested that all the silk dresses in the Confederacy be got togother and made into balloons. This was done, and soon a great patchwork ship of many and varied hues was ready for use. There was no gas except in Richmond, and so the silk dress ship of many and varied hues was ready for use. There was no gas except in Richmond, and so the silk dress balloon had to be inflated there, tied to an engine and carried to where it was to be sent up. One day it was on a steamer down the James River, when the tide went out and left the vessel and balloon on a sandbar. The Federals gathered it in, and with it the last silk dress in the Confederacy. Gen. Longstreet used to say laughingly that this was the meanest trick of the war.—[Lee and Longstreet, by Helen D. Longstreet.

FOODS OF THE ABORIGINES AND HOW THEY WERE PREPARED.

By a Special Contributor.

HE overflowing cornucopla used to symbolize the capacity of abundance in the Golden State was almost equally appropriate for primitive man; and, overything came forth of its own free will. Man's share in the plan was the trick of knowing the coming and duration of the seasons. For him nature's commis-sary horn poured out meats of elk, moose, deer, anteiope, sary norn poured out means of eix, moose, acer, anterope, wild sheep, grouse, pheasant, duck, goose, and of fish that he had the means of catching by the score, besides other river and sea fowls. Of berries, grains, nuts and roots there was no limit in quantity, and in variety there were seventy-three known kinds of vegetable foods in California alone.

To keep track of these harvests, and to get the best out of them all, he divided the year into periods; and if we read from the winter solstice, his calendar reckoned two months for the time of cold, using his phrase, two for the time of rain and, more particularly in the north, two for the first grass, and for the spring freshet; May and June to dig roots; June to September for salmon fishing; August and September for fruit; September and October for bulbs; October and November for acorns and nuts; November and December for bear and other hunting.

The coming of many of the crops he hailed by a regu larly-observed dance. Prominent among these functions, especially with Californians, was the dance of the "Big gathering. They also held one called the dance of the Big gathering. They also held one called the dance of the First Grass—after the fall rains; another for the Second Grass, in the spring. They saluted the salmon run by an official dance, with the first catch offered to the gods an official dance, with the first catch offered to the gods to insure good luck. When clover came into prime, when manzanita fruits and giant cactus pears ripened, and when pine nuts were ready for husking, they danced. In fact, judging by the number of these thanksgiving festivals, the primitive resident of the Pacific Slope possessed a happy, grateful heart.

But dances and an easily-solved economic problem did not make life a continuous picnic, at least not for Mrs. Indian. With fresh meats to terk seeds to collect fruits.

With fresh meats to jerk, seeds to collect, fruits to dry, nuts to husk, licorice, cat-tall and sweet-fern roots to pull up, rush roots to roast and pound (to separate the pulo from the central tough ligament,) rabbits to smoke, etc., her household machinery moved along with considerable drudging routine.

Her kitchen furniture was a three-piece set—an obsidian knife, a grinding stone and a basket. The grinding stone filled the two-fold service of flour mill and sausage machine, according to the tribe, and it differed in shape, the square, slightly hollowed metate for corn, etc., of the south, the bowl worn deep by the seed-crushing pestle, and the flattish-top stone and mallet for pow-fering meat—of the north. fering meat of the north.

The story of the basket is ancient history, now; and the recipes of the Indian housewife's cookbook were ver-bal formulas handed down from forebears. A short "Frenchified" menu of national dishes would read some-thing like this.

This list of viands applies to the Coast Indians collectively; furthermore, several of the numbers have passed away, by way of the white man's title to occupy land which once was the Indian's field and hunting ground; or else because the reservation, with its rationary harmour of mest flows and coffee, has relieved him. day hamper of meat, flour and coffee, has relieved him day hamper of meat, flour and coffee, has relieved him of the desire or the necessity to evolve the home product. Other foods, such as mescal, wocus, camass, piñon nuts and acorns, are still staple and fancy groceries in the red man's provision pantry—when he can get them. A few of the dishes were easily prepared; many required sturdy labor and puttering time of Mrs. Indian.

watched till they were cured, then ground them to powder on her two-stone sausage machine.

She packed this powder in sacks of skin (untanned and the hair left on,) then poured melted fat in and mixed the ingredients; and she now had an article called pemmican, the stand-by of the Indian and the fur trader and other early whites in the north. It was made of several meats, also of salmon; and sometimes dried berries were mixed with the meat.

The favorite mode of cooking fresh meat was the smothered heap, or steam roast. This was a big hole in the ground, a bonfire in it, the glowing coals covered with stones and thickly smothered under pine boughs, and when heated through, covered with a layer of meat cut in thin strips, over this other layers of pine and of meat; and so on; the pack ending with boughs. Water was poured on and four or five inches of earth thrown over the whole; when the meat was allowed to cook sevover the whole; when the meat was allowed to cook s over the whole; when the meat was allowed to cook several hours. When taken out, it was sweet and tender, and if prepared by cleanly hands, was a delicacy fit for the palate of any race.

In the Southwest the pit roast was (and is yet) composed of large, pulpy leaves of the maguey (mah-gay-yah, my Mexican friend Lucia pronounces it,) a variety of century plant, though more commonly known as mescal plant. Roast mescal is a very nutritious food; it will keep in good condition for six months, and is highly valued by the Apaches and other families of the desert country.

A "camase bake" used to mean a great joilifection of say, two suns and one sleep or more. For cooking the roast, the pit of glowing coals and hot stones was covered with maple boughs, then with leaves of skunk cabbage, over which was spread thin bark. On this floor were placed the baskets of camass, many bushels, and in the cracks between baskets were stuffed more bulbs in the cracks between baskets were stuffed more bulbs and pine moss, mixed. The oven lid was bark, leaves, boughs, three inches of sand and a roaring fire. By this process they obtained very good flour from the bulbs in the baskets. The bulbs and moss became a dark, solid mass, a splendid sweet taffy for little Indians. Camass bulbs, when boiled with sunflower seeds and sal-mon heads, were called sowete. Pasheco was cakes of thick-boiled camass: and the same dish, thinned

The root of the shistle, the first year's growth, which was white, starchy and parsnip-shaped, was cooked with the camass bake, in the same way. The roasting changed it to a sweet, purple glucose called shanatwhee. The blue lupine's root, two or three feet long and an inch thick, was another choice vegetable, which they designated as culwhaymo; and roasted it in ashes as they did the wapasto.

In the furniture section of the Parls Exhibition of 1900, was a piano built for a Spanish grandee, strangely fitted. On either side of the music rack were electric candles which became brilliant when loud or quick music was played, and almost went out when the melody became slow or funereal. The Spaniard had strange theories as to the relation between light and harmony, and attempted to embody them in his piano.

"The first thing that called my attention to Sam as a writer while out West was his yarn about Jim Wolf's tomcat, which was published in a San Francisco paper. I recognized the incident, and knew there was nobody else out there who could have told it.

"Jim was a printer, and he roomed with Sam, who he thought was the smartest boy that ever lived. One night the girls of the house gave a candy pull, and a lot of sticky molasses candy was laid out on the back porch to cool before pulling. But the trellis was fragile, and Jim was a good healthy boy. The thing gave way with a crash and poor Jim was precipitated like a chunk out of a meteor on that red-hot molasses candy.

The prisoners are all at work proportioned to their physical ability. Some are thrashing and grinding rice; others are weaving coarse cloth of a dark-red color, of which the prison uniforms are made; the old and infirm are separating leaves of paper. All of them receive a percentage of their earnings. The younger prisoners are in school. The discipline is military in form, but in its spirit reformatory.

There are few evasions, notwithstanding the ease with which they could be effected. One reason for this is the efficiency of the Japanese police, which is said to be the best in the world. The prisoners are divided Lard and Peanuts.

T the beginning of the past summer a certain well-known literary woman in the West repaired to the shores of one of the lakes of Michigan there to prepare her cottage for occupancy during the heated term. Before going she had arranged with her husband to cause a lot of household goods to be packed and forwarded by steamer.

It appears that for some reason the shipment was delayed, and that the lady was obliged to write to her husband inquiring with reference to the delay. In con-clusion, she has appended to her letter a postscript, reading, "Please telegraph me when the goods shall have been shipped.

Pursuant to instructions, the husband personally supervised the packing of the various effects needed for the cottage in Michigan, even going down to the dock to see that they were duly conveyed on board the dock to see that they were duly conveyed on board the steamer. Moreover, as requested by his wife, he telegraphed what he had done. "Lares and penates on board," wired he; "will arrive tomorrow morning."

Anecdotes of Diplomats.

To illustrate the squabbles about precedence that so frequently arise in Washington, I will relate a bon mot of the late Venezuelan Minister, Señor Andrade. Mrs. Grant gave a large reception at her house on Massachusetts avenue to introduce her granddaughter, Miss Vivien Sartoris, to society. Mr. Cleveland was then President. The Venezuelan question was still a burning one, and the English government was just about submitting to Mr. Cleveland's terms. Mrs. Grant was somether blick blid and honce a negre menery and called out. one, and the English government was just about submitting to Mr. Cleveland's terms. Mrs. Grant was somewhat blind, and hence a negro manservant called out the names of her guests as they came in. "The Venezuelan Minister." he shouted. Everyone turned around to look at the man, who had nearly brought about war between the two great English-speaking peoples. Hardly had he entered when the servant, instead of announcing. "The British Ambassador" or "Sir Julian and Lady Pauncefote." said, "Saint Julien and Mrs. Pauncefote." "I think," said the Venezuelan Minister, who was talking to me, "he might almost call him 'vin ordinaire." The evening papers contained the news of England's submission, and the words of His Excellency became clear.

Another very amusing circumstance took pla Another very amusing circumstance took place the same day. Mme. Arriaga (who has since died,) was leaving the house, and said to the negro who called the carriages: "Call the carriage of the Guatemalan Minister—you understand: Guatemalan Minister." "Yes, ma'am; I understand perfectly, ma'am," he replied, and then shouted at the top of his lungs: "The carriage for the Watermelon Minister." Mme. Arriaga always took great delight in telling this story.—[Capt. Algernon Sartoris, U.S.A., in Harper's Weekly.

Quixotic Courtesy.

The late Mrs. Gilbert, the veleran actress, was talking one day in Philadelphia about the time when Hamilton Fish was Secretary of State.

"Mr. and Mrs. Fish," she said, "had a grand air, an old-fashioned courtesy, that introduced a new note into Washington society. They taught Washington a lesson. They left it a city of better manners and gentler speech them it had been on their server.

They left it a city of better manners and gentler speech than it had been on their entry.

"It has been said that Mrs. Fish sometimes carried her high ideas of courtesy too far. With that stricture I agree heartily. Mrs. Fish's courtesy was Quixotic.

KIT CARSON AS DISPATCH BEARER.

There was needed a messenger to the government at ashington. Who better could serve at this than this Washington. Washington. Who better could serve at this than this iron-framed little rider, Kit Carson? He started on September 15, 1846, and had won across the Rocky Mountains when he met Gen. Kearney's column, and was ordered to return to California. In this return the Kearney column was assailed by the California Mexicans, stern fighters themselves, who pushed Kearney's forces into a desperate situation. The beleaguered troops needed a messenger out to San Diego. Kit Carson and Lieut. Beale of the navy undertook the task. The hardships of the march wrecked the mind and body of Beale, who was an invalid for two years thereafter. It was nothing to Kit Carson. In March, 1847, he was started once more as a dispatch bearer to Washington. This time he met the Indians on the Gila, fought them, got through, crossed New Mexico, descended the Arkansas River, and in the month of June arrived at Washington, after having made 4000 miles in three months' time. The journey requires little more than three days now; but we do not make it horseback.

His commission, however, was never ratified, though this he did not learn until some months later. He was sent back to California with dispatches. He crossed the Missouri River, fought the Comanches at the Point of Rocks, got through them, passed the Rockies, and had won as far through as the Virgin River before he met his next Indian fight. He and fifteen companions here stood off 300 Indians. In time he reached Monterey, and later, simply to keep himself in practice, took service against the Mexicans on the border for a time.

There was no man of all those known to the army officers who had the resources or was so well qualified as a dispatch rider as Kit Carson. He was sent back once dispatch rider as Kit Carson. He was sent back once more to Washington, in the spring of 1848. The physical frame of any other man except himself had been by these journeyings too far racked to enable him to make this long and hazardous trip. The souls of most men would have failed them long ere this. Yet this hardy, tough little man, just big enough for steady riding, cheerfully undertook this third journey across a continent as dispatch bearer.—[Emerson Hough, in Outing.

THE PERIL OF FRIENDSHIPS TO THE DIPLOMATIST.

From London Tit-Bits.

A "RICOURT!" gasped the corporal, pointing, choked with the dust of the long, white road.

The lieutenant's horse stumbled and limped worse than before. Du Gescue swore and swung himselfrom the saddle. The corporal, following his officer's example, took the reins and brought the crippled horses together.

"They're done, lieutenant," said he. "The farrier has ruined better animals than himself."
"The bungfing fool! And forty miles to Strasburg! What did you say lies yonder?"
"Avricourt."

Then we go on foot. Bring the poor brutes along. So together they clanked over the stones of the town and halted at the Tete d'Argent. The landlord and the ostler met them at the door, bowing lower than usual when they saw the hot angry face of the young "Fresh horses!" ordered Du Gescue, pushing past.

As he entered the house the corporal appeared in the passage, and saluted his superior officer grimly.

"Three horses in the stable, lieutenant," he said.

The landlord started at the sound of his voice, and recoiled almost into his arms from Du Gescue's threatening movement.

"I speak of those in the inn stable, monsieur," said the lieutenant. "To whom they belonged the landlord, who denied them to me, can tell you."

The stranger bowed in reply. "My name is Gaston Ramé. The horses are—though I think you put it in the past tense—mine and my friends."

"Then, Monsier Ramé," the soldier replied, coldly, "I have need of them on state service. I am Ranul Du.

"In that case the orders of state must be obeyed, though I confess it would have afforded me greater pleasure to lend my horses at Lieut. Du Gescue's personal request," answered Ramé. Amiably.

"Your pardon, Monsier Ramé. I will beg yoù now to lend them. A long tramp in the dust and heat is productive of ill-humor."

"And the excitement of coming battle not conducive to punctiliousness. Yes, I know. The animals are yours. It is fortunate for my friends and myself that we are about to dine and that the landlord has made no preparation for other guests. It may procure us the pleasure of your company."

Du Gescue bowed. He accepted lightly, inwardly

"I will take off some of the dust of the road and join you immediately."

Lieut. du Gescue mounted to his room with quite affectionate thoughts of his courtly host and of the awaiting dinner. His bad temper had passed; and when, a few minutes later, a man entered with water can and clean towels, he was looking out at the sunset on the hills and humming gaving.

The servant stood by as the soldier unclasped his belt, and without a word took from his hand the sword and sabretasche. Du Gescue paused; looked at him curiously. From his well-oiled head to his polished shoes the man had "valet" stamped upon him and "Parisian." With the acuteness of his class, too, he no-

The lieutenant revelled in the cool well water; it felt good after the heat, dust, and fatigue; he splashed and grunted with satisfaction, giving no further thought to the servant beneath whose hands lay the dispatches to Strasburg, till the clash of a falling aword startled him. He turned, water showering from his face and hair, just too late to see M. Rame's valet slide something beneath the couch as he stooped to pick up the weapon.

With an apology for his clumsiness Antoine replaced it, and hastened to hand a towel to Du Gescue, upon whom suddenly dawned the inadvisability of placing confidence in a strange valet. The lieutenant dreased rapidly, assuring himself as he buckled on his sword that the packet was safe in the sabrejasche, and, preceded by Antoine, clanked down the stairs.

The room into which the latter ushered him was large enough to be fresh and airy on a hot summer's evening, yet not too spacious for the comfort of a small party of friends. There were two persons present beside his host. One, a well-fed, dark man, with black, prominent eyes, a heavy jowl, and a trick of frequently wetting his full, red lips with the tip of his iongue.

"Monsieur Meyer," said Ramé. The lieutenant bowed, idly speculating in what branch of trade M. Meyer was engaged. But the other person left no doubt as to his lack of occupation. Dress of the latest fashion—fair beard of the latest cut—white, supple fingers—soft, slow voice and movements—proclaimed Baron Corlieu an idler of the boulevards. All three welcomed Du Gescue as an acquisition to their party, and Ramé laughingly bade him discard affairs of grate in favor of cold chicken and Beaune, "for," he said, "care and appetite are deadly enemies." deadly enemies."

There was very little Du Gescue cared for gaming, love-making and duelling, at all of w gaming, love-making and duelling, at all of which he considered himself an adept. Ramé quickly discovered it, and within ten minutes had turned the conversation into channels quite pleasing to his guest. He talked excellently, his blue eyes twinkled; his tongue was tipped with good-natured sarcasm and laughing cynicism. To the young soldier he was delightful. It flattered him, though he would not have owned it, that he who could give him twenty years at least and knew every capital in Europe should treat him as an equal in age-and experience. The wine passed freely, too—excellent wine—and as the lieutenant grew talkative and excitable Ramé exerted his conversational talents more. Between them they monopolized the table.

excellent wine—and as the lieutenant grew talkative and excitable Ramé exerted his conversational talents more. Between them they monopolized the table. The Baron and Meyer only joined in fifully; it seemed to the guest that their wit was a trifle forced. Meyer especially was uneasy, and once so palpably interrogated Ramé with a lift of his eyebrows that the latter was forced to invent a reply for the lieutenant's benefit.

He was proceeding to cover the contretemps by the narration of some story of his companion and a grisette of Montmartre, when a clamor and a hoarse, angry cry from above brought them all to their feet. For a second they stood listening. There was a scuffling of feet, and the lieutenant, recognizing the voice of Corporal Manette, made a step forward. The others, as if his movement had put life into them, crowded to the door, hampering his attempt to leave the room. They heard movement had put life into them, crowded to the door, hampering his attempt to leave the room. They heard a swift rush of feet on the stairs, then cursing, as the corporal lumbered down, with spurs ripping the woodwork and scabbard clanking. The tumult passed, and M. Ramé threw open the door and let his friends out into the narrow passage. It was too late to stop the two men. De Gescue, gazing after the flying figures, ight he rocognized in the foremost Antoine, the valet said as much to Ramé, who laughed and shrugged

"Then Antoine will have a good drubbing if your corporal catches him. I suppose you left nothing value in your room?" he added, anxiously.
"All I have I carry on me."

"Good! Valets are prying folk; the best are not to be trusted."

As they returned to the room Meyer touched Rame's arm. "Failed?" he whispered.
"I suppose so," was the savage reply.

"Then——?"
Ramé nodded in answer, and called aloud to the landlord to remove the dinner and bring candles. Du Gescue looked at the clock.

"Gentlemen, pray accept my apologies," he said.

"Duty-"
"Horrible word!" ejaculated the Baron, with

"Really, I am inclined to agree with you," the soldier "You cannot travel on foot, lieutenant," cried Meyer;
"and the horses will not be fresh enough."
"They must serve, however. Corporal Manette must follow if I do not overtake him."

"My dear Du Gescue," put in Ramé, quietly, "no doubt your man will return quickly, however irate he may be, and the horses will carry you farther for every hour of rest they have now."

The lieutenant hesitated.
"It will be a "good invariance."

The lieutenant hesitated.

"It will be a good investment," drawled the Baron, placing of a pack of cards upon the table.

"Upon my word, you almost persuade me."

"We shall be delighted," said Ramé, "but I should not presume to persuade."

Perhaps he knew that the soft, cosy light and the cards Corlieu had commenced to shuffle deliberately would have greater influence than any words. He noted with satisfaction the indecision in Du Gescue's face, and the hesitating hand that tugged at his moustache.

"Deuce take it; I believe you're right, Ramé," the young man answered, after a pause. "At any rate, I can make up for lost time, and it would be well to know what that valet of yours has been doing."

"You and Corlieu, I thought. He prides himself on his écarté. You must teach him the game, Du Gescue."

"What's the lesson worth, Baron?" Meyer laughed, playing with a second pack. "Twenty francs a game?"

Story of a Jeweled Pin.

Paris Letter to New York Sun.

N the very scarce memoirs of an officer-of the house-hold troops—Les Gardes Francaises—of Louis XVI, there is told the story of a pin which, as the Duke de Choiseul said, "changed the destinies of France." de Choiseul said, "changed the destinies of France. It should be remembered that the allusion to Mme. Du Barry in the narrative, of which only a very veiled summary is given, exhibits the strong prejudice against her by almost all writers of the eighteenth century. In her early career Mme. de Maintenon was closely associated with the famous Ninon de l'Enclos. This intimacy, was continued even after the secret marriage

In her early career Mme. de Maintenon was closely associated with the famous Ninon de l'Enclos. This intimacy was continued even after the secret marriage of the former with Louis XIV, when she became intolerant of any deviction from strict morality.

It was just previous to Mme. de Montespan's decline in favor that the Abbé Goeblin, confessor of De Maintenon, presented her with a pincushion. On a certain day, soon after, when the latter was calling upon Ninon, this dropped from her pocket. At the very moment Ninon was inserting into a ribbon about herneck a pin of such odd design that once seen it could never be forgotten. What would be more piquant than to transfer this pin, with its suggestions, to the pincushion of the now conventional De Maintenon, by the most famous courtesan of the world? The transfer was made and De maintenon carried off with her a jewel that was destined to play an important part in many dramatic events, according to the narrative to which I have referred.

Shortly after, on a warm summer's day, De Montespan and De Maintenon were walking in the park at Versailles with Louis XIV. To fasten a gauze scarf Montespan asked the loan of a pin, and catching sight of the one given by Ninon, in the fichu of her destined successor, she took it, but seized with jealousy of De Maintenon, she threw the pin away in anger. The King picked it up and placed it carefully in his jewel box. There it remained until James II, the dethroned King of England, with his Queen and the Princess of Worn by Louis XIV.

When Louis XIV was about to set out to greet the exiles and make them welcome, De Maintenon, who looked upon this as the most interesting episode in the life of her unacknowledged husband, desired to add to the clasp of diamonds ornamenting his hat a bunch of white plumes tied with a ribbon upon which she had embroidered a device. To fasten this a oin was needed, whereupon the King ordered his valet de chambre to go to his jewel box and bring the one which recalled the incident in the garden of Versailles. At the conclusion of the ceremonies attending the reception of James II and his family, the pin was returned to the cabinet of Louis XIV, where it remained undisturbed until near the close of the reign of Louis XV, who had inherited it along with all else belonging to his grandfather.

One day after dinner, weary of monotonous association with Louis XV—so the story goes—Mme. Ca Barry, for diversion, opened the private cabinet where he kept his inheritance of precious objects, important papers, miniatures and jewels. These were tossed over, against the protests of the King, who, unable to check the piliage, reeigned himself to the devastation of all he held most dear. Among other articles forming the collection was an enameled ring once worn by Mme. de Maintenon. There was also a little cross of violet wood, made in commemoration of the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. On it were engraved the names of the Jesuits Letellier and Lachaise, with the date October Edict of Nantes. On it were engraved the names of the Jesuits Letellier and Lachaise, with the date October 10, 1985. In one corner of the jewel box was the ribbon with the device embroidered by De Maintenon, the ends fastened together with the famous pin. Attached, in the handwriting of Louis XIV, was a paper describing the use to which the two had been put on an occasion memorable in his life.

Louis XV protested against the desceration; but Du Barry, who would tolerate no opposition to her desires, appropriated the pin to her own use.

Barry and de Choiseul.

This incident happened just at the time when M. This incident happened just at the time when M. d'Aiguillon was about to consummate the plot he was reputed to have formed with Mme. du Barry to bring about the disgrace of the Duke de Choiseul. This Minister, reckless and adroit and feeling secure in his necessity to the King, had allowed the intrigue to cul-Minister, reckless and adroit and feeling secure in his necessity to the King, had allowed the intrigue to culminate, notwitheranding the repeated warnings of his friends, who by their imprudence had not a little contributed to the peril that menaced him. At last, awakened to the impending crisis, he consented to take a step repugnant to his self-respect—to endeavor to placate the all-powerful Du Barry, of whom, through every avenue of publicity, he had circulated the most scandalous stories. He made conciliatory advances to Mme, du Barry, and appeared to ingratiate himself so warmly in her good opinion that the Duke d'Aiguillon and the Abbé Terray became alarmed.

At last the moment arrived for the promised interview with De Choiseul. The hour fixed was 6 o'clock in the evening. The King was out hunting and would not return until late. De Choiseul had dismissed all his attendants, and at the prearranged moment Mme, du Barry presented herself, with a bunch of flowers fastened at her breast with the fated pin. Seating herself with him on the sofa, she warned De Choiseul that she was very angry, and that if he did not respect her the King would punks him; but just then the pin, destined to play a great part at critical moments, caught in his lace cuff and cut a deep gash across his hand; he uttered an exclamation of pain and drew back impetuously. Mme. du Barry fled with a precipi-tation that a bleeding hand could not arrest. Two days later De Choiseul was exiled to his country seat at Canteloup. He would give no other reason for his disgrace than that "a pin had changed the descinies of France."

Barely had Mme. du Barry arrived from the inter-rupted interview with De Choiseul when the King re-turned from hunting. She met him with more than accustomed demonstrations of affection, and the King took advantage of her amiable mood to ask the return of the pin. It was gladly surrendered. With other heir-looms of his predecessors it passed to Louis XVI, in whose possession it remained until chance subverted whose possession it to another use

Given to an Actress.

Mile. de Contat, a charming actress of the French Theater, had turned the head of the Count de Narbonne, the spoiled child of the royal family. She craved possession of the famous pin locked in the jewel box of the King, for she conceived the notion of using it to fasten the letter to Susanne in the "Marriage de Figaro," which was to have a first representation in a few days. De Narbonne was at his wit's end to discover some way of securing the treasure before the first performance of the play, only four days distant. Chance offered a solution of the difficulty. Quadrilles were then the fashion, and of those who took part in them a special costume was required. The Count, by adroit questioning of M. la Borde, the custodian of the King's cablnet, gained a fair knowledge of its contents. adroit questioning of M. la Borde, the custodian of the King's cabinet, gained a fair knowledge of its contents, and then pretended to need diamonds with which to decorate his coat for the quadrille at the approaching court ball. Louis XVI, who could refuse nothing to De Narbonne, gave him permission to draw upon the resources of the jewel box. After a brief search he discovered the pin.

The Count was just in time; the performance had bepassed from hand to hand, and when needed for the second performance was nowhere to be found. The actress was little disturbed by the loss, but the Count was confronted with a perilous situation, for La Borde had discovered the theft. A large sum of money purchased by effects. chased his silence.

The famous pin was found by a dancer in the muck of the stage. She had as a lover M. d'Arlande, the first person to accompany Pilatre de Rozier in his balloon ascensions. On his initial voyage in the air D'Arlande wore upon the breast of his coat a lock of his mistress's hair fastened with the fated pin. A gust of wind tore in half the small flag carried by the aeronauts. The pin was used to mend it.

Among the spectators present when the balloon scended was M. Bailli, a celebrated astronomer. De Ro presented him with the flag fastened with the pin, and it was put away in the closet of the scientist.

Speeding to the End.

On the memorable day when Louis XVI was conducted by the people from Versailles to Paris M. Bailli, named Mayor of the city by acclamation, was at his home awaiting the moment to go to the Hotel de Ville to receive the King, who, arriving sooner than was expected, a messenger on horseback was dispatched to summon Bailli. In his haste he forgot his official badge. He returned to his cabinet to get it, and not knowing how to attach it to his cost, he caught sight of the fated pin, which was still on the flag. With it he affixed his badge and hurried to the Hotel de Ville. Fate was now speeding the pin to its last and predestined end. At the moment when, as Mayor, Bailli presented the national cocarde to Louis XVI, there was no other way to fasten it to the King's hat except with the historical pin, once his property, but now destined to hold in place the symbol of a revolution that was to deprive him of his throne and of his life.

Again the pin was lost for a long time, when an undertaker's assistant, preparing for burial the body of Mirabeau—the greaj orator of the Revolution—in search of something to fasten his winding sheet, found it in the sweepings of a room at the Louvre.

it in the sweepings of a room at the Louvre.

Its chronology is remarkable; first serving on the tollet of Ninon de l'Enclos; then to close the fichu of De Maintenon; now in the jewel box of Louis XIV; then to hold the plume in his hat at his meeting with James II of England; in the wig of the Chancellor of France; to fasten the bouquet of Mme. du Barry; in the jewel box of Louis XV and Louis XVI; purloined by the Count de Narbonne; given to Mile. Contat; lost by her and found by a dancer and used to attach a lock of her hair to her lover's breast; to mend a torn flag; then hidden in the closet of M. Bailli; then to nin the then hidden in the closet of M. Bailli; then to pin the revolutionary cocarde to the hat of Louis XVI, and finally to disappear forever in the grave of Mirabeau.

Dr. Sylvester's Downfall. WHY THE KAISER'S AMERICAN DEN-TIST SHOT HIMSELF.

From the New York Sun.

MERICANS who knew him felt little surprise at the news that Dr. Alonzo H. Sylvester, the American who for twenty years was Emperor William's dentist, shot and killed himself in his home opposite the Thiergarten, in Berlin, on January 10. Although he was a close personal friend of the Kaiser and was in higher favor with him, perhaps, than any other American in Berlin, his troubles had been accumulating for years.

As a matter of fact, the man to whose house the Kaiser often walked unattended, whom he took with him on many a canter in and about the city, who was one of the few men in the whole German empire with whom the Kaiser would engage in conversation, in public as well as in private, without regard for strict court etiquette, ng ago in bad odor with his fellow-Americans in was long ago in bad odor with his fellow-Americans in Berlin, so much so that he was shut out from American circles in spite of his court connections. This was because of his manner of life, which was objectionable to the Americans, although it did not seem to offend the Germans. Anyone familiar with the different views of the two nations as to home and family will understand

For more than thirty years Dr. Sylvester was a well known figure in the clubs and on the boulevards of Ber lin. An American born and of long-line of American an ors, he was, nevertheless, a typical German in appear ance, big, blond and bluff, e Kaiser did not veil his fondness for his American dentist. Dr. Sylvester was an American first, last and all the time, and he always met the Kaiser as one Amer-ican would meet another.

Much as he delights in show, Emperor William went to his dentist's house in the most unostentious way, and his visits were often prolonged by chats after the actual dental work had been done. Until 1902 Dr. Sylvester lived just outside the Brandenburg Gate, and the Kaiser would walk the mile of Unter den Linden early in the morning and enter the house of the American with no urish or attendance than if he were an ordinary untitled Berliner. Dr. Sylvester's house was a mu-seum of works of art, chief among which were many presents given to him by the Kaiser, the latest being a life-size bust of himself, which occupied the place of honor in the private drawing-room.

One recent incident illustrates Emperor William's in-terest in his American friend. The Kalser's favorite drive is in the Thiergarten, the imperial deer park cre-ated years ago, and now in the very heart of the mod-

As his carriage rolled out through the Brandenburg Gate he always looked for the American flag which huns over the American's house, and never failed to salute it. One day, when flags could be legally flown, the Kaiser looked for the Star Spangled Banner and found it not. Fifteen minutes later an aide-de-camp appeared at the door of Dr. Sylvester's house and presented the Emperor's inquiries as to why the American flag was not in evidence. He was informed that one of the doctor's new servants had forgotten to raise the flag. The omission was corrected at once.

tion of Königgratzerstrasse and Thiergartenstrasse. On the Thiergarten side is a roomy, circular plazza, and there, at 4 o'clock on all but the stormlest days, all through summer, the big, blond, handsome American dentist might be seen dlning with his daughter and such guests as happened to be at the house. Frequently these guests included German officials and professional men, and sometimes members of the royal family.

Thirty-five years ago, while making a tour of Europe revious to settling down to the practice of dentistry in is native country. Dr. Sylvester was struck with the rude methods of continental dentists, and saw the opportunities open to a graduate of a theorems. portunities open to a graduate of a thoroughly up-to-date American school of dentistry. Paris had its Dr. Evans. Dr. Sylvester chose Berlin.

Dr. Sylvester chose Berlin.

The fame of the American dentist who could remove teeth without pain and patch up old teeth to look as good as new, and, upon occasion, even create an entire new set that looked as natural as life, grew apace, and in time reached the ears of royalty itself. When the Kalser came to the throne he rewarded the dentist with a formal appointment as court dentist, and Dr. Sylve ter's practice trebled in consequence.

While he himself had never taken any post-graduate course in dentistry, Dr. Sylvester made it a point to associate with him from time to time promising young men who brought with them the latest improve known to brought with them the latest improvements known to the American colleges of dentistry—the best in the world. In the belief of some people, it was the last of these partnerships which was indirectly responsible for the violent death of Dr. Sylvester.

Fifteen years ago Dr. Sylvester took Dr. Thomas Watson into partnership with him. A form of partnership was drawn up, but Dr. Sylvester, notoriously a bad business was drawn up, but Dr. Sylvester, notoriously a bad business was drawn up.

ness man, overlooked one phrase which gave Dr. Watson a loophole to leave before the term of what might be called his apprenticeship ended. When Dr. Sylvester's attention was drawn in later years to this clause he made light of the possibility, trusting implicitly to the honor of his young associate.

Early in the summer of 1903 Dr. Watson saw fit to ter-Early in the summer of 1903 Dr. Watson saw fit to terminate his association with Dr. Sylvester, three years before the date set in the articles of partnership. He left the house of the well-known American dentist, opposite the Thiergarten, and set up for himself in another quarter, taking with him practically all of Dr. Sylvester's practice, outside of the imperial family.

For twenty-five years Dr. Sylvester had made large sums of money annually out of his practice, but he had lved extravagantly and played for high stakes at hand at the clubs, and the sudden move of Dr. Watson hally left him in desperate financial straits. He proken in health, having never recovered from a personnel. lytic stroke two years before; his skill as a workman had departed, and he was dependent upon his young assist-ants for the keeping up of his practice. It is well known in certain circles of Berlin that Dr. Sylvester was in serious financial difficulties for the last two years of his life, and most despondent.

Dr. Sylvester divorced his wife about twenty years ago, the daughter being left in his custody. Born in Germany, living all her life in Germany, German is the daughter's native tongue, although she speaks English, French, Italian and Spanish perfectly. Even in appearance she is more German than American.

Dr. Sylvester believed the American woman to be the finest type of womanhood in the world, and in 1898 he sent his daughter to America for four years of typical American college life in order to Americanize her. She entered one of the Western colleges and finished in three years, graduating with high honors.

Dr. Sylvester was often heard to say that his last inbr. Sylvester was often heard to say that his last in-structions to her before she left Berlin were that she was to acquire a thoroughly up-to-date American ward-robe, for he considered the American woman the best dresser in the world. The story of Dr. Sylvester's loss of his practice is The story of Dr. Sylvester's loss of his practice is a story of a man who lets his profession slip owing to high, riotous living. Despite his fine native qualities, qualities which were distinctively American, which appealed to the Kaiser, his royal good fellowship, his brilliant conversation on every subject, his perfect horsemanship, his excellent judgment of books, art, curios and linens, he was a high roller of the most pronounced type, fond of wine and cards, and of—his Hausfreund.

The Hausfreund is an institution better tolerated fin The Hausfreund is an institution better tolerated in Germany than in America. In Berlin it is not always considered out of the way for the right hand of the family to receive the left hand Hausfreund with courtesy, and the left hand friend does not lose caste. In the case of Dr. Sylvester the Hausfreund was a popular actress. Under these circumstances, it was not surprising that Dr. Sylvester's practice should fall off.

Dr. Sylvester was a collector of pictures and all kinds of bric-a-brac. His house was full of valuable paintings, rescoes, hand-carved furniture and rich rugs and draper-es. He had no office, as the term is understood in Amer-ca. That is not the custom on the Continent with pro-

Dr. Sylvester was an enthusiastic yachtsman and a leading member of the Royal Yacht Club. His sailing yacht had cabin accommodations for twelve, and during the summer there were many cruises on the Baltic, where he made his headquarters at Herringsdorf, as the guest of his daughter at Villa Florence, his gift to her.

Dr. Sylvester always paraded his American birth. In order to accept the official appointment as court dentist, he was obliged to renounce his American citizenship and become a German, but, nevertheless, it was always the American flag that flew in front of his house, the biggest and brightest American flag he could find. High School Debating League.

High School Debating League.

THE High School Debating League of Southern California is an important feature in the educational advantages of the Southwest. It was organized January 2, 1903, and has steadily grown until it is the strongest and most successful organization of the kind west of the Rocky Mountains. The following sixteen high schools compose its present membership: Anaheim, Compton, Covina, Glendale, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Los Angeles Polytechnic, Monrovia, Pasadena, Pomona, San Fernando, Santa Ana, Santa Monica, Academic Department of Throop Polytechnic Institute, and Whittier. Its officers are: President, Clayton Shipway, Covina; first vice-president, William J. Hayes, Pasadena; second vice-president, Louie Polkington, Santa Monica; secretary, president, Louie Polkington, Santa Monica; secreta Arthur V. Clay, Pomona; treasurer, Henry Butler, Do

Although only two years have passed since the debat-ing league was organized, it has shown itself to be of great value as an educational factor in the high schools. great value as an educational factor in the high schools. Its record is not only one to be proud of, but one which shows the scope of the work and how widely the value of its plans are being recognized. Last year over twenty-five debates were held under its auspices, and this year promises to be even more prosperous, for with the increased interest already shown, the experience gained, and the entrance of new members, the future looks and the entrance of new members, the future looks bright indeed.

In order that all may have some idea of the thorough and systematic method of carrying on the work of the league, the general plan is given below. The Executive Committee, consisting of the officers and two members, chosen annually by the president, pairs the schools and fixes the time of the debates. One school of each pair submits two essentially different questions to the other, which chooses the question and the side it will discuss. Three series of debates are held during the year.

award first bonors to one of the four debaters—25 credits, and second honors to one of the others—10 credits. The two schools which at the close of the year have the greatest number of credits, debate for the championship. Monrovia High School secured the championship last

Stanford University has provided a handsome solid silver cup as a trophy. The High School first winning the cup for three years (not necessarily consecutively) receives permanent possession of it.

A souvenir debating annual will be published by the debating league at the end of the debating season. This will contain a complete record of the year's work, cuts of all the debaters, officers and committees.

New Lithographing Concern.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the Western Litho-graph Company of the completion of their new two-story brick building, at the southeast corner of East Ecc-ond and Rose streets, in this city, and the installation of whe most complete and modern lithograph equipment on this Coast. E DITORIAL reference has been made in The Times to the praiseworthy enterprise of E. J. Oatman of Riverside, who has hit upon a novel plan of creating a home market for fine oranges. The Pacific Fruit World recently had the following article on this subject:

"The spending of $300 a car in the advertising of each carload of oranges that he sells is a proposition that will at first giance, shock and surprise every enver of will at first glance shock and surprise every grower of citrus fruit. A little study of the situation will show that the man who is doing this important line of work is not crazy, is not seeking for notoriety, but is looking to make money and has every prospect of making more of it in five months than the average grower makes in several seasons.

"Last summer E. J. Oatman, one of the leading orange growers of Riverside, after receiving reports of sales on his oranges, found he had received very unpieasant prices, as prevailed generally. Mr. Oatman is an old-time manufacturer of food products, and has been long experienced in merchandising methods. He made up his mind that he was going to make some profit out of his oranges or know the reason why, so instead of complaining about the great profits that the retail dealers make throughout the East, Mr. Oneman concluded to see what he could do to remedy the trouble right here at home. He knew that oatmeal manufacturers had remedies these troubles, and he also had a similar experience himself a to buy a strictly extra fancy grade of oranges in the Los Angeles market, and Mr. Oatman has an orchard which produces the very highest type of oranges grown in Cali-fornia, and he has undertaken to market every one of them in Los Angeles in the belief that people of Los Angeles will buy and pay for the best if they have a chance to get it, and there is no doubt but that Mr. Oatman is correct in his opinion.

"The next thing of importance that occurred to Mr. "The next thing of importance that occurred to Mr. Oatman was that by selling in the Los Angeles market he had a saving of at least $300 a car on freight, and, being a good business man, he said: 'I guess I will spend that $300 in advertising to teach the people what a good orange is and make them eat it.' The next thing that occurred to Mr. 'Oatman was that he ought to have a special package by which his fruit could be known and, not imitated. With the assistance of his son, J. B. Oatman he hought out the triangular-shaped how. This not imitated. With the assistance of his son, J. B. Oatman, he brought out the triangular-shaped box. This little box contains from fifteen to twenty-four oranges, according to the size, and retails at 75 cepts a box in the city of Los Angeles. It is a beautiful package; more than that, it is a most sensible and valuable package because of the complete ventilation afforded.

"Mr. Oatman started his campaign on New Year's Day , "Mr. Oatman started his campaign on New Year's Day by taking about 300 of the leading retail grocers of Los Angeles on an excursion up to his grove. He showed them the reasons that his oranges were uniformly good quality, thin-skinned and highly-flavored. The grove is a large one, situated above the canal, about 500 feet above, and overlooking the city of Riverside.

"There is a great deal that may be said regarding this mpaign which we are not going to enter upon in this ticle. Mr. Oatman's retail price is 75 cents a box, and it is fixed by him, the profit of the retailer and the job-ber is also fixed by Mr. Oatman, and everything else that is considered impossible in the marketing of fruit, is within the hands of Mr. Oatman. So long as Mr. Oatman has the nerve to hold back the money which he otherwise pays to the railroad companies for freight and otherwise pays to the railroad companies for freight and slap it into the newspapers, creating consumers' demand for his fruit, that long he can control his market to his own great advantage. After Mr. Oatman's campaign has progressed a little further we shall examine in detail some of the underlying features and figures which will go to make his success." go to make his success.

Rainfall.

THE annual rainfall plays a large part in the development of the great Southwest, as in other semi-arid sections. An interesting table has been issued by George Rice & Sons, the printers, showing the rainfall by seasons, from 1877-78 to 1903-04. The Weather Bureau computes by calendar years. Usually, when the seasons are reckoned, they are measured from September 1 to August 31. This table reckons from July to June. The average for the twenty-seven years is 15.71. A striking showing of the decreased rainfall of the past decade is made when one dissects this table. Separated into three divisions of nine years each, it shows as follows: First nine years, 17.57 inches; second nine years, 17.54 inches; third nine years, 11.04 inches. That is to say, while the first two nine years were almost exactly alike, the third showed a falling off of more than one-third.

olesale Carriage Factory.

REQUENT reference has been made in these colfornia for the manufacture of wooden and wool products, or products into which wood or wool enter largely. This is because the dry atmosphere permits the curing of wood and wool in the open air. Among industries thus encouraged, so far, may be mentioned the manufacture of wagons, piano sounding boards and felt goods. Carriages may now be added to the list. It is goods. Carriages may now be added to the list. It is crue that buggies have been made here, on a small scale, but not in a commercial way for the wholesale trade. Los Angeles now has a wholesale buggy factory, known as the Advance Buggy Company. With its connections in the East the company will be enabled to buy its raw material in carload lots. This will enable it to produce a vehicle here the freight being very much less on the raw material than on the finished vehicles. It will also be able to give a buyer just what he wants. There are so many possible changes in the construction and the painting of a vehicle that it is seldom one finds just what they would like to have, on the repository floors of the dealers here, or in fact of any other city, and as the shipment of a vehicle by of any other city, and as the shipment of a vehicle by of any other city, and as the shipment of a vehicle by local freight at a long distance is out of the question, he is compelled to take what he finds on the floor or wait until it can be shipped in a carload, which sometimes means two or three months. From the fact that the company will be buying so many carloads of raw material in the East and having cars leave its own factories there every few days, it can have included any special job that a customer may desire from the factories there, if of a style and design that is not manufactured here.

This factory will have an ahnual output of between 7000 and 8000 "jobs." It has abundance of room, however, for the enlargement of the plant when necessary, having 167 feet frontage by 441 feet deep, with private switch running the full length of the present building.

This is said to be the first wholesale manufactory of vehicles on the Pacific Coast. The factory is at 3000 Central avenue. President, Elton S. Bogle; secretary and treasurer, S. S. Wilder. These are both men of wide experience in cariage manufacturing.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

FIELD NOTES.

THE advocates of governmental ownership of rail-roads have a hard nut to crack in the This advocates of governmental ownership of restroads have a hard nut to crack in the recent events of Southern Russia, which involves every agricultural community in practical stagnation. The accumulations of grain which cannot be shipped on account of the depletion of reiling stock for military purposes, amount to 1,200,000 tons. This blockade is increasing at amount to 1,290,000 tons. This blockade is increasing at an alarming rate, traders and mujiks are powerless, and no matter how serious the matter has become the administration disclaims all responsibility upon the grounds that military necessities are superior to the commercial life of the country. In this country, competition among the railroads, if that can be restored, will keep the railroads keyed up to a higher degree of efficiency than they would be unless administered by the government in a style equal to the best service in the other decorriments.

Methods of Irrigation.

WHILE the rainfall seems to be coming this season with fair insistency and quantity, there will be need for ecomonical application next summer no matter how much may come. I hear the farmers discussing the how much may come. I hear the farmers discussing the deep-furrow method of irrigation with more favor than ever before. This is in line with strictest economy, and ever before. This is in line with strictest economy, and will become one of the greatest elements of the conservation of the water supply. Outside the utility of water deeply applied compared with surface irrigation, the question of evaporation is of prime importance. Of all the wasteful methods, flooding is the chief, as evaporation occurs immediately and cannot be checked by cultivation as soon as when applied in deep furrows on account of the wetness of the top soil. On the other hand, deep-furrow irrigation prevents evaporation better than any other method of applying water to lands. The water problem would be far upon its way to solution if everyone applied the fluid to the soil from deep furrows.

Importance of the Tariff.

HAVE compiled from a long list of fruits exported and imported as furnished by the new Department of Commerce and Labor, a table showing the total value of the fruits sent out and received by the United States. In spite of the vast resources of this country, the imports exceed the exports by $3.647,000. This is not a large sum, but as long as the excess of fruits is coming this way, the tariff upon the commodities of our orchards remains a live question. Bananas are found to be the great competing fruit, the importations of 1903 amounting to $8,541,156, or over 30 per cent. of all the fruits imported from foreign countries. Lemons are second with $3.073,221, and oranges $818,780. Our heaviest exports are applies $4.281.081. PRUPAGE $2.21.507, and dried. ports are apples, $4.381.081; prunes, $3.212.507, and dried apples, $2.378.635. These figures are all for the year 1903, later siztistics not yet being compiled.

THE CALIFORNIA FRUIT GROWER states that E. M. Ehrhorn has just received the largest consignment of parasites yet sent over by George Compereden boxes containing in all over 1100 insects. As yet but few of the insects have been raised to the adult stage, but they are all doing well. Letters are being received from all over the country inquiring about this parasite, but the flies will not be ready for distribution till next summer and then not be ready for distribution till next summer, and then California growers will get the colonies. This State is California growers will get the colonies. This State is paying for the discovery and capture of this new insect, and it is right that our people should be served first. If this importation is what it is claimed, an exterminator of the codling moth, pretty, rosy, wormless apples will appear wherever apples are grown. Wormy fruit will be a thing of the past, and the great American fruit as plentiful as grains of corn.

Planting Season Opening.

THE first of February will find deciduous tree planting in full swing, the late rains calling to everyone to plant a tree. Local nurserymen have already felt the effects of this impulse, and are sending out orders more frequently every day. This brings to us the usual queries as to varieties and locations. These inquiries are usually of little public interest, and are answered by letter. One of our best authorities on pomology says: "The great size of a district, difference in elevation, soil and exposure prevent anything like absolute uniformity. "The great size of a district, difference in elevation, soil and exposure prevent anything like absolute uniformity of advice as the varieties and kinds of fruits to plant, hence a variety recommended for planting in a district may not succeed in some particular locality. The grower is advised to secure counsel from all available local sources before proceeding in the important matter of planting." This advice is certainly more potent to Califarnia people than to others, for nowhere else do we have such an infinite variety of conditions topographic and climatic.

THE APPLE GROWERS' ASSOCIATION, at its meeting held at the Horticultural Commissioners' office on the 21st., had the pleasure of an address from G. H. Powell, who is here from Washington investigating the orange decay. Those who were present say they never heard a more clearly-expressed succession of facts relating to the harvesting, packing and cold-storaging of the apple. Mr. Powell did not go too much into detail, but stated the results of his late investigations in a plain, comprehensive manner. It is not in flattery to Mr. Pow-ell to say that our local apple growers never before heard such a sensible address, for he is master of the subject to such an extent that everybody recognizes the worth of what he has to say upon the apple business. Frui tance of California fruit interests, or circumstances make possible the presence of more such men as Powell from the Department of Agriculture at Wash

Frenzied Fibers.

NE of the most interesting contests of that character in which the farmers of the country are interested has just been settled in the House of Representatives at Washington. The result was the complete vindication of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson in the honesty and reliability of his cotton crop estimates. The trouble started over a resolution introduced in the House by Representative Livingston of Georgia, declaring that great disagtisfaction and want of confidence in the reports upon cotton acreage and production existed, especially in the last report of December, 1904. The Livingston resolution was referred to the House Committee on Agriculture, and a hearing had the day following the introduction of the resolution. Secretary Wilson and John Hyde, Chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Statistics, appeared before the committee, and their testimony John Hyde, Chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Statistics, appeared before the committee, and their testimony showed such a comprehensive and sensible system of gathering cotton statistics—a plan so carefully worked out, largely by those directly interested in cotton growing—that the Committee on Agriculture reported a recommendation that the Livingston resolution lay upon the table. After a debate of two hours, the House laid the resolution aside by a vote of 80 to 17. In this debate and in the testimony submitted, it was shown that the cetton speculators were the main critics of Secretary Wilson's reports. Their estimate of the last fall's crop was 11,500,000 bales. Secretary Wilson's was 12,162,000. For the last three years the actual crop harvested differed the last three years the actual crop harvested different the December estimates of the Agricultural Department only 2.5 per cent. average. It is little wonder the farmers of the country place implicit confidence in the administration of their great Secretary.

THE uninitiated are inclined to doubt the value of a name or "brand" upon oranges in the eyes of the trade. But a consular report from Bordeaux will not only be a startling revelation, it will prove the value of a trade-mark in fruits. Consul Tourgee of Bordeaux writes: "Bordeaux is the real center of the prune trade of the world. The methods of preparing this fruit here are as appearing to the manipulation it receives elsewhere are so superior to the manipulation it receives elsewhere are so superior to the manipulation it receives ensewhere that California prunes brought here and repacked maintain the superiority of French prunes, and are reexported in large quantities to the United States, where they compete successfully with the American fruit which has not incurred the expense of double exportation. Last season (1963) for instance, there were almost no prunes season (1963). raised in this region, probably not one-twentieth of a normal crop. The deficit was supplied by the importa-tion of prunes from California and Oregon." Consul Tourgee goes into particulars to prove his assertion, having had to inspect large quantities of prunes and after ing had to inspect large quantities of prunes and after-ward to take testimony in litigation resulting from con-troversies over the quality and salability of these worked-over prunes. California prides herself upon her skill in preparing fruits for market, but there is a repu-tation of generations to go against in their sale in com-petition with the foreign fruit. French prunes are cooked, California prunes are not. And yet when the Bordeaux manipulators get hold of our products, pour glycerine over them and send them back to New York with a new "brand" they are taken on faith as the gen-uine French product. That is one way to maintain the superiority of the French article, but not a very honest nine French product. That is one way to maintain the superiority of the French article, but not a very honest one, no matter how flattering the method may be to the California product. This interesting report came from the Consul in reply to a cablegram from Washington asking him for an explanation of a previous report in which he said: "California prunes are imported to Bordeaux and there repacked to maintain the superiority of French prunes."

ouraging to Stock Breeders.

OME few years ago, when the automobile had become a practical means of locomotion and promised traction many of our best authorities predicted the decline of the horse. For several years the ups and downs of the horse market seemed to justify these predictions, and horse market seemed to justify these predictions, and perhaps the forecasts would have been correct had not new economic conditions come to the front. The high price of human labor is causing the substitution of the horse wherever possible. Contractors in the cities formerly paid little attention to the character of their teams, for drivers were cheap and expenses of maintenance less. Now nothing but first-class, teams are in demand, a yard or two of earth more per day marking the line between profit and loss. The growth of teaming in cities has more than kept pace with the deficiencies in the demand for driving horses caused by the advent of in cities has more than kept pace with the deficiencies in the demand for driving horses caused by the advent of the auto. M. H. Gardner of Darien, Wis., writes that the Holstein breeders paid out only 87 cents per cow net, while the Jersey Cattle Club, it is asserted, spent over 1600 per cow. As it was, the champion cow of all was a Holstein eleven years old. The twenty-five Jerseys are during the 120 days 124,524 pounds of milk, containing 5810 pounds of fat, and 10,902 pounds of solids, and gained 1890 pounds in live weight. The fifteen Holsteins gave 96,169 pounds of milk, containing 3298 sounds of fat and 7630 pounds of solids, and gained 1601 pounds live weight. The average Jersey gave 1801 pounds live weight. The average Jersey gave of dry fe that a serial Holling while the average Holstein gave 72.6 pounds more tolids not fat and 25 per cent. more gain in weight than did the Jersey. average per cent. of butter fat was 4.66 and for the Holsteins 3.43.

On the whole, the popular reputation of the two breeds is not likely to be relatively changed as a result of the contest. It is generally supposed that the Jerseys are preëminently a dairy breed, giving the largest returns in butter in proportion to their weight and amount of food consumed, while the Holsteins are a larger and coarser breed, giving a larger yield of milk, usually of much lower quality in butter fat, but with a good per cent, of solids other than fat. The Jersey is certainly an excellent breed for the dairyman or the creamery patron, and likewise for the shipper of cream. is certainly an excellent breed for the dairyman or the Freamery patron, and likewise for the shipper of cream, and even for the milk farmer who supplies a particularly choice class of trade. The Holstein is the favorite among milk farmers, and one of the first changes in-troduced after the establishment of a milk-shipping station in a farming community is the introduction of Holsteins among the farm herds of the locality. The Holsteins in some sections are the most popular, even Holsteins among the farm herds of the locally. The Holsteins in some sections are the most popular, even as a strictly dairy breed, it being claimed that even allowing for the smaller per cent, of butter in the milk it is produced at a lower cost than from other breeds.—[American Cultivator.

To Grow Sheep Without Woo

I F found practicable and economical, a breed of wool less sheep will be introduced into the United States. On a farm maintained by the bureau of animal industry, near Bethesda, Md., is a small flock of woolless sheep that was brought from the West Indies last summer by the Bureau of Animal Industry. It is hoped may prove valuable for mutton-raising purposes in the extreme southern parts of the United States, where heavily-wooled sheep often suffer on account of excess fleece

The attention of the department was called to these coolless sheep by Sir Daniel Morris, imperial agricultural commissioner for the West Indies. In 1903 he visited Washington and told of the animals, which are greatly esteemed in the Barbadoes for mutton. It

They are medium-sized, upstanding, practically without wool and hornless, or nearly so. In general appearance they somewhat resemble at a distance diminutive hornless Jersey cattle or deer, the color being ex-actly the shades of fawn seen in Jerseys. The sheep are decidedly "leggy," but have fairly deep bodies and quite well-sprung ribs. They appear to be hardy and of good constitution. There is fair width of back and loin, but very deficient hind quarters.

The rump is quite steep from the hips to the tailhead and the tail is set very low. The thighs are "cat-hammed;" there is little rotundity of buttocks, very little depth of twist, and the flesh is not carried very little depth of twist, and the flesh is not carried down on the hocks as one sees in the best multon breeds. The sheep are active and lively. Ears are somewhat large and drooping, much like those of a Suffolk or Ham; sire. There is also a slight tendency to a Roman nose, especially in the buck. The ears are peculiarly marked with a light fawn-colored line close to the outside edge, and extending about two-thirds of the way around. They also generally have black hairs among the fawn-colored sheep on the outside and a few fawn-colored hairs near the head on the inside.—

The Watering of Horses.

THE question as to the best time for watering horses is often asked, and is answered in a number of different ways according to the individual opinions of the authority consulted. Many feeders believed that horses should be watered before feeding, while others are equally certain that feeding should precede watering. C. F. Langworthy, in a very useful bulletin, entitled, "Principles of Horse Feeding," summarizes the results of some recent experiments which he believes results of some recent experiments which he believes have reached the truth of the matter.

The rations fed consisted of different mixtures of corn, oats, hay and straw, and a number of experiments were made, in which the only condition that varied was the time of watering. In some of the tests the horses drank before and in some after eating, and in others after the grain portion of the ration was eaten, but before the hay.

So far as was observed, the time of drinking had no effect on the digestability of a ration of grain and hay. When hay only was fed there seemed a slight advantage in watering before feeding. The general conclusion was drawn that horses may be watered before, during or after meals without interfering with the digestion and absorption of food. All these methods of watering are equally good for the horse, and each of them may be employed according to circumstances. of watering are equally good for the noise, and each of them may be employed according to circumstances. It is obvious that certain circumstances may make it necessary to adopt one or the other method. For instance, after severe loss of water, such as occurs in consequence of long-continued, severe exertion, the animal should always be allowed to drink before he is fed, as otherwise he will not feed well.

It has been found that less water is required when the ration consists largely of concentrated feed than when large amounts of coarse fooder are consumed, and it is a matter of common observation that less water is consumed when green, succulent feeds form a considerable part of the ration than when it consists of dry feed. That the amount of water taken even in dry feed, may be considerable is shown by the fact that a retion of twelve pounds of oats and fifteen pounds of hay furnishes some twenty pounds of water. A successful ration would furnish much more.—[Cultivator.]

'In this Sunday's Times, the 15th inst., there is "In this Sunday's Times, the 15th Inst., there is mention made of patent remedies for leucorrhea or women's troubles in your very instructive columns of practical hygiene. Would you kindly say what is or what can be a cure of the deep-seated causes of leucorrhea. In a case of physical exhaustion what is good for a woman? In such a case the fasting plan would not be good, as after any exertion one feels worn out. Of coure F do not mean stuffing with indigestible foods. Is douching good and is there any relief for backache and nervousness that comes from female weaknesses? Is this a good climate for women not strong in their organs, for it is claimed its equal temperature is not bracing enough to tone up the blood, which in such cases is never very good? Is not the housework and so many bracing enough to tone up the blood, which in such cases is never very good? Is not the housework and so many cares that fall to the lot of the average American woman, the reason why there is so much 'female trouble' in America? Most of them do too much after the bables come and suffer for it laier on. Lack of sleep, the strenuous nervous life to get everything in the day, and the desire to keep up with a more fortunate neighbor. I don't want to take up too much room, but just a short reply in your columns as to what is the best and most hygienic method to get rid of leucorrhea and tone up the blood will be much appreciated."

This woman has the editor's sympathy. She repre-

This woman has the editor's sympathy. She represents a class that is unfortunately very numerous, esperially in this country. Hence the large incomes made by those who cater to what are known as "female troubles," with patent medicines and drugs.

'To begin with, it should be clearly understood that leucorrhea, like other aliments, is merely a symptom of a diseased condition of the body—poison which nature is trying to eliminate through what happens to be in that particular individual the point of least resistance, just as a boiler will burst where it is weakest. Consequently, all attempts at local treatment are of no avail, so long as the body is not brought into a right condition by complying with the laws of health. To merely attack the effect instead of the cause is like putting poultices on smallpox pimples.

Leucorrhea, like gonorrhea in the male, is a troublesome ailment, under ordinary treatment lingering for many years, or sometimes for life, because, instead of taking measures to expel the poison from the blood, new food for that poison is constantly supplied, in the shape of improper foods, or drugs. Sometimes the disease is apparently cured by a drug, but it has merely been driven in, and will surely return at an early date. Moreover, wrong treatment of this disease—the suppression of the symptoms—produces other and more fatal diseases, from inflammations to tumors.

As stated, this form of disease, which may appear fatal diseases, from inflammations to tumors.

As stated, this form of disease, which may appear in the most varied and troublesome forms, has its origin in an effort of the body to expel impurities. That this act of self-healing apparently requires a long time is easily understood, if we consider that only single organs—in this case the mucous membranes of the vagina—have to do the whole work of excretion, and that the many mistakes in the method of living, for instance irritating diet, wrong treatment of the skin, medicines internal or used in rissing the vagina, render the elimination of morbid matter an endless task. The fevers, irregular and excessive menses, pains in the render the elimination of morbid matter an endless task. The fevers, irregular and excessive menses, pains in the depths of the pelvis and all parts of the abdomen and the back, burning in the vagina, bladder, and intestines, dyspepsia, constituation, cold feet, etc., are nothing else but necessary consequences which disappear by themselves as soon as the real cause—impurities of the blood—is removed. The natural method of healing lays the principal stress upon the purification of blood and formula.

The simple treatments of the water cure are able to alleviate the sometimes almost unbearable fiching in the sexual organs and anus, making the condition of the patients more endurable and effecting by a purification of the system a complete regeneration in the course of from three to four months. One of the local treatments is sitting in cold water from three to ten minutes, five times daily. This helpful application makes the rinsing of the vagina unnecessary. As to care of the skin there should be weekly three sheet packs around the abdomen (short bandage,) three washings of the chest and one of the whole body, fresh air, sunshine and atrictly non-irritating diet. By this method the water and diet cure will render the diseased condition what it should be according to the laws of nature—a purification, a self-healing act of the body, which, by ridding itself of a mass of poison, also gains full health and vigor.

Too much reliance must not be placed on injections, but if injections are used, the best way is to take one before retiring, using bot water, in a vaginal syringe, followed by a dash of cold water, and then inserting a small sponge soaked in glycerine, washing out with tepid water in the morning. Add a few drops of euglyptus oil to the water.

Meantime adopt a hygienic diet. Try the no-breakfast

plan. Eat little or no meat, no fermented bread and plan. Eat little or no meat, no fermented bread and absolutely avoid coffee, beer, spirits, gravies, animal fat, ples, pastry, rich cakes and candy. Breathing is highly important. The best thing would be to stay for a few months at a good sanatorium, where attention is paid to diet, but this most people find impracticable. The next best thing is to secure the services of a skilled hyperexis advisor. Some results think the anything is to secure the services of a skilled hygienic adviser. Some people think that anybody can easily cure themselves by the drugless method, whereas really it requires far more experience and skill to cure—or rather to aid nature in curing—by this method, than to merely write out a prescription, for some remedy copied out of a medical encyclopedia.

Remember this however. The most important thing edy copied out of a medical encyclopedia.

Remember this, however. The most important thing of all in such cases is to be found in this advice: Keep off your feet as much as possible. In this ailment, as in gonorrhea of the male sex, it is absolutely fuelle to expect to effect a cure so long as the patients are most of the time on their feet, especially when doing such work as lifting and carrying weights. At whatever sacrifice, see that you spend as much of your time as possible in a recumbent position.

Once more, avoid tonics of every kind, whether in the shape of alcoholic liquors, patent medicines or drugs the shape of alcoholic liquors, patent medicines or drugs "prescribed by a physician," or otherwise. They may apparently help you for a time, but there will come the inevitable reaction.

This climate is as good as any, providing a person lives right. It is true, however, that there is virtue in the tonic properties of cold, as has been discovered by the medical fraternity, who now send consumptives to such cold winter climates as Switzerland and Colorado. In addition to impurities in the blood due to erroneous diet a leading cause of leucorrhea is found in sexual errors. There is a widespread belief among the general public that the mere speaking of the marriage ceremony over a man and a woman absolve them from any necesity of placing restrictions upon their sexual passions. This is a gross error, which leads to a vart amount of sickness, suffering and family disagreements. As between polygamy and the abuse of married women. amount of sickness, suffering and family disagreements. As between polygamy and the abuse of married women by sensual human animals, who happen to be mated to them, there need not be a moment's hesitation, from a hygienic point of view—and perhaps from-some other points of view, also. Yet a great hubbub is raised in regard to polygamy, which, in this country, affects only a very few, whereas the other question, which affects a whole nation, is studiously ignored.

What the correspondent says about the overbu What the correspondent says about the overburdened American woman is quite true. In Europe, a family keeps a general servant—in oriental countries half a dozen of them—where in an American family, with a similar income, the woman has to do all the housework herself. Americans are apt to pity the poor underpaid people of Europe, but much of that pity is thrown away. This accounts for the fact that American representations are said in life and its largely rethrown away. This accounts for the fact that American women break down so early in life, and is largely responsible for the so-called "female troubles." Some women like cooking, and don't object to that part of their work, but how many do not groan under the dismal drudgery of washing dishes, three times a day? Much of this unnecessary work might be greatly lessened by the adoption of a similar dietary, involving less cooking. This would be a good thing, not only trom the household point of view, but because it improve the health of that household, for cooking food is goolling food. A large proportion of the cooked food we eat is starvation food—deprived of the natural satts—leading to a craving for alcohol and drugs. Raw eat is starvation food—deprived of the natural satis—leading to a craving for alcohol and drugs. Raw fruits and nuts are, as the editor has frequently said, the ideal food—for an ideal life. Few, however, can bring themselves to go this far. Without going to that extent, much may be done to reduce the drudgery of cooking, by adopting a few simple dishes, that need little culinary labor. To begin with, the breakfast may cooking, by adopting a few simple dishes, that need little cultinary labor. To begin with, the breakfast may te dropped out altogther, with great benefit to the health. Then, as 99 per cent. of the American men are away from home at the noon hour, the wife can prepare a very simple yet nourishing meal for herself and her children, such, for instance, as a couple of soft-boiled eggs, a piece of toast, a little stewed fruit and a cup of cereal coffee. That would leave only one regular meal, to be zerved in the evening, when the head of the house comes home from his mental or physical labor. Nor need that meal involve a vast amount of cook, if a little discrimination is used. As to the vegetarian dietary, as it is usually adopted, so far as the emancipation of women is concerned it is a step back-ward rather than forward, for these vegetarian meals emancipation of women is concerned it is a step back-ward rather than forward, for these vegetarian meals involve vastly more labor than is required to throw a few eggs or a beefsteak and potatoes into a frying pan and heat a cup of coffee.

The natural plan would, of course, be for a number of families to combine—at least, for the heavy, dirty work of the kitchen having a common dining-room and kitchen. Does it not seem absurd, in this age of labor saving, that perhaps sixty people, belonging to fifty households, should two or three times a day go through the labor of making fires, overheating the house in summer, cooking food, setting dishes on the table and washing dishes and pans, when the same labor might be done—and perhaps better done—by five well-paid experts? This plan was tried some time ago in a country town of Riverside county, but a snag was soon struck in the help question. That, indeed, is the rock upon which our social fabric seems always to split, in America. It is certainly an important question. However, as stated, we may to some extent solve it by adopting a greater simplicity in our lives. By persuading ourselves, that luxuries are necessities we become slaves. Perhaps, since our are has indorsed Wagner's "Simple Life," we reform in this direction. Hasten the demancipation of the black slaves. Let emancipation of the white woman.

Big Muscles—Bad Health.

THE sudden death is announced in New York of William Blaikie, who was widely known as an advocate and practical exponent of systematic muscular exercise. He made a specialty of lifting heavy weights and taking hong-distance walks, at a high speed. Mr. Blaikie was 61 years of age when he died—not at all an advanced age, if his system of training was correct. It was, however, not correct. This is another evidence of the fact, well move to intelligent hygienists, that there is a vast difference between health and strength. In fact, the laying on of disproportionately big muscles is destructive of health. You will find that few remarkably strong men sitsin an old age—that is to say men who have artificially developed great strength. Few of the winning crows in university boat races ever live to be grand-pathers.

Don't overdo the physical culture business. Too much

MRS. R. F. writes as follows:

"Am a newcomer here, and take a great interest in your hygiene talks. Will you publish what zwielsck is, where can it be bought, or how made? Is it a head to be constantly used? If not, what other bread to you recommend, and where can it be bought?"

The name of zwieback explains what it is. Zwieback is a corruption of the German "zweimal gebacken (twice laked) It is a species of toast, baked all through. It may be purchased at any first-class bakery, and at some groomy stores. The bread is first steamed, and then haked in a hot oven. This zwieback is made from white femented bread. hat the editor is in some respects whom had the editor is in some respects whom had a communication fails—few and far between.

A few days ago there was received a communication fam one George E. Brown, of Los Angeles, containing about a thousand words. It is only necessary to give a small sample of Mr. Brown's ideas—or rather lack of feas. After stating: "I am a very constant reader of feast after stating: "I am a very constant reader of feast after stating: they bear the proportion of the bear the proportion of the state of the proportion of the Mas. After stating: "I am a very constant reader of year el'opings and commenta—he might have said "commants and clippings," for they bear the proportion of fiont four to one—he is kind enough to admit that he believes "as a rule your advice will do more good than larm." He then finds fault with an article appearing in the discussion of the table that in the first place should not have been discussed, br should not have been made so conspicuous." In this Mr. Brown undoubtedly refers to an article on askal emissions, in which advice was given to a youth, askalent in the High School, on a subject whose importance to young men can scarcely be overestimated. Mr. Brown probably belongs to the class of those peculiar people who would carefully cover up a pile of corruption, may pretend that it does not exist, or who would refrain from giving a son, approaching the age of puberty, plain, faitherly advice in regard to the sexual functions, leaving him to drift into the hands of those mercenary harples who prey upon the fears and ignorance of the young, and frequently drive them to the insane asylum or a suicide's grave. Mr. Brown also, perhaps, belongs to the class of those unclean-minded prudes who are shocked at the idea of calling a bull or a cock my its right name, and who think that everything pertaining to the sexual functions should be ignored, or left to the lewd. Such people are active recruiting agents for the advertising specialists. The next remark in which this peculiar person indalges is to quote where the editor said: "Remember that all drugs are not only useless, but dangerous," etc.
Then, listen to this:
"And then, a few lines farther down on the page, you quote from an exchange, with apparent approval, something about 'The Useful Lemon.' 'It will relieve billous headache,' give beauty and clearness to the skin,' 'allay irritation caused by bites of insects,' an excellent tooth wash, it removes tartar and sweetens the breath,' and shally 'If taken in hot water on awakening in the morning, it is an excellent liver corrective, and for stout, women is better than any anti-fat medicinal that was ever invented.' Local commercial considerations may have made you lenient toward this drug, besides it is a dample and innocent substance entirely devoid of poisonous properties. You ought to be careful, however, how you indorse or seem to indorse the erroneous and dangerous drug superstition—to quote you in the article on 'advertising ethics,' same page,"

There, now, what do you think of that, intelligent reader? This man actually classes lemon juice as a drug! Surely, after that, it would be waste of time and space—not to speak of patience—to devote any more attention to such an extraordinary freak of nature.

When we find people running around loose in Los Angeles, who seriously advance such extraordinary ideas as this, can we be surprised that the town is filled with pretenders, frauds and fakes, who promise impossible things in the way of physical and mental treatments, and reap a big crop of dollars, from fools.

Notwithstanding Mr. Brown's sapient remarks, the ed-

Notwiths anding Air. Brown's sapient remarks, the cu-itor will continue to advocate the use of lemon juice, or pomelo juice, or orange juice, in place of drugs. Espe-cially is the pomelo of the greatest value, as a substi-tute for quinine, when used as the editor has suggested tute for quinine, when used as the editor has suggested—cutting up an entire pomelo, with the skin, pouring thereon a quart of boiling water, taking a fumblerful three or four times a day. This, in accompaniment with a light, sensible diet, and full breathing of air, will cure malaria, give you a good appetite, and leave no bad after effects, as quinine always does. Don't overlook this valuable advice, even if in following it you should happen to be alding the citrus-fruit industry of Southern California. Which would really be too bad, wouldn't it, Mr. Brown?

A CORRESPONDENT asks what the editor thinks of unfermented grape juice, and whether it is preferable

Grape juice, or apple juice, or the juice of any other fruit, is a most excellent thing, as anyone who has carefully read these columns should know. The editor believes, however, that it is best to take such juice by eating the fresh fruit, instead of drinking the extract. Fruit juice, like milk, is a food, not a drink. Therefore, if taken at all, it should be sipped very slowly, and chewed, as it were—thoroughly mixed with the saliva before it is swallowed. Otherwise it will cause digestive troubles.

There are several brands of grape juice on the market, these contain preservatives, and are therefore not to be recommended. Others are guaranteed to be free of preservatives. The sanatorium at St. Helena has been experimenting with the putting up of unfermented apple juice—unfermented cider—with what success the editor is not yel aware. is not yet aware.

On retiring, I always try to go to sleep on my side, but I believe once I turn on my back I remain so. Do you know of any preventive, or perhaps one of your readers may know if such could be prevented?"

Sleeping on the back is unhygienic, specially for men

Sleeping on the back is unhygienic, specially for who suffer from nocturnal emissions. As you may easily see by watching the animals, the natural method of sleepsee by watching the animals, the natural method of sleep-ing is on the stomach. This position greatly aids the di-gestive process. Next to that it is best to lie on the right side. Lying on the left side is almost as bad for the above reason as lying on the back. It is best, how-ever, to occasionally change and turn over for a short time on the other side or on the back. There are contrivances to prevent a person from sleeping on the back, but the editor does not know where they may be had.

You may easily contrive something yourself.

An article on the subject of mouth breathing and snoring has been turned in by the editor.

fing, and the trail he followed led him up to the broiler. What I am desirous of calling your attention to is this, that our cold-storage houses are massed with poultry from the Western States and from other States, and prom the Western States and from other States, and that in due time this poultry becomes diseased flesh, and people who eat it are very apt to suffer, as did my friend, from ptomaine. In a rapidly-growing city like this, where there is so large a transient population, particularly at our hotels, one understands the difficulty in procuring local poultry. So the hotels are obliged to rely upon the cold-storage houses."

One cannot be too careful about the origin of the food that one eats, and the liquid one drinks, whether it is poultry that has been frozen with the entrails, or salads and vegetables that have been irrigated with crude sewage, or drinking water that has been waded in by cattle.

More About Hernia.

In reply to a correspondent, a suggestion was made last week in regard to the hygienic treatment of hernia. The following communication regarding hernia has been received from a Los Angeles correspondent, who says the information cost him $600. The editor publishes it without necessarily indorsing the recommendation in regard to surgical operations. The editor freely admits that, in some exceptional cases of this and other ailments, a surgical operation is unavoidable, but he believes that nine times out of ten a surgical operation would be unnecessary if a natural mode of treatment were adopted:

"Twenty-five per cent, of civilized people in the world now have or have had hernia. This is why it is a subject interesting to so many of your readers.

"Children that are born too soon are more apt to have hernia than others. The weakest spot in man is the abdominal region, and the greatest strain is put upon that part. Apparently the Almighty made a mistake in not having man's ribs lower down to protect and relieve the

having man's ribs lower down to protect and relieve the great strain.

"The doctors who advertise to cure hernia by injecting fluid are all fakes. The fluid that is injected will irritate and produce a swelling that will temporarily close the opening long enough so that they can collect their money. All fluids that are injected poison the system and make hernia that much harder to cure.

"The best method of curing hernia in infants is by the surgeon's knife. The wound is slight and easily healed in children.

"Seventy-five per cent, of the cases of hernia can be cured by wearing a suitable adjusted truss, night and day. If just once the intestines are allowed to protrude any growth of the inner layer of muscles are broken apart and one must commence over again.

"For a person that is strong, young and has not the elightest heart trouble and is willing to lay in the hos-pital six weeks, the proper surgical operation will cure

The reason why only 45 per cent, of surgical operations have been successful is because old operations were counted where cat gut was used to draw the opening together, and the same rotted or was absorbed before the opening could grow together. The best surgeons now use silk thread and an aluminum plate on the outside to hold everything firmly in place. A number of people have died in Los Angeles from operations who had heart trouble, and died while taking the anesthetic.

"If one has the will be can cure himself with proper trusces or surgical appliances. But it requires courage to wear the same night and day for from three to nine

A RECENT dispatch from Georgia, published in The Times, told how a five-year-old boy, who had been shot in the head, was placed in a coffin as dead, but revived, and the physicians now say he will recover. Yet, short-sighted physicians continue to have the as-ce to declare that such things never happen.

O. S. WHITMORE of Pasadena, 68 years of age, says of he is slowly recovering from gastritis, from which he has suffered for many years, by simply living on a sensible diet, without the use of drugs, according to the suggestions put forth from time to time in these columns. Mr. Whitmore sends the following statement in regard to his diet:

"Drink plenty of pure, cold water. One tablespoon. S. WHITMORE of Pasadena, 68 years of age, says with water they are soaked in; should be fairly covered. Bake one hour. Prunes should be well looked over and thoroughly washed before putting to soak."

The editor regards the above as being far from an ideal dietary. The time between the first and second meal is too short. Also, the mixture of milk and meat at the same meal is decidedly faulty. Not to consume milk and meat at the same time is one of the leading laws of Moses, and as the editor has previously observed, it is a sensible law, founded on science. The menu might also, in the opinion of the eddior, be improved by the introduction of a little more oil or fat. Like most of the vegetarian or semi-vegitarian dictaries. proved by the introduction of a little more oil or fat. Like most of the vegetarian or semi-vegitarian dictaries, this menu contains a surplus of sweets and starches. The starches are converted into sugar before they are digested, so that it practically makes far too much sugar, which is apt to turn acid in the stomach, and cause gastritis and other troubles. The correspondent would probably improve much more rapidly if he would adopt a few dietetic changes along these lines.

Physician, Heal Thyself.

I T is an astonishing thing to most people, but is easily explained as hypnotism—or magnetism—how some people manage to acquire an extraordinary influence over others, forcing them to do objectionable things. For instance, there is Dowie, who has recently advanced himstance, there is Dowie, who has recently advanced him-self a peg or two toward being God Almighty, and now has himself pictured every month in his "Leaves of Heal-ing" in a sort of opera-bouffé coatume. He is a funny little man, but his followers don't know it. They take him quite seriously, and regularly put up 10 per cent. of their incomes. Quite recently, according to a dispatch from Illinois, Dowie showed his power over fooltsh peo-ple in a remarkable way. There was a young lawyer, with a fine oractice, who had recently married a pretty and attractive wife. Dowie ordered him to leave his wife and practice and go off to Central Africa. The dis-patch adds that the young man was sorrowfully packing patch adds that the young man was sorrowfully packing up for the trip.

Month after month, in his magazine, Dowie boasts of the wonderful cures effected through him and "his leaders," which he claims—as the Christian Scientists claim for their cures—constitute a form of "divine healing," Now, here is a dispatch received a few days ago from Chicago, and published in The Times:

"Illness has become epidemic among the residents of Chicago, and published in The Times:

"Illness has become epidemic among the residents of Zion City, 'Prophet' John Alexander himself heading the list of sick. The general overseer is suffering from chronic stomach trouble. Miss Jane Dowie is ill with nervous prostration at Caristern. Dowie's chief of police and bodyguard has pleurisy and may die, and Mrs. Speicher, wife of Overseer Speicher, is reported seriously ill. Throughout the entire town an epidemic has spread, and one-fifth of the inhabitants are suffering from a disease which closely resembles ia grippe."

The Question of Diet.

The Question of Diet.

It is actohishing how much ignorance there is, even laws of hygiene. Someone has said that poor humanity shuffles through life on three crutches, giving his soul into the charge of a priest, his body to a physician, and his worldly possessions to a lawyer. Certainly, it is strange that a shrewd business man should be willing to remain entirely ignorant in regard to facts that so closely affect his life and happiness.

Of late, there has been a notable revival of interest in physical culture. This is good in a way. It is certainly far better than the drug and patent medicine habits. Even physical culture may, however, be overin physical culture. This is good in a way. It is certainly far better than the drug and patent medicine habits. Even physical culture may, however, be overdone. Most of those who teach it lose sight of the fact that it is health, rather than the mere strength of muscle, that we should aim at. Many of the most noted athletes have died young, from heart disease, or something radically wrong in their mode of life.

The trouble is that most people go to extremes. Take, for instance, the important subject of diet. Some people gorge three times a day, eating all kinds of food, good, bad and indifferent, washing it down with various kinds of stimulating beverages, while giving no thought to how it will affect them. Others think that by merely leaving out flesh food from their dietary they are at liberty to eat and drink anything they choose, and as much as they choose, while yet others, who adopt a wholesome and abstemious dietary, are always worrying about what they eat and drink, and what effect it will have upon them, after it has been swallowed.

All these are wrong. It is undoubtedly a good thing to avoid flesh food, as much as possible, especially in this mild climate, but it is far better to occasionally take a little meat than to be chewing all the time at various cereal and other preparations, and then sitting down to think how the food is going to work after it reaches the stomach. Such a course tends inevitably they can got back to their old jobs. One of them, the state watchman, pretends to have actual knowledge of the spooky happenings at the factory, and the other men corroborate him in several particulars.

All agree that the troubles of the establishment began at one of the cupolas, where old iron was melted. The state was broken up in a half-open shed to make it easier to handle, and was piled into the big furnace from shore by great buckets moved by automatic hoists.

One cold morning the boys engaged in packing the backets found the frozen bodies of two cats which had teen crushed under the heavy metal. Just for mischief, had they they are the carcasses into the buckets along with menths of suffering, he also died.

The watchman who came on at 6 o'clock for his night city made his rounds and found everything as usual until about midnight, when just as he was winding up his detection clock in the office, a bright light and a noise in the chief workshop hurried him into that department. The electric lights were not on, he found, but the whole place was illuminated by an intense gleam from the mouth of the scrap cupola. What caused him most supplies was the fact that the power had been turned on at the engine, and that every machine was running at the engine, and that every machine was running at the engine, and that every machine was running at

Again the man found the machines running and the hig som all lighted up, and heard Towser having a battle total near the cupola. As he reached the spot where he specied to witness a dog and cat battle, he was surprised a sand the territor lying on his side parting its life out. to find the terrier lying on its side panting its life e hext day he waited upon the manager and told him whole story, offering Towser's body to substantiate account of what had happened the night previous. To the scientific mind of the manager it appeared more sty that the nerves of the watchman were badly out of order than that anything supernatural was interested in his iron works, and he advised him to take charge of the engine for a week or two while the engineer took his place.

A week later, when the men reached the shop in the secring, the boiler was found cold and the fire out. The temporary watchman was lying near the big smelter, his body convulsed and drawn up in a heap, quite dead. "Epilepsy," the doctor said, "a typical case," but the relief man, noticed that the steam had been turned on and that every machine was in gear for running.

Another watchman was engaged, and all went well for a week. At the end of that time the man who opened for a week. At the end of that time the man who opened the doors in the morning found every machine in the place running, some dry wheels smoking, others creak-ing from want of oil and attention, and a couple of bro-ken belts flapping about their spindles. Evidently every-thing had been working all alone for several hours.

Running to turn off the power, he met the watchman, face was pale and haggard, and who rudely pushed by without making any reply to his questions walked out of the yard, never to appear there again

The former watchman was then put back at his old job at an increased rate of wages. On the same night of the week, a week later, the buildings were discovered to be on fire near the big cupola.

The watchman gave the alarm and the men assembled to find the main machine-room wrapped in flames. It was impossible to enter it, but the men could hear the thud of the heavy stamps, the chucking of the power lathes, and the whirling of the wheels. Everything was running at full speed, and so continued until the roof fell in, and all was in ruins.

Since then some ill-fortune appears to hang about the site. Three times preparations have been made to re-habilitate the works. Men have actually been engaged for the rebuilding, but their services have not really been required.

All kinds of excuses were made. Finances could not be set right, there were dissensions in the directorate, political affairs intervened—there has always been something in the way of setting things going again. The former superintendent says:

MUSINGS OF A LONESOME MICHIGAN WOMAN IN THE CITY OF SAN DIEGO.

It is not so pleasant as I imagined it was going to be, this living all alone among a lot of strangers. I thought when I came to this wonderful city by the Silver Gate, and set up my hermitage, that I never, never should thre of the intense sense of relief from hearing ocopie talk. I had lived all my life—I don't care to tell you how many decades in the pact it began—in a little city which now numbers nearly 5000; have seen it grow to its present dimension and numbers from a plant, house on an Indimension and numbers, from a plank house on an In-dian prairie corn field. At all hours of the day and night you are expected to be at home to entertain company, listen to neighborhood gossip, contribute to all calls of charity, help in cases of births, deaths, weddings or surprise parties, and give of your means toward the support of church and society. I tired of it all. I had become, as it were, a cort of faviure, a light provide the contribution of the contr and give of your means toward the support of church and society. I tired of it all. I had become, as it were, a sort of fixture, a landmark, a hitching post. I had got into a rut. I was the only one of all my old friends who dared to get out. I had just money enough to buy a ticket to California. I said: "I will go," What would I do after I got there? "My little monthly allowance will support me there easier than it will here," I said, "for there I will not have to buy fuel, nor give, give, 10 cents here, and a quarter there, and a dollar somewhere else, and buy soap of Mrs. Johnson because she is a poor widow with four little boys to support, and patronize the Larkin Clubs, and go on the annual picnic to the Lake, and be sure and attend the Spiritualists' camp meeting, whether I want to or not, and join half a dozen clubs, where more money is always needed—and so it goes. You know what I mean, if I have got things rather mixed. I shall go to California, this fall, and escape a lot." "What! and leave everything?" "Yes, leave it all. Charley will take care of my house, and I dozen clubs, where more money is always needed—and so it goes. You know what I mean, if I have got things rather mixed. I shall go to California, this fall, and escape a lot." "What! and leave everything?" "Yes, leave it all. Charley will take care of my house, and I will pack my trunk and fly." So I did. Oh! It was heavenly, and I am not tired of the life here yet, nor do I think I ever shall be. Only—once in a while, when out in the crowds on these busy streets, or strolling along the lovely silver strand, or watching the sunset from the end of the wharf, or taking a long ride through the residence streets of the outskirts, I would really love to see a real old Michigan pilgrim, like myself. I do not sigh for those bygone years of neighborhood events, but would delight in an hour or two of home gossip. I think even Mrs. Johnson and her four little boys might prove interesting topics, or the success of the H. R. Club might he very earnestly inquired into, Never, never would I dare whisper a thing of this so that it might get back to that dear old corner. They would crow with delight. "I told you so! I knew you would get homesick!" Thanks! I am not a bit homesick. Oh! this life of perfect freedom! I get up land lie down when I please. Loaf around in a wrapper, or go out dressed up as occasion requires, or the mood takes me. My expenses are less than they were at home, although here I pay rent, but the fuel I burned there makes me the gainer here. When I go to a lecture, it is free, though a dime put in the little box is an item that is freely given, the more so because it is not demanded, but take it all around, a single, woman placed in my circumstances, with a small and assured income, who lives on that income back East by practising the refrictest economy, can, in this delightful land pay her rent, and live otherwise far easier and happier and with less of worry. Indeed here is the very place to cast aside care and spend the last of your 100 years in peace and quiet, surrounded by fruits and flowers, in sigh

Which soon the dark shall blight.
The gold of beautiful, sad dreams! . . . Dear one Look to the morning light!

Look where the light shall first illume the skies When the black shades depart. God made the morning in your dreaming eyes— A deathless morn, sweetheart!

The young world calls you, where no spirit grieves— In temples reared to Art Your face shall shine when he that loves you leaves

Yet this—for all the shadows of the past,
